ONE FREQUENTLY HEARS the question asked, during the political campaign now going on in Kent County, "Why is Kent County's Tax Rate So High?" When this question is asked, nothing more is said leaving one to figure it out for themselves and if unfamiliar with county affairs to believe that it is caused by mismanagement by the present officials. Why Kent County's tax rate is so high is no secret. It is nothing to wonder about or to question. It is based on the levy for expenditures during the coming year as tabulated in this paper several years ago. Each expense is itemized and a study of this levy will show that a large portion of the expense is the payment of bonds and interest on Kent's million dollar road bond issue. This bond issue was not made by county officials but by popular vote of the people through a referendum submitted in 1933. For many years under the administration of the late Governor Albert C. Ritchie, the bonds and interest were provided for by the State road gasoline tax. Since Governor Ritchie's defeat four years ago Kent County's share of the gasoline tax and Federal funds has been diminished until this year it is little more than half of that received in previous years, and as the bonds and interest have to be paid it has been necessary for the County Commissioners to levy for it. It might be better for those who are asking "Why is Kent County's tax rate so high" to change their question to "Why has the State Roads Commission taken road funds which formerly came to Kent County and used them for Western Shore boulevards?" The answer to this question will be the answer to the other question. Kent County's tax rate could have been reduced somewhat this year if the present Board of County Commissioners had chosen to play politics with the tax rate by reducing it below the county expenses and carrying a portion of it on certificates to be paid plus six per cent interest next year in addition to next year's expenses. Our answer to "Why is Kent County's tax rate so high" is that it is an honest tax rate based on county expenses that have been created by the vote of the people of the county and the distribution of road funds by the present State Roads Commission.

Old Timer Comments On Politics

Dear Mr. Editor:
Corse there is plenty of campaigning going on by all of the candidates for office including all those running for sheriff but that ain't no news to write about but they say as how the boys around Chestertown are having a lot of activity with their signs and placards. The placards are being tacked up and torn down so fast that there is a question as to which of the takers up or the takers down is going to last the longest. They say that if you get up early enough you will see lots of pictures of O'Connor and Jackson looking at you from the poles, not poles, but as the sun gets hotter during the day they just fade away like snowballs but are there again that night. Nobody knows who puts them up or who tears them down. The companies who own the poles don't allow no placards to be tacked up but they have got strong competition cause they have to pay good wages to tear them down but the boys who put them up do it for the love of politics and it looks like a test between love and dollars and cents.
I also hear that there ain't going to be no big streamers across the streets of Chestertown cause the town rulers says no. Well I think these rulers are using their heads cause there ain't no candidate who is running for office that is as pretty as the looks of a pretty street, but it ain't none of my business so I ain't going to get all fussed up about it.
I see by the paper that there are only four candidates for Governor left and that Mr. Brune says he is going to run as an independent candidate and ain't going to stay in the primary mixup. I reckon, from what he has been saying, it will depend on who is nominated whether he will run as an independent which all goes to show that this political business is going to keep up till November.
Now when it comes back to this tussel going on here in the county, it looks like the regulars has got a right smart edge on the Independents from what I hear. Course it depends a lot on who is talking but the regulars started off with a good margin and seem to be gaining.

When I recollect back how primary politics used to be when I was a younger man and how people's friends depended on how who voted in the Democratic primaries, and how recently they dug a hole and put the hatchet in it so that people could be more friendly by not having a primary fight, I said that it looked like a good move. The leaders of these two groups are still holding together and form what is known as the Regular ticket. But seeing as how other people want to run for office, they got together and called themselves the Independents and joining in the politicking business. Course they have a got a right to run themselves for office and call themselves what ever they want but I cast my lot with the Regulars who according to what I think are working to the best interests of the whole Democratic party.
Now that the Independents have put another party in the field it looks like there is no end to who might form another party to make more of a mixup. I hear as how a third party has sprung up and might get more candidates on it before it is too late to file at midnight, August 22nd. If the Democrats are to be kept in control of the county which they have a right to due to the fact that represent a big majority of the people of the county, the voters have go to discourage all these efforts to split the party by bringing in new parties.
UNCLE JAKE.
