Two Worshipped in China and Elaborate Temples Erected at the Birthplace of One.

Man worship is still practiced in China, according to Rev. F. S. Barker, a Baptist minister of Changning, who found two disciples of the late Liao, seated on thrones and receiving the obeisance of thousands of their followers.

Liao, who achieved local fame years ago, because of his reputed power of healing diseases and relieving the oppressed in spirit was executed by the authorities, who feared an uprising.

Two of Liao's disciples, Ling Shuk and Lai Sam Shuk, however, like their master, began to heal diseases in this time, and gradually were raised by their followers to the same godlike rank accorded Liao.

Ling Shuk is seventy-one years old and Lai Sam Shuk eight years his junior. Several ornate temples have been built to Liao. At the main one, seated at Liao's birthplace about 15 miles from Changning, the missionary found gathered more than 2,000 people to celebrate Liao's birth anniversary. The two immortals were seated on the highest of a series of terraces with an empty throne between them for the spirit of Liao. Before them stood a large table covered with ornamental objects and in front of this the worshipers go through strange gymnastics.

No Way for Ladies to Act.

Scene, a crowded restaurant; dramatics personae, the proprietor, sleek, prosperous, pompous; a doorman—a dejected attendant, rolling anxious, furtive eyes in every direction to find out whether a customer had skipped without cashing in his meal check properly. For a few moments, however, attendant relaxes, heavy eyes almost close and vigilance abates.

On this peaceful lassitude falls the voice of the proprietor. "Here, you, Joe, get on your job. Didn't you notice them two ladies over there beating it out without paying their bill?"—Rebels both Sunday-Herald.

CARRIED "HONESTY" TOO FAR

Trusted Clerk Rather Overdid It, and Lost the Confidence of His Employer.

Cash registers became an institution as a means of compelling honesty among employees handling money. There was a time when their installation was taken as an affront by every clerk concerned, but a new generation has accepted them as a matter of course. That they still have their use in the original sense, however, was demonstrated recently by one employer—a grocer—who was telling his story over the counter the other evening to a belated customer.

"Last summer," the grocer said, "my family was living down at the beach and I used to leave early in order to get down there for a late dinner. I had a clerk that I trusted to lock up and put the money in the safe. Naturally the cash register would show in the morning what he had rung up."

"For a few days I thought it was working fine. He was a good clerk and I thought he was honest. Then when I got to thinking about it I decided he was too—honest. For ten days that register and the cash agreed to a penny. Now that's better than I could make it do myself. It ain't natural."

"Then I decided to try a little scheme. Just before I left I rang up $2.75 on the register and put nothing in the till. Next morning the cash and the register agreed as usual. That was enough for me. Any man who is so honest he will make up mistakes out of his pocket must have plenty of money to do it with."

"No, he isn't working for me now."—New York Evening Sun.

Ammonia by New Process.

An enterprising American has secured from the Italian government a concession for the utilization of 800 horsepower of the Marmore cascades near Terni, about seventy miles from Rome, and maintains that he can turn out nitrogenous plant food for the Italian farmer at a cost as low as 1 lira per kilo (equivalent to $0.088 per pound, with the lira taken at its par exchange value of $0.193). It is said that the falls are capable of generating not less than 150,000 horsepower.

These are the cascades over which Byron waxed so eloquent in "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage." Alfred P. Dennis, commercial attache of the United States embassy in Rome, reports to the department of commerce that the only ingredients in the ammonia are water, air and electric energy.
