Tomatoes have been scalded by the hot sun between the showers and the packers are telling those who have contracts that the tomatoes are no good. Of course, that is a good excuse for the packer to either cut the price on the week or to not haul 42 bushels, actual weight given for the load at the packing house one day this week and had his load cut to 30 bushels because some of the tomatoes were too soft and some too green. We are wondering what that packer did with those bad tomatoes. Some of the farmers here who did not contract are letting their tomato fields
