

NORTHEASTERN DAIRY CONFERENCE MEETING JANUARY 7 AND 8

Clarification of major issues and problems confronting the dairy industry will be sought at a meeting sponsored by the Northeastern Dairy Conference to be held January 7 and 8 at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa. Several hundred milk producers, cooperative leaders, milk distributors, and state and federal milk control officials are expected to attend the two-day session.

The program announced by the Northeastern Dairy Conference, coordinating organization representing the dairy industry in the 12 Northeastern States, lists speakers who are nationally known dairy industry leaders. Typical discussions for the two-day meeting include consideration of produce-dealer relationships, present and future needs of cooperatives, the place of state and federal governments in stabilizing milk markets, and reciprocal trade agreements between the United States and foreign countries. In addition, demonstrations of the work of the Philadelphia Inter-City Dairy Council under the direction of C. I. Cohee, will be featured during the two-day meeting.

L. W. Heaps, manager of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Baltimore, Md., is scheduled to preside at the opening session of the meeting on the morning of January 7. A report on the objectives of the Northeastern Dairy Conference will be given by J. E. Carrigan of Burlington, Vt., chairman of the Conference and director of the Vermont extension service. The principal discussion during the morning session will center around produce-dealer relationships.

B. H. Welby, president of the Interstate Milk Producers' Association, Philadelphia, will preside over the afternoon session which will be devoted to a consideration of present and future needs of cooperatives. An evening session, over which James S. Pates, chairman of the Pennsylvania Milk Control Board, will preside, will be held on January 7. Two men, nationally known in their respective fields, will speak. One will be Dr. Henry F. Grady of Washington, D. C., chief of the trade agreements section in the State Department. He will discuss the relationship of international trade and reciprocal trade agreements to the dairy industry. The other speaker will be F. H. Sexauer, president of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, New York. Mr. Sexauer will discuss the relationship of the dairy industry to consumer and other group interests.

The morning session on January 8 will be presided over by H. J. Baker of New Brunswick, N. J., director of New Jersey's agricultural extension service. The morning program will be devoted to consideration of the place of the state and federal governments in stabilizing milk markets.

William B. Duryee, New Jersey's secretary of agriculture and chairman of that State's milk control board, will discuss the State's point of view on the place of governmental milk control in stabilizing milk markets. The Federal Government's viewpoint will be discussed by Samuel W. Tator, administrator of the Federal milk market.

COURT RULES AGAINST PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 24.—Judge Joseph N. Ulman, in the Circuit Court of Baltimore, has handed down a decision enjoining the Public Service Commission of Maryland from enforcing provisions of the commission's orders directing reductions in the rates of the Conowingo Power Company. The company distributes electric power in parts of Cecil and Harford counties.

The company filed suit asserting that the commission's order to reduce rates and cut its valuation by more than $100,000 was unreasonable and unlawful. The company also asserted that the Public Service Commission used "unlawful standards and measures" in computing its valuation of the company's property.

The injunction granted by Judge Ulman enjoins the Public Service Commission from enforcing Orders No. 27825 and 27951, "relating to the rates, charges, service and affairs or the value of the property of the plaintiff."
