NATION WITHOUT A BREAD-LINE.

"At this hour, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, there is not a bread line or public soup kitchen."

The foregoing quoted words were uttered by George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental Bank and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, perhaps the second largest banking institution in the country.

Mr. Reynolds was talking to a staff correspondent of the Washington Star, who was visiting Chicago to ascertain the business situation and to gain the views of thoughtful men upon the treaty, politics and kindred subjects.

George M. Reynolds is a Republican and in recent years has been a heavy contributor to the Republican campaign fund. But his quoted words indicate that he is not so much a partisan that he will not admit an obvious truth, which is that America never was so prosperous.

It is not to be supposed that Mr. Reynolds intended to deprive the Republican political leaders of their old-time campaign cry that Republican success means the full dinner pail. The fact is, however, he did that very thing and it is significant that within a few days after the appearance of the Reynolds' interview Republican chiefs announced the full dinner pail would not be numbered among the G. O. P. slogans in 1920.

"The great masses of the people are prosperous and contented," was another utterance of the Washington Star correspondent credited to Mr. Reynolds. Proof of this fact was found on Christmas Day when charitable organizations throughout the nation were unable to muster hardly a corporal's guard to partake of home-made spreads provided for the poor.

Commenting upon the absence of the bread-line, the New York Herald Tribune published a Christmas editorial which said:

"Not in many years, if ever, has the number of homeless and destitute persons been so small as this winter. It is an encouraging condition. Plenty of work and good pay is the general rule. With few exceptions, the cases of idleness are those who refuse opportunities to work or belong to the class of chronic lazy whom neither pride nor self-respect can urge to earn a decent living. Short of bad health or hard luck, the man out of a job and walking the streets can hope for little sympathy."

How about that Factory Site Commission, Mr. Commissioners? Holidays presuppose work days. In that case how does the Republican Congress justify its two weeks' vacation?

It is a problem with the professional thief now-a-days to decide what he shall steal—Sugar or coal. There'll be no relief from high prices until some of the profiteers are landed safely behind prison bars, there to stay for a long, long term.

President Wilson ate a hearty Christmas dinner, says the news. "Doctor" Moses doubtless read that announcement with interest and wonder.

Senator Gronna was in the midst of a fine speech against his party's "gag rule" in the Senate when he was gagged and could proceed no further.

The recent history of the Senate seems to show that a "Progressive" is a Republican politician who backs up when "Boss" Penrose gives the order.

It will hardly be safe for the census enumerators to assume that a woman is as old as she looks, for remember the old song, "You can't tell the mothers from the daughters."

There were fewer calls for charity on Christmas this year than ever before. Republicans failed in their effort to make an issue of the war, and now they can point to no famine as a reason for putting them in power. Persistence is the only hope remaining.

three months, to the subject of local legislation. Capable presiding officers for the two Houses have been chosen—Senator Norris, of Baltimore city, as President of the Senate, and Delegate Tydings, of Harford county, as Speaker of the House—and the Democrats, who have a working majority in each House, seem disposed to support Governor Ritchie in his efforts to redeem the pledges contained in the platform upon which he was elected.

One of the pledges in this platform, of particular interest to the people of the county, is that providing for the building of secondary or lateral roads to connect up with the State roads already built. While the redemption of this particular pledge may mean an increase in State taxes, it should not be opposed on that account, because it will mean a permanent improvement of benefits to all the counties in the State. There are many State roads now in Baltimore county and the advantages which accrue from them are everywhere manifest. Any movement on the part of the State to build lateral roads to connect up with these great arteries of travel should be encouraged. The additional taxes we pay toward such a project should not be looked upon as ordinary operating expenses, but as a permanent investment for the good of the whole State.

Some consideration should also be given to the subject of road legislation for Baltimore county. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the road laws should be revised, but no one has so far, to our knowledge, presented a concrete plan for revision, excepting Mr. Edward H. Burke. Mr. Burke's plan, which was discussed in these columns two weeks ago, presents many advantages over the existing law. For some time one also can suggest an even better plan. The important thing to do is for every public-spirited citizen of the county to give the matter immediate consideration and advise with our representatives in the Legislature to the end that the best possible road law may be enacted.

There are other local matters of importance which will come before the General Assembly, and which The Jeffersonian will from time to time discuss for the information of its readers.

THREE DAY SESSION HELD Rural Life Club Holds Meetings In The Public School At Eklo.

Commencing Wednesday evening a three day session, under the auspices of the Rural Life Club of the Sixth district was held at Eklo, in the public school building. Dr. Shaw, of the Maryland State College, spoke on Thursday afternoon, while Miss Katherine Kirwan, of the Baltimore County Children's Aid Society, also addressed the gathering.

At night an illustrated lecture was given by Dr. McCall, of the Maryland State Experiment Station, on his work in France.

A conference between Dr. McCall and representatives from different organizations of the county was held yesterday (Friday) morning in the interest of starting agricultural experiment work in the county. In the afternoon and evening addresses were made by Dr. Buckley and Miss Day, of the Maryland State College.

MINT BREAKS COIN RECORD. The Philadelphia Mint shattered coinage records in the past year. During 1919 domestic coinage totaled 59,915,000 pieces, as compared with 367,845,000 in 1918. In addition, coinage for foreign countries in the last 12 months amounted to 90,526,195 pieces, compared with 28,480,000 pieces in 1918.

Throughout the year there was a heavy demand for all coins except 50-cent pieces. Pennies were in greatest demand.
