

ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

Starring in the gay comedy named after the song they made famous last season, Bob Hope and Shirley Ross will be seen as a scrappy husband and wife in "Thanks for the Memory," when it comes to the New Lyceum Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, December 7 and 8.

A Five-Star cast—Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullivan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas and Fay Bainter—was assembled to bring to the screen "The Shining Hour," dynamic, ultra modern story, coming on Monday and Tuesday, December 5 and 6 to the New Lyceum.

Besides giving her usual brilliant dramatic performance, Miss Crawford dances for the first time since "Dancing Lady," in the new production. She is teamed with Tony DeMarco, of the internationally-famous DeMarcos, in a spectacular number which includes five dances in one.

Dealing with the career of a famous cabaret dancer, played by Miss Crawford, the drama moves at a rapid pace through the night life of New York to the vastly different surroundings of a Kansas farm, where she is persuaded by Douglas to give up dancing and become his wife.

On the farm her life becomes complicated by those of the spinster sister, Miss Bainter, the younger brother, Young, and his wife Miss Sullivan. The dramatic climax occurs when the farm home burns to the ground, the resulting experiences bringing about a readjustment in the household.

Joseph Mankiewicz as producer and Frank Borzage as director are teamed for the third time in the making of the elaborate production. They previously worked together on "Three Comrades" and "Mannequin," the latter starring Miss Crawford and the former, Miss Sullivan.

"The Shining Hour" was adapted from the New York stage success by Keith Winter. It was prepared for the screen by Jane Murnin and Ogden Nash.

When Bob Hope and Shirley Ross sang "Thanks for the Memory" in "Big Broadcast of '38," they were extremely pleasant participants in the new tendency of popular music to get down out of the clouds and back to earth. Again in the new romantic comedy, "Thanks for the Memory," hundredth time that they're still in love. They say: 'Here we are, out of cigarettes, holding hands and yawning, look how late it gets; two sleepy people, by dawn's early light, and too much in love to say good night.' This gets down to cases, which makes the song more effective, and endows it with a stronger sentiment than if they cooed to each other about June, moon, spoon and all the rest."

Thus it is apparent that today's trends in songs have made minor dramatists out of song-writing teams, with Frank Loesser and Hoagy Carmichael leading the field because one of their songs, "Thanks for the Memory," was so much in the trend to inspire a picture!

The most recent Carmichael-Loesser hit was the novelty, "Small Fry," in the recent Bing Crosby-Fred MacMurray comedy, "Sing You Sinners." It has been tops in popularity for several months throughout the country.

THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverence and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibility rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with him in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.

THE GREAT WALTZ

Adapted from the METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER Picture by FRANCES BARBOUR

SYNOPSIS: In 1815, Johann Strauss meets Carla Donner, a famous soprano who humiliates him. He marries Poldi, but on meeting Carla again falls madly in love with her. Count Hohenfried brings Schani an order of exile, for in an uprising he had murdered a nobleman. Schani flees to America and meets a girl named Poldi. He must fight for her man changes her mind. Wildly she dresses.

NOW READ CHAPTER FIVE—BELOW

"They're driving him out. They're killing him."

"I'm dreaming."

"May I come in?"

"You must go. What will everyone think?"

"We'll have a glorious life of love together."

