Some Water That

Glitters Is Gold •

N SEA water there are grains of pure gold. Columbus seeking gold in the New world was actually sailing through it when his crew threatened mutiny and wanted to turn back. Many of the Forty-niners went in clipper ships to California to find gold. They too sailed through waters of gold without knowing it. From prehistoric times men had dug gold out of the rocks and from beneath beds of sand and gravel. Then one man in a laboratory found in sea water particles of the precious metal.

He knew that sea water contained many elements beside common salt. From a very early time it was known that sea water also contained epsom salts, gypsom and magnesium chloride, but it was not until 1870 that Sonnstadt detected gold. Since then the analysis of modern chemists has revealed the existence of 32 out of the 80 known elements as existing dissolved in sea water. The remaining elements, it is believed by some authorities, also exist in minute particles in it. Sonnstadt detected gold by means of a color test. He estimated there was one grain of gold to every ton of sea water. Tests for extracting it were based on this estimate. Since 1927 projects for extracting gold from sea water have been given up. Anyone who tries to dip up a few tons of glittering sea water will have only his labor to show for his energy and his optimism. It doesn't pay to extract gold from the ocean waters. It has been found that it takes 3,858 million parts of sea water to produce one part of pure

Proximity Best Ally to Young People Who Think They're in Love.

DEAR MISS DENE: I have only one daughter whom I have to support. My work takes me all over the country so I am not with her much. She is sixteen now and has fallen in love. The boy is perfectly all right, and his family are delightful people. I tell her that she is too young to marry. This is her first love affair. The boy's family have suggested that my daughter come to live with them for the next two years. This will mean taking her out of boarding school but it will give her time to test her love which I think is the most important thing .- Mrs. D. B.

low your daughter to slip into a rut. Proximity is Cupid's best ally when boys and girls are young-and in love with the idea of being in love. There may be no earthly reason Keep her at school and let her mind keep on growing up. Let her be where the will have opportunities to meet other men. Let her develop outside interests through her school life. In that way you'll be equipping her to be soundminded so that one of these days she can depend on her own judgment and be competent to choose a husband for herself. You see most girls of sixteen would like nothing better than to be almost-engaged-to-be-married with both families encouraging the romance as hard as possible. At sentimental sixteen we ask nothing better than that life should be one long love story.

Fortunately few of us attain this heavenly state. Against our will we are kept at school, we are constantly jacked up to common-sense standards-we are urged to cut out foolishness and to pay attention to the business of getting ourselves educated. We hate it at the time-but in the end we find that we have been | Colorful Apron for saved from making a mess of our lives. The very treatment against which we rebelled has prevented us from becoming serious about Tom, Dick or Harry who is the first boy who ever cast languishing glances in our direction, and who might easily have become our beau ideal if we hadn't been rudely ridiculed out of romance.

Taken away from school she can devote all her time to the business of being in love-she can become daily more absorbed in the hero of her dreams who even if he doesn't fulfill all her expectations, will soon become a habit with her. Don't you see that in allowing her to have this experience, you are depriving her of the discipline and the common-sense which would make a real person of her-and give her opinion and ideas of her own with which to confront the world?

I honestly think you would be doing the kindest thing in insisting that your girl keep on with school -that she make new friends-and that the engagement be postponed.

DEAR MISS DENE: Is it unreamy husband show me affection? Other wives are constantly showered with affection in my presence, and I am treated as if I'd been married for fifteen years. My husband says I am unreasonable. Am I?-

You must admit that the fact that demonstrative doesn't actually make him a good husband. There are of traits more handy to around the house than the faculty for incessant love-making. Begin to count your blessings, Amy, and see whether after all the other women's husbands are as kind or generous or sweet-tempered, or easy going as your own.

And don't forget that nothing can be worse for your undemonstrative spouse than your constant reminders that he is a perfect frost. The more you tell him about his shortcomings, the more disinclined he'll be to show affection. His reserve rises from shyness anyhow, and you can't cure shyness with nagging criticisms.

Be sensible and thank Providence for all the good qualities you've annexed in one man. Hang on to your sense of humor and let go some of your vanity. You're worried mostly about this situation because the other wives are getting something you've missed. Just pause to consider that you wouldn't change your own silent but devoted life-partner for all the petting sheiks in the
