In President JAMES M. COX. Vice-President FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT. For United States Senate JOHN WALTER SMITH. For Congressman CARVILLE D. BENSON.

It is easy to pick our next president. His name begins with a "C."

The Wood boom might have been called a sap bubble.

Messrs. Commissioners! Where is that Factory Site Commission?

At any rate the predictions of lower prices make first-class reading.

A clue is something a detective finds when he can't find the criminal.

The traveling expenses of Eugene Debs, the Socialist candidate for President, will be extremely light.

Slippery elm planks were used by the builders of the Republican platform.

What the United States needs now is fewer automobile drivers and more wheelbarrow pushers.

Harding is good enough for the Republican bosses, Penrose et al.—Is he good enough for you?

Japan says she intends to take no sides in Siberia. She should take no side except the outside.

How can a man run for president if he's locked up? Socialists are therefore demanding the release of Debs.

The officials of the United Railways are as silent on the cobble stone question as a sphinx in the Egyptian desert.

Well! Well! The theory that any Republican could be elected President this year will be put to the severest test.

We bet the oldest inhabitant in Baltimore county cannot remember when he had to "dig" down so deep for potatoes.

All profane will go straight to Hell! shouts a Baltimore preacher. Look out then for a raise in the price of matches.

Speaking of a third party, Hearst, the publisher of the New York Journal, may become desperate and nominate himself.

The Republican Presidential candidate once played a horn in the village band and he hasn't been out of the band-wagon since.

It might be true, as William Jennings Bryan says, that Old John Barleycorn is in his coffin, but there seems to be a leak in the coffin.

The Third Party is deriving quite the same sort of satisfaction from its exclamations as a lunatic who raps his head against a stone wall.

The row in the School Board of Baltimore City takes on the aspect of a "tooth and nail" scrap at which Mayor Broening looks on, snickering.

The Taxpayers' League, with the aid of the new charter, has long since left this earth in quest of its "air castles" of perfect government.

Figure it out for yourself. You will then find out that the new Charter form of government to be voted on this fall will be far more expensive.

Senator Harding has promised that there will be no one-man rule if he wins. How could there be with the Republican bosses "behind the throne"?

It has been conclusively proven that Prohibition does not prohibit. What we need is a temperance law with "teeth in it" instead of the drastic dry amendments.

A Baltimore county farmer has boasted of raising lettuce with leaves two yards wide. Poor Eve would have scorned dress material of such unfashionable spread.

It is doubtful if Senator Harding will be as surprised on being officially notified of his nomination by the Republicans as many folks were on his selection at Chicago.

Dame rumor has it that Albert A. Blakeney, the Republican candidate for Congress from the Second District, is a "dry" as an asbestos cat after a frolic in "the hot place."

The great war certainly started the ball of misfortune rolling. Now a coal shortage faces us. Life is just one d— thing after another and love two d— things after each other.

Towson is the only place in the United States that Grover Cleveland Borgdoff, the draft evader, has not been seen since his escape from the military authorities some months ago.

James M. Cox, the Democratic nominee for President, is not the same Cox which led Cox's Army to Washington some years ago, but in November he will head the Democratic Army on its march to Washington.

Mr. Wm. R. Price, secretary of the Taxpayers' League, commenced a "duel of words" with former Judge N. Chas. Burke, pens being the weapons. The "blood" of ink flowing freely. Mr. Price will learn later on that he has a very able and formidable opponent, although there is quite a difference in ages.

A Baltimore City suffrage leader has warned the new voters not to accept the crumbs from the political bosses' tables. She should show no signs of being intimidated by the women voters taking charge of the tables themselves, with the bosses nervously waiting to see what they'll grab next.

Folks in Baltimore county who have dogs ought to be willing to pay the small license fee. While this is a State-wide measure, the local authorities are going to begin a campaign to enforce it. They are obliged to do so, "without fear or favor." Better pay your one or two dollars than to face a magistrate and have it five and costs.

A million dollar plant cannot be run by an inefficient man. Neither can a man big enough to "hold down the job" as county manager under the new charter form of government be sequestered for $6500 per year. There will be plenty of applicants however, if the scheme is passed by the voters, but getting the right caliber of man cannot be done for the price.

Those blue prints and working drawings of the new station for Towson, which the R. E. R. have been talking about for several years, must have been burnt up in the fire which didn't do the old shed nor standing for a station at Towson too much harm to be patched up. Let it be known, that if the officials of the railroad are not ashamed of the Towson station the residents here are.

The appointment of Dr. Henry S. West as Superintendent of the Public Schools of Baltimore is a promotion well deserved. Dr. West has been a citizen of Towson for three years, during which time he has been head of the Maryland State Normal School. We have had every opportunity to study the man, and in his removal to the city, feel that the community will lose a valuable citizen, and the Normal School an excellent principal. Nevertheless, as the old saying goes, "What is one man's gain is another's loss," the school system of Baltimore will be benefited.

