RADIANT LIVING
Just An Old Sea Chest
By Rev. C. M. Griffith
Methodist Pastor of Deals Island, Md.

One day there was washed ashore an old sea chest. There it lay in the sunlight day after day upon the beach...

Many years later in digging for clams a man's shovel struck something. The digger's curiosity was aroused. He dug away the sand to see what his shovel had struck and discovered a chest...

It was just an old sea chest, but what a wealth it contained! One day several centuries ago, a monk found on a shelf in his monastery an old book. He took it down and blew off the dust that had accumulated upon it...

But that discovery became the turning point in the career of the Christian Church. It became the turning point in the history of Europe. The discovery of the old dust covered book was the beginning of the Reformation.

It was just an old book, but what a wealth it contained! Perhaps a copy of that old Book lies around your house somewhere. Perhaps too, it is covered with the dust of non-use.

Why not discover the wealth that lies within it—a wealth that will bring joy and happiness into your life!

Why not discover the wealth that lies within it—a wealth that will bring joy and happiness into your life!

WINDMILLS TO SUPPLY POWER ON DESERT LINK OF TRANSCONTINENTAL 'PHONE LINE

"Booster Current" Obtained From Air On Oklahoma-California Section

Windmills will supply power for transmitting telephone conversations over some sections of the recently completed "fourth transcontinental" telephone line where it crosses desert lands in the southwest. This first-known use of such machinery for this purpose was recently decided upon after the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City had made tests with an experimental windmill in New Jersey.

The windmills will drive generators which will charge batteries supplying current to the vacuum tube amplifiers or repeaters stationed at intervals along the line between Oklahoma City and Whitewater, Calif., to "boost" human voices on their way. Ordinary power lines not being available in certain sections of the desert country, it was decided that a windmill at each repeater station would produce the power most satisfactory.

There is an almost constant breeze in these regions, but should a prolonged calm or any break in the wind-mill machinery interrupt this source of power, a gasoline-operated generator will automatically start when the battery reaches a certain stage of discharge. Should this equipment fail, another automatic device will sound an alarm to the nearest "inhabited" repeater station, sixty or seventy miles away.

On this important new voice highway to the Pacific, a new type of "carrier current" telephone channel, recently developed by the Bell Laboratories, will be used. This system, with a wide frequency range, makes it possible to carry on as many as sixteen conversations simultaneously over one pair of wires. In addition to telephone channels, the new route will also provide circuits for broadcasting networks, telegraph and teletypewriter service and picture transmission.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORY COVER DESIGN REPRODUCES PRIZE WINNING STATUE

The symbolic figure "The Genius of Electricity," which since 1916 has crowned the tower of the headquarters building of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at 195 Broadway, New York City, will become familiar to thousands and thousands of telephone users as the illustration of "The Spirit of Communication" on the covers of telephone directories throughout