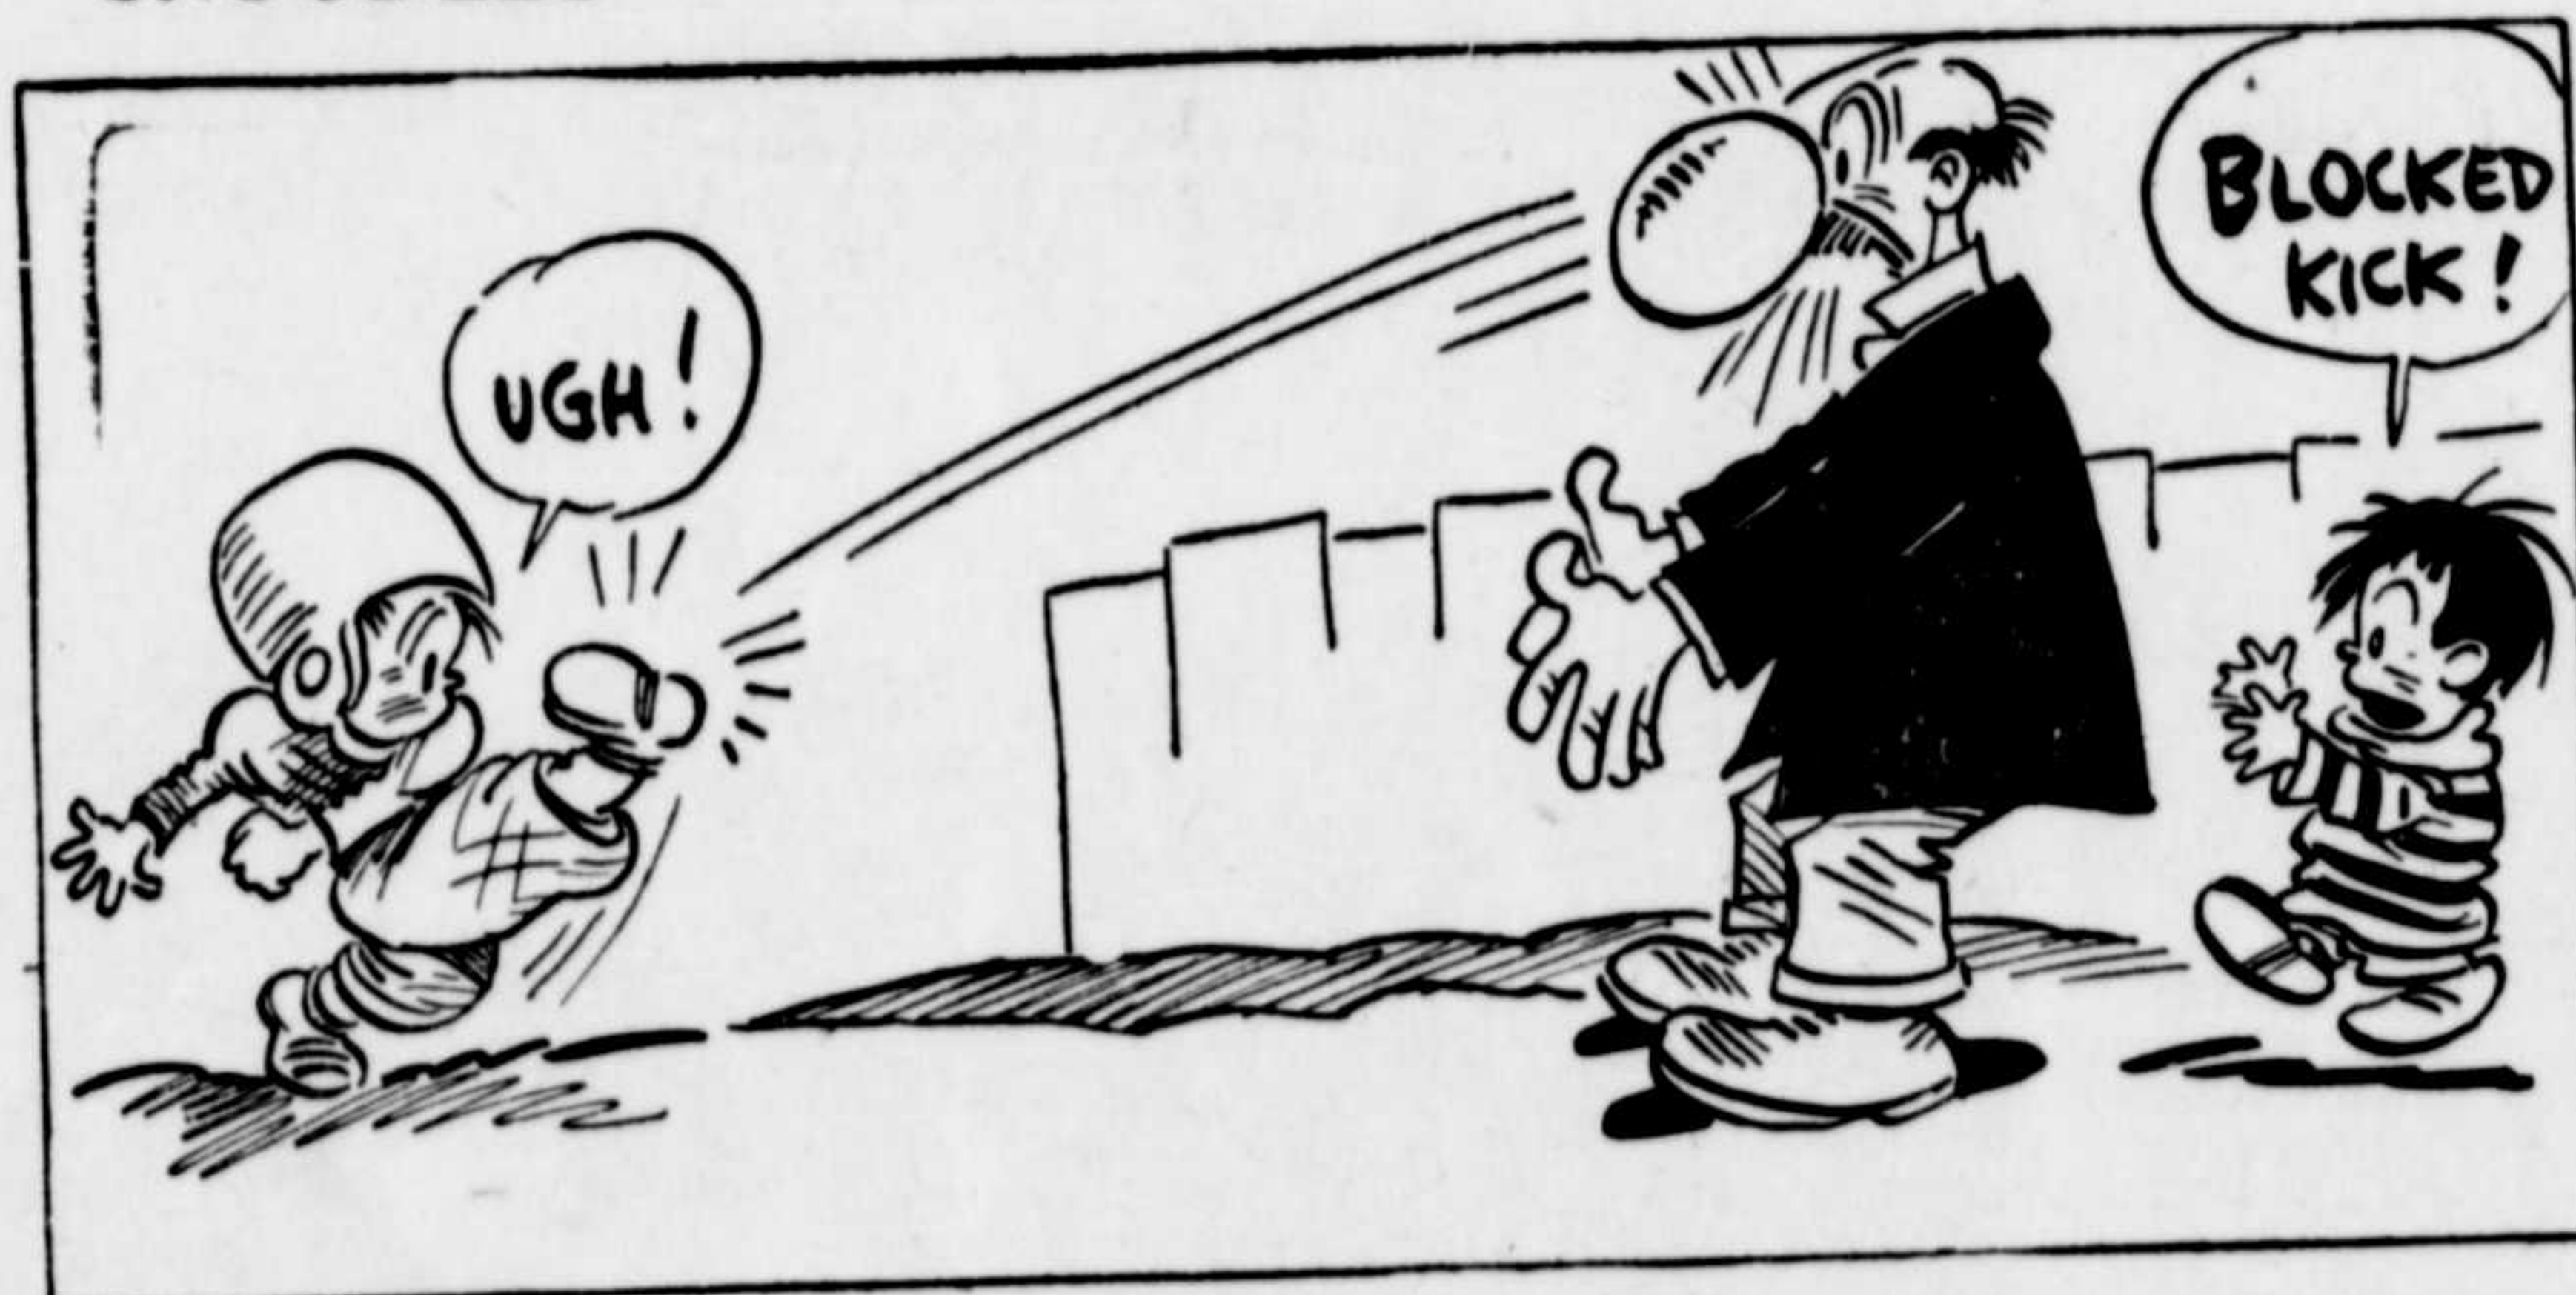

Descending the stairs with Schani, Poldi tells Mrs. Strauss and all their friends about their departure within forty-eight hours. Then she breaks down. No, she cries out, they are not going of their own accord, Schani is being sent away. He is being torn from his inspiration, the city that is his very life.

Schani is just about to leave for the travel office when the other door opens. It is Carla with astonishing news. Schani has been commissioned to write a score for the Imperial Opera Company—for her. The order of exile was merely a ruse on Hohenfried's part to get rid of him. Now Poldi recognizes their love.

Helpless and wracked by jealousy, Poldi decides not to attend the premiere of Schani's opera. She knows that all Vienna is whispering about his infatuation. She is sewing at home that night when Count Hohenfried visits her. His fierce plea that she must fight for her man changes her mind. Wildly she dresses.

Stealthily, Poldi slips a small revolver in her handbag and departs. At the theatre, Schani and Carla are concerned only with themselves. After the performance a substitute will take Carla's place and she will sail tonight on her world tour. And Schani has made plans to accompany her. Don't miss reading the concluding episode.
