The public money would be economised. Appointments to important offices would be regulated on constitutional principles. Perhaps the answers called for by this resolution could not be afforded in time to legislate on the subject this session; more especially as it appeared to be in contemplation, very wisely as he thought, to make it short by an early adjournment. But either at this or a fucceeding session he had no doubt that the information to be obtained under this resolution would convince Congress of the necessity of their interposition, and enable them to make it effectual for the better organization of the Post Office Department.

The resolution was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

BALTIMORE: TUESDAY, Feb. 8.

THE EMBARGO. Henryism no longer skulks in hidden places, or in secret cabals .- It now shews its horrid | ties, and whose goodness of heart rendered front in open day, and boldly declares its intentions in the assembly of the people of Massachusetts !- " Lord Castlereagh's friends" open!y declare their partiality for English Monarchy, in preference to American Republicanism!—They loudly talk of new Custom-houses, and of raising an army to assist in erecting the new kingdom of New England! It is said by some of the more cautious friends of the Faction, "that it is only talk," meant to drive Mr. Madison from his place, or to compel him to repeal the Embargo. - But let us see what effects these ill timed and imprudent threatenings have upon the conduct of the enemy .- The secret machinations of the Factionists were the cause of bringing on the war; wine. their open declarations serve to continue the war, and prevent the return of peace, for which we are all so anxious. - From these declarations, the enemy consider us as a divided rebellious provinces" among their Allies, and of giving us another government! The Embargo is an unpleasant measure, but it is a necessary one.—It is obviously intended to save the nation, by depriving our inveterate enemy of those resources with which, every day, they were liberally supplied, both by land and water, by men divested of all patriotie sen. sations, who would sell, and did sell, any thing and every thing for money. Upon this principle, we hope the Embargo speedy peace. The repeal of the former Embargo was a most ill-timed and ill-judged meaous cries of Faction and disaffected men-and I Inland produce scarce and high-brown su-