WHY NOT GIVE THE WOMEN REPRESENTATION ON THE SCHOOL BOARD? Announcement was made yesterday that Mrs. Howard T. Schwartz would probably be appointed a member of the Baltimore City School Board to succeed Mrs. Harry E. Parkhurst, and Mrs. Schwartz in an interview published at the same time said: "I think that two women should be the minimum representation of women on the School Board, and I should like to see even more."

Would it not be a good plan to have one or two women on the Baltimore County School Board? In making this query we do not mean to cast the slightest reflection upon the estimable gentlemen who now constitute the County School Board, but as a vast majority of the public school instructors are women it does seem reasonable that they should be represented on the administrative board. Mothers as a rule take a greater interest in the education of their children than fathers, especially in the younger children, who are dependent upon the public school for their primary education. And who can question the general fitness of women to manage the details of a child's education?

The national enfranchisement of women is coming. It will not be long before in every State in the Union they will exercise their influence at the polls, on an equal footing with the men. Whether their influence as voters will be for the weal or woe of the State remains to be seen, but we are inclined to think they will make good, as they have in most every other location in life.

DESCRIPTS CONVENTION. (Continued from Page 1) were instructed for other candidates. This sentiment manifested itself later on when it became evident that McAdoo could not be nominated and from their on the sentiment for Cox was undisguised.

The great turning-point arrived when Congressman Canby, of Virginia, withdrew the Palmer candidacy and the only question then was, where the Palmer vote would go. The Cox people claim that it would come to Cox and was verified, and thereafter it was a question of between different delegations to see which could climb upon the band wagon first.

Maryland's contribution to Cox's success was conspicuous and grand. From the fourth ballot, on which she gave him eight and one-half votes, under the "a" and "b" tracks, she stood firm and by her allegiance never wavered. Her attitude unquestionably had great influence in maintaining the Cox moral and effect upon a corresponding counter effect upon an opposition. Many states would come to Cox for a ballot or two and then go away, but the eight and one-half never for a moment faltered. The members of this group are very proud of their stand, and the considerable moral force which it brought them and are now organizing and on our return will incorporate the "Eight and One-Half Club."

There is undoubtedly a strong sentiment for Cox. We picked it up all the way along on our way out and are intensifying it on our return. Without doubt the ticket is very strong and if the campaign is properly conducted should win. Cox is a strong, vigorous man, and is a great fighter of the "never say die kind" and is capable of making a hard continuous fight.

The three outstanding features of the convention as I saw them were: First—the complete triumph of the Wilsonian policies. Secondly—the defeat of Bryan in the rejection of every amendment offered to the platform. Bryan undoubtedly still has a hold upon the imaginations of many people, but it was impossible for him to secure recognition of his doctrines in this convention. Thirdly—the undeniable strength and tremendous power exerted by the women. This, probably, was the most striking feature of the convention. Whether the 19th amendment is ratified or not the women, as a powerful factor in American politics are here to stay and must be reckoned with.

In bowing to what seems the inevitable let us hope that they will not disappoint the high expectations which their proponents have held of them and that, after all, equal suffrage may be the panacea for all the ailments that a set body politic. At the risk of tiring you I cannot bring this letter to a close without a word about our trip. No one of average intelligence can travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific without receiving impressions of the most lasting and beneficial character. No amount of reading and research can give you a true picture of the magnitude and grandeur of this country which we call our own. All descriptions of it are either untrue or inadequate. One feels without consequence on the prairies and on the bleak barren deserts and when you behold the Rockies, the peaks of unbroken ranges, peak rising on peak, and man of them covered with perpetual snow, silent but enduring sentinels of a region greater than Europe, you feel that you are one of the "insignificant atoms" in the universe. And yet man has crossed the desert and conquered the mighty mountains and one of the things that impressed us most was the engineering skill which has brought these transcontinental railroads up and over the mountain ranges.

The statement has often been made, and it is probably true, that the material resources of this country have as yet scarcely been touched and are practically inexhaustible. As I thought has often been expressed by members of the party that could the Kaiser have mingled with our country and looked about a bit he most assuredly would not have insisted on mixing it up with us in the war. However, both the war and the convention are now over and the country seems to look forward to the summer as the hour is late I will close and tell you more about the trip when I see you.

SERVED 45 YEARS. Oldest Man in Marine Corps Will Retire Aug. 30. Has Been Government Employee 65 Years.

After 65 years of continuous Government service, regarded by officials here as a record never before equaled, H. J. Wylie, clerk in the Quartermaster's Department of the U. S. Marine Corps, will retire on August 30 with an annuity of $1800 per year.

Mr. Wylie entered the Government service in the Post Office in Pittsfield, Mass., when 17 years old. In 1861 he enlisted in the Army and saw service in three of the great battles of the Civil War. At the close of the war he was appointed clerk in the Washington navy yard. He left the navy to join the clerical force of the Marine Corps in 1875.

