THREE STRAIGHT FOR THE HUSTLERS

Rising Sun Hustlers won their third straight game on Saturday, when they bested Calvert by the score of 4-2. Mike Brown, hurling for the winners, limited the Liners to four hits, two of which came in the first inning when Rogers connected for a double to score Yerkes, who had singled.

The Sun boys tied the score in their half of the first inning, when Lucas singled and scored on Dud Rawlings' two-ply swat.

Each team added a run in the second frame, which stood until the sixth, when Lucas, running for Brown who had singled, scored on Point's triple.

Reynolds caught one of the Calvert hurler's fast curves in the seventh frame for a home run, the only four-ply hit of the day.

McCush shared hitting honors with Rawlings, Reynolds and Point, by getting two for three, the last one being a two-bagger.

Racine, hurling for Calvert, was continually in trouble, as the Hustlers collected 12 hits from his offerings.

Rogers and R. Townsend were two-base batsmen for Calvert. Perryville plays at Rising Sun on Saturday.

THE THREE C'S OF MOUTH HEALTH

Speaking to a radio audience in connection with the annual meeting of the American Dental Association at San Francisco, recently, Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health discussed the three C's of mouth health—CONSTRUCTION, CARE and CLEANLINESS. They are like the three R's of education he said in their essential importance.

"Construction of the teeth", Dr. Leonard continued, "starts before a child is born. The development continues in infancy and goes on into early manhood and womanhood. The last of the permanent teeth are not fully developed until between the 17th and 25th year of life.

"The teeth are built largely of mineral salts, notably those which contain calcium and phosphorus. The necessary tooth building materials and the vitamins that are required for the maintenance of strong, healthy teeth are found in certain foods. Since the formation of the teeth begins during the prenatal period, it is obvious that food well supplied with these elements must be included, first, in the diet of the mother, and later, in that of the individual.

"Experience has proved that cow's milk, dairy products, eggs; green leafy vegetables, whole grain cereals, and fresh fruit juices, especially of oranges and other citrus fruits and tomatoes, are the best sources of the construction elements necessary to the production of sound teeth and the maintenance of mouth health.

"Now a word as to CARE: By Care I mean regular inspection of the teeth by a dentist and the prompt correction of defects. This should begin by the time a child is two or three years old and must be continued throughout life. The earlier such care is started the better it is for the individual. Tooth decay is not a CONDITION—it is a DISEASE—the most prevalent one in the world. Being important and far reaching in its results, it should be prevented or promptly corrected as soon as discovered. Like other diseases, tooth decay, if neglected, may lead to serious consequences. Systemic diseases, eye trouble, heart conditions, rheumatism—all may originate in a tooth abscessed by the progress of decay.

"As to CLEANLINESS: Proper mouth cleanliness helps to prevent tooth decay. It also helps to prevent other mouth diseases. It is also a matter of common decency.

"To sum up: Proper diet, regular inspections by your family dentist, prompt correction of adverse conditions, and proper mouth cleanliness, are all inseparably linked together in the three C's of mouth health."

FARMERS AND HOME OWNERS

WARNED OF JAPANESE BEETLE

Immediate steps to control Japanese beetles in the areas of Maryland infested by the pest are advised by Dr. George S. Langford, Specialist in insect control for the University of Maryland Extension Service. Delayed control is not effective, he states, and when the beetles have covered a plant, it is almost impossible to protect it. Plants should be covered with spray, he says, and kept covered.

Outbreaks may be expected at Elkton, Colgate, and Cambridge, according to Dr. Langford. Last year the beetles were sufficiently numerous at these points to defoliate flowers, ornamentals, fruit trees, and grape vines. They reach their greatest numbers about July 20.

The beetle is well established also, Dr. Langford states, in Baltimore City, Hagerstown, Brunswick, Aberdeen, Chesapeake City, and Delmar. Serious damage is not expected at these points, although minor injury may occur. There are a number of other isolated infestations throughout the State, but there are not enough beetles at these points to cause trouble this year.

The insect feeds on more than 200 plants and is a destroyer of fruit and foliage. Apple, peach, grape and cherry, as well as many vegetables and ornamental shrubs and trees, particularly elms, linden, horse chestnut, and some oaks, are greedily devoured.

Control of Japanese beetle is difficult, Dr. Langford says, because of the wide range of plants upon which it feeds. As simple control practices, he recommends spraying, in conjunction with trapping, jarring, soil treatment, and carefully selected planting plans.

Sprays of hydrated lime, 1 pound in 3 gallons of water, will protect grapes, small fruits and the foliage of tree fruits. Ornamental shrubs and shade trees may be protected by spraying with common arsenate of lead, 3 pounds and wheat flour, 2 pounds in 50 gallons of water. Pyrethrum soap sprays are effective for killing beetles on flowers and tender foliage.

A lawn may be made immune to injury for a period of five years by treating with arsenate of lead, 15 pounds to 1,000 sq. ft. of lawn.

Traps are efficient for catching large numbers of beetles. Jarring of heavily infested trees and shrubs, early in the morning, over sheets spread on the ground, is also an excellent way to kill large numbers.

The most effective way to control the beetle is to avoid its damages by selecting and planting those plants that are not attacked. While this is not always practical or profitable, it deserves careful attention.
