Cooking Rhubarb—Rhubarb is disliked by some people because of its acidity. But this can be considerably reduced if the fruit is covered with cold water, brought to the boil and then strained before being stewed in the ordinary way. This method is only recommended to anybody who dislikes ordinary stewed rhubarb, as the healthful salts are lost when the fruit is cooked twice. W.V.U. Service.

"Wait for Opportunity" Is a Misleading Maxim

There is no time of a lifetime that has not opportunity within it. It is not a thing that comes once in a lifetime, to be seized or neglected as the case may be, but an ever-present power, waiting to be used.

There may be a certain time in life when we see before us a road so wide that we can see Success in the distance, but, nevertheless, there is always some small path awaiting us outside our doors. And who knows but that the small path may have a hand in it not many yards away and success be actually nearer than that seen on the wide road.—Elsie L. Taylor.

Americans Are Not Accustomed to Making the Most of Leisure Time

It is not true that reduction of working time in the last several decades has made leisure automatically advantageous. To the contrary, with the greater increase of the time not absolutely necessary to earning a living, there have come inventions which are especially adapted to consumption of this leisure time, to wit, the radio and the movies.

And the augmentation of the periods not necessarily given to working has created the problem not of how to use leisure but how to use it properly and most effectively for our own happiness and our own betterment.

Most of us are insanely extravagant with the time known as leisure.

Instead of using it to store up an authentic happiness for ourselves by riding a worth while hobby, reading truly great works of literature, or in kindred pursuits, we devote entirely to much attention to mere "time killers."

There is something terribly wasteful in attempting merely "to pass time away" in view of the priceless nature of all moments.

Persons who spend half an hour, or an hour, a day over many years riding street cars, contenting themselves with gazing unthinkingly at scenery which is as familiar to them as the backs of their own hands, have wasted years which might profitably have been employed in reading something both of recreation and of lasting value to themselves.

Minds are like the muscles of the arms or the legs. Used constantly, they develop and become strengthened. Never used, they become flabby and atrophied.

Didn't "Walk the Plank"

Countless stories and plays have mentioned how the pirates of old made their victims "walk the plank" over the sides of their ships, but there is no authenticated case of such an execution in all the history of the sea.—Collier's Weekly.

To say the world is moving in cycles is supposed to soften the blow.

Independent Indolence

Sometimes, one may feel indolent enough not to want opportunity to knock. After all, one may be able to shape his own course, without outside aid.

There is little music in a robin's chirrup, but a great deal of cheer-up.

An egotist thinks he cannot make a mistake, so he has no misgivings and frequently gets something done.

Few people are familiar enough with money to call $1,000 a "grand" in that offhand way.

Purpose of Education

ONE must realize that the main purpose and benefit of education is first the mental and moral betterment of himself, and only secondly a qualification.

The leading positions are few, and do not of necessity bring happiness. The subordinate positions are many, and the man who cheerfully and contentedly does his duty in the ordinary routine of life need never regret that leadership has not come his way. A nation composed of citizens who are doing their best will never become decadent.

Hungary Revives Ancient Sport of Bear Hunting

Budapest.—The ancient sport of bear hunting is being revived in Hungary under government supervision. For centuries bear chasing was the favorite sport of Hungarian hunters, especially in the vast forests of Transylvania. Since the World war, bears have practically disappeared. To restore the sport, the forestry department of the ministry of agriculture is importing bears and turning them loose in the royal forest of Szini, where they will live in their natural state and breed under government protection.

It is expected that bear hunting will regain its old popularity.