During his service in the Marine Corps, Mr. Wylie has administered the chain of office to the following commandants of the corps: Major Generals Heywood, Elliott, Biddle, Barnett and Lejeune.

Mr. Wylie, a few years ago, visited his friends in Towson.

EGYPTIAN BEADS MOVE BED

Remarkable Manifestations Said to Have Been Made by Ancient Necklaces in Edinburgh.

Some remarkable manifestations, states the Scotsman, have occurred in Edinburgh in association with an ancient Egyptian necklace. The present owner of the necklace, who lives in the west end of Edinburgh, received it from Cairo at the end of 1913.

Recently she decided to get rid of it and threw it into a waste paper basket. That night when near the basket she was startled by the distinct feeling of a hand clutching at her wrist. She afterward heard sounds from the basket as a mouse moving. Examination revealed only waste paper and the glass beads.

She gave the beads to her brother, who on going to bed placed them on the pillow near his head. The necklace seemed to be moved on the pillow during the night by some unseen agency. A night or two later he again put the beads on his bed. He was roused from his sleep by the bed being moved from side to side. He afterward heard the necklace following a rustling movement. The following night he slept soundly with the necklace in the room. At four o'clock next morning he was awakened by the bed again shaking. Other persons say they had similar experiences with the beads.

Merely a Good Story. Wars produce many stories of fiction, some of which the oftener they are told the more they are believed to be true.

The Civil War was no exception to this rule, and the story of the apple tree is one of these fictions based on a slight foundation of fact. There was, indeed, an apple orchard on one side of the hill occupied by the Confederate forces. Running diagonally up the hill was a wagon road, which, at one point, ran very near one of the trees, so that the wheels of the vehicles had on that side cut off the roots of the tree, leaving a little embankment. General Babcock, of my staff, reported to me that when he first met General Lee he was sitting on this embankment, with his feet in the road below, and his back resting against the tree. The story had no other foundation than that. Like many other good stories, it would be very good if it was only true.—Memoirs of Ulysses S. Grant.

OLD DINGBAT SEZ

Judging from the number of old dingbats on their streets, they say wither you or new one must feel good under uncomfortable.

Them quern er Rumania sez, ter be successful quera yer present bid, must er chorus gals; so quera is not so peculiar in this yer snaling game.

Them ther cobbler stones ain't been moved yet but the joint er Railways and Electrical Contraption, and they's still down in between ther street car tracks on ther York Road, wedged in durm fine shape, nit!

See by ther papers that ther Jointed Railways made more money during May than they did durm ther whole of Towson they kin spend some of it ter give ther town er decent pavement between ther pesky ole car tracks.

Towson town folks thought they'd git er new station when ther gol durm benchouse along ther Ma & Pa tracks was burnt ere, but they ain't no seck good luck. Blame it ther dinky railroad officials, they'd patch ther ole piano box up ter do fer a couple dozen more years.

Somebody sez they thought I was some kin ter yer Uncle Jake 'cause we done looked so much like er, but I ain't got no medals fer looks, but my, ain't Uncle Jake er homey buzzard!

TATTOOING AS A FINE ART

It Reached Its Highest Development in the Marquesas Islands of the South Seas.

Tattooing is an art so old that its origin is lost to historical records, having been practiced when the cave-men went out to club their fellows. In the Marquesas islands, the most distant and most mysterious of South Sea archipelagos, tattooing reached its highest development and there it was the most beautiful form of art known.

For a man in the Marquesas to lack the tattooed stars of terror upon his face and to have a bare countenance upon his face was to be a pariah and despised by the whole tribe. Frederick O'Brien says in the Century that to achieve a fairly complete picture on one's body meant many months of intense suffering and the expenditure of much wealth.

When white men were cast by shipwreck in the islands of the far Pacific or fled from duty on whalers or warships and sought to stay among the Marquesas they acceded to the honored customs of their hosts and adopted their facial adornment. Once the curious ink of the tattooer has gotten into the skin it is there forever and can never be erased, like the pits of smallpox. The white men, therefore, of Europe and America never again returned to their old homes after settling among these Marquesas and having their faces tattooed.

It is being reported around town that THE JEFFERSONIAN has but 500 subscribers, and those who are circulating such a statement claim that the fact was made known at a recent meeting of the board of directors of THE JEFFERSONIAN. No such statement was made. The report handed the directors was compiled by an auditing company, and there was no mention of subscriptions other than amount collected for the past six months.

Those who are heralding the circulation of THE JEFFERSONIAN as being only 500 do so with malicious intent. If they desire to ascertain the correct number of subscribers it may be well that they refer to the established national newspaper directories, where they will find our sworn statement as to circulation.

The circulation of THE JEFFERSONIAN by far exceeds that of any other paper published in Baltimore County.
