Black Swans

Black swans are a feature of the wild life of Australia and New Zealand, where these graceful birds live untamed on the rivers, lakes and lagoons.

To seek a flock of from 1,500 to 2,000 black swans extending for about a mile on the calm sea was the pleasant experience of people at Westshore, near Napier, not long ago. The birds had evidently paused there in migrating from one favorite haunt to another. In perhaps a dozen groups they rested lazily on the placid water about 200 yards from shore, like the squadrons of some great fleet or flotilla.—Montreal Herald.
