RADIANT LIVING

The Call Of The Sea

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Methodist Pastor of Deals Island, Md.

A great many years ago a lad came down daily to the old battered wharves of one of the ancient seaports of Italy. There he used to perch himself upon some weather-beaten piles and look out across the blue waters of the harbor, teeming with its shipping and then gaze beyond upon the vast sea which streached away toward the distant horizon.

Why lay beyond that horizon? Ah, no one knew! No one had dared to venture beyond that Skyline! But there must be something beyond! There must be some distant strange strange land, filled whit fascinating venture, unknown experiences and perhaps fabulous wealth!

Such was the call of the sea to that young lad.

It was a call that he could not resist, and many years later he answered that call and boldly sailed out beyond the horizon and discovered a new world which we today call America.

There comes to every young person today the call of another sea, the sea of life. Life calls ont to adventure, to accomplishment, to fame. Many are the careers that are open to the youth of today. Nor are careers limited to youth. Men and women who have attained years can yet attain careers.

Three outstanding achievements in literature of the past were not brought into existence until after their authors had attained considerable years. The poet Milton was already sixty years old before he began to compose his "Paradise Lost." And there was that fascinating book, "Robinson Crusoe." Its author Daniel Defoe was fifty-eight when he wrote it. And that other outstanding book which has changed the thinking of men, "Origin of the Species," was not written until after its author, Darwin, had passed his fortieth birthday by several years.

It is never too late to sail should you feel the call of the sea!

BELL SYSTEM EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

The Bell System Plan for sickness, accident and death benefits and pensions went into effect January 1, 1913, and thereby established for employees a substantial degree of assurance and assistance in meeting these exigencies. In announcing the plan to employees, Theodore N. Vail, then president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, stated:

"The intent and purpose of the employer in establishing a plan of benefits is to give tangible expression to the reciprocity which means faithful and loyal service on the part of the employee, with protection from all the ordinary misfortunes to which he is liable; reciprocity which means mutual regard for one another's interest and welfare.

"This is justice, and without justice and sympathetic interest, we cannot hope to do a thoroughly good piece of work."

These sound principles have since prevailed and in this anniversary year it is interesting to recall the point of view of the plan's creators during the period of study that led to its adoption. These viewpoints, naturally, had their origin in the feeling of responsibility for the protection of the service. Those charged with the duty of investigation and recommendation regarding the plan were considering a complex business that rendered an essential public service which by its very nature must be a continuing enterprise—a business that, for its adequate functioning, required a loyal organization having sustained vitality. To insure such an organization it was necessary to recognize and make reasonable provision for those hazards of life which interrupt earning power and bring about unexpected and, sometimes, heavy burdens. It was also necessary to meet the problem of aging of personnel, through an appropriate retirement plan, so as to maintain the vitality of management and organization and avoid the result of continuing on active duty, long-service employees whose efficiency had become impaired.

Twenty-five years' experience in this comprehensive and uniform program of employee benefits has fully demonstrated its value to employees and to the company. It is interesting to note that these provisions were made before such practices were generally recognized and, of course, long before recent trends in social security, as now provided through legislation.

The plan, as adopted and as since amended from time to time, is provided by the company without direct or indirect cost to employees. It applies to all alike who meet reasonable eligibility requirements, on the basis of wages and service. In meeting this objective, fundamental security, so essential in any sound continuing plan, has been maintained and the payments provided are appropriate and proper for the purposes intended. In view of these essential elements, the Bell System plan provides liberal and reasonable protection against many uncertainties of life which interrupt or terminate earning capacity. This plan is advantageous to employees, consistent with sound business principles, and in accord with social thought as applied to the kind of protection for which the payments are intended.

Thomas W. Wright of Clarksburg, W. Va., who after thirty-five years of service in the Plant Department of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of W. Va., is enjoying well-earned and well-merited retirement from active business. Under the provisions of the Retirement Plan, he is now able to pursue hobbies or travel or rest as his fancy dictates.

THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibilty rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.

B. R. FELLOWS,
Funeral Director.
