RADIANT LIVING

A SEQUESTERED RETREAT

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Methodist Pastor of Deals Island, Md.

There is a reason why Jesus advises us, when we pray, to enter into the closet and to be sure to shut the door. We can not lift our thoughts very high while our attention is being distracted by the riotous noises of the world.

We need to get into some closed door closet of quietness—a sequestered retreat—where we can shut the door and close our eyes to shut out even the physical environment of the closet itself, and then we can lift our thoughts Godward and feel ourselves being lifted heavenward.

When shut in with God there is no height to which we may not ascend!

An elevator is an illustration of the purpose of a prayer closet. When you enter into one of these upon the ground floor of a tall building in a large city, and the doors clang together and the current is turned on, to what height you are shut up! At last the upward flight stops. The door opens and you step out into a little corridor.

You pass through another door and emerge upon the roof of the building and there you are, surrounded by growing flowers of the roof garden, far above the noise nad confusion and riot of the busy city, out in the pure air, the warm sunshine, and the glorious view!

Thus has many a humble prayer closet proven itself to be an elevator that has lifted the praying soul above the distractions and discords of life and up into that higher realm that seems to be the very throne of God Himself!

Ship SOS Signals Now Aided By Radio's New Auto-Alarm

By J. F. Witkowski, Principal
School of Radio, International Correspondence Schools

In the above illustration is shown how the radio auto-alarm might function. The ship in the distance is in trouble and sends the SOS distress signal. It is assumed that the radio operator on the nearer ship is not listening at the moment, however, the shore station picks up the signal and resends it after sounding the auto-alarm which brings to attention the radio operator on the inbound vessel.

EVERY effort is being made to make radio foolproof. Progress is especially evident in the radio rooms of ships that sail the oceans.

An outstanding example of recent development in radio is that of "auto-alarm," an improvement installed on ships having only one radio operator. This device automatically sounds an alarm when a distress message comes in on the receiving set.

The SOS or distress signal of the sea is well known. It means "Come and help us." The familiar tone of "dit-dit-dit — dah-dah-dah — dit-dit-dit" of the International Morse code can be readily recognized by any radio operator who is at his listening post.

But suppose the operator is not listening, what then? In the past the signal may have gone unnoticed at stations where continuous watch was not kept. Today the automatic alarm announces a distress message just as the bell on the house telephone announces an incoming call.

The SOS signal of today is preceded by the automatic alarm signal which operates a bell or other indicator at every station equipped to receive the distress message. The operator is thus called to "listen-in" and receive the details of the message.

Where the distress signal is weak because of distance or low power, it may be relayed, or repeated, by a more powerful transmitter, on shore or ship. In this way the automatic alarm is sounded on any ship that might be near the disaster, but has not responded to the weak signals of the ship in distress.

HELP KIDNEYS
To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.
You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!
