Another proposed bond issue for the improvements of the high school facilities at Chestertown has gone down in uncertain defeat which means that the present conditions will prevail until some other move is made that may overcome the present objections. The vote on Tuesday was the third time that the voters of Kent County have voiced their protest against either the enlargement of the present building or the construction of a new building. In 1932 a referendum was voted on that would provide for the expenditure of not more than $100,000 for the enlargement of this school. The proposal was defeated by a majority of 3385 votes, there being 3874 votes cast against it and only 489 votes for. Every precinct in the county turned in a majority against it. Again in 1936 the voters of this county turned down a proposal of a program of enlargement of this school to cost not more than $100,000 was defeated by a majority of 784 votes, only the fourth district favoring it. At this same election, proposals for the enlargement of the Rock Hall, Galena and Chestertown colored high schools were defeated by large majorities. Then again last Tuesday the voters by a large majority defeated a proposal to build a new central high school at or near Chestertown and improve the colored high school. As a result of the election last Tuesday, proponents of a program for improving high school facilities seem to be disappointed but not discouraged. Just what the next move will be remains to be seen. The voters of the county have disapproved any expenditure of funds for either enlargement of the present building or the construction of a new one. The County Commissioners do not have the power to create bonded indebtedness against the county, except that in 1933 the Legislature passed an emergency act which gave them that power so that advantage could be taken of the federal aids of WPA and PWA so as to relieve unemployment. These two agencies are reducing their activities and no new projects are being accepted. The only other solution might be the passage of a bill in the Legislature without a referendum but it would hardly seem advisable for representatives of a county in the Legislature to bond a county against the wishes of the large majority of residents of that county. Should such a bill be presented it could be forced to a vote by a petition with 500 signatures which, judging from past elections, would be easy to get, and the results of another vote could mean only one thing unless sentiment underwent a major change. These facts are very discouraging to advocates of better high school facilities, but one encouraging note is the fact that each time the issue has been presented to the voters the opposition majority has been less. All precincts of the county which are served by the Chestertown High School gave a majority for the measure except the two at Kennedyville and the Betterton precinct.

Although Kent County is removed from the large defense industrial centers there are constant reminders that of the emergency. The first effect was in the leaving of many young men for army and navy training centers; then came a labor shortage due to increased wages offered for work in defense industries; and now the call for the donation of abandoned aluminum ware to meet an acute shortage in that material for the construction of airplanes. The Girl Scouts will canvas Chestertown on Monday for donations of that metal as part of the defense activity of the organization. Then again is the campaign for the sale of defense bonds. These bonds are of small denominations and an effort is made to get wage earners to purchase them for two major purposes. First to secure funds for national defense and second to divert increased wages from the purchase of unnecessary commodities. As to the latter the increased demand for these commodities, the production of which has necessarily been decreased, leads to demand surpassing supply and the resulting high prices and inflation. All of these measures are part of the defense program and require cooperation on the part of the public.

Standards as to what is "good" corn bread differ in different sections of the country. If the new cook has grown up in the North she may assume that it always will be made from corn meal which is golden yellow; but if she has lived in the South she knows that, according to Southerners, real corn bread cannot be made except from white meal.
