Wintering Bees.

It is settled beyond a doubt in my own mind, by the experience of others, as related in the Bee Journal, and by my own experience for several years in the apiary, that hives to Winter well must have sufficient moisture which accumulates in a well stocked hive. This moisture arises partly from the exhalations from the bodies of the bees, but mostly, I think, from the surrounding atmosphere, which constantly holds in suspense a greater or less amount of moisture, according as its temperature is higher or lower. The warm atmosphere of the hives is capable of holding a considerable quantity, until it is condensed by coming in contact with the cold walls of the hive, at some distance from the cluster of bees. There it condenses, first into minute drops of moisture, and afterwards, if the cold increases, into frost. The constant accumulation of the quantity, by repeated thawing and freezing in a hive that has no efficient means of ventilation, gradually encroaches on the space occupied by the bees, finally reaching them on the outside of the cluster. These grow benumbed, cease to eat, lose their vitality, grow cold, the frost forms on their bodies, and they die where they stand. The frost continues to penetrate the cluster; if the cold weather is prolonged, until finally the bees die covered with frost. The warm days of Spring then melt this frost, and on examination, the whole mass of bees are found dead and wet, as if just dipped from a basin of water. I found one hive in this condition last Spring. The entrance to this hive was left open, but the honey-board was left on tight, without any upward ventilation as an exit. Other hives [illegible] wintered well on their Summer stands, having their entrances open three or four inches wide, and the front and rear openings in the honey-boards (half an inch wide, and extending the whole length of the hive) uncovered but the middle opening closed.

For the coming Winter I have adopted Mr. Langstroth's plan with some modifications. I shall omit the outside covering of the hive, believing that it is better to have the hive of a single thickness of board, say seven-eighths of an inch, in order that the heat of the sun may easily penetrate it, and warm up the hive almost daily, thus giving the bees an opportunity to bring to the central part of the hive fresh supplies of food from the outer combs. This plan may lead to a somewhat greater consumption of honey; but if a swarm of bees will give its owner from fifty to one hundred pounds of surplus honey in a season, as mine have done the past Summer, he ought to be entirely willing to have them eat all they need during the Winter. At all events, one or two things must be done, to Winter bees successfully, in addition to their having a supply of food and thorough ventilation—they must either be kept in a repository where frost cannot enter, as a cellar, trench, ice-house, or the like; or they must be put where the sun can warm them up occasionally.

I have removed all the honey boards, placed two one-half or three quarter inch strips across the frames, and covered the whole top of the frames with any old woolen garment that could be found about the house. These need no cutting or fitting. Pack them as you would pack down. The roof or cover of my top box is movable, and I like it much better than the old plan of having it nailed on,) two, three, or more of these thicknesses will make no difference. The moisture will pass through as readily as the insensible perspiration of our bodies will pass through our bed covering. The hive will remain dry and the bees warm. I have no fear of losing a single swarm the coming Winter, although several new ones which I bought are quite weak, owing to the bad weather during the honey harvest a month earlier than last year, in consequence of the drought.—R. Bickford, in Am. Bee Journal.

Spreading Manure in Autumn.

We have endeavored at different times to impress upon our readers the importance of a fine pulverization and thorough intermixture of manure with the soil. If the ingredients which go to make up fertility were all in large lumps, they could be of little use in growing plants. If the silex were in the form of cobble-stones, and the clay like unburned bricks, they would produce a very different effect from that resulting from a thorough pulverization together of these two ingredients. The same reasoning applies with as great force to manure, whether in large unbroken lumps or masses, or ground into fine powder and intimately diffused among the particles of the earth.

Autumn application gives an excellent opportunity for this intimate diffusion, in addition to ordinary breaking down by mechanical means, by the solution of the soluble parts in the water of rains, which carry it down into the earth. So effectual and perfect is this intermixture that, according to repeated experiment, its effect on Spring crops is twice as great, on a fair average, as when spread in the ordinary manner in Spring. This practice is becoming yearly more common; yet we still see repeated cautions in the papers against the loss by washing, when spread in Autumn. We have never found the least detriment from washing on loams containing a small portion of clay. These absorb all the liquid manure almost as soon as it touches them. When heaps of manure were placed on steep hillsides, the greener hue of the grass below, after months of washing, did not extend three feet from the heaps. Grass and its roots appropriate it readily, and fresh bare soils appear to do it as readily. When spread thinly over the surface, the danger of washing becomes far less than in heaps, as the quantity to be absorbed by a given surface of earth is many times smaller.

Next to leaving it unspread, is the objectionable practice of spreading in large lumps, from which only a part of the soluble manure is washed out, and this part is not evenly carried into the soil, but only in spots and patches. These remarks apply both to top-dressing grass and spreading on bare or plowed soil, although the general practice is to spread it on grass, whether for meadow or for pasture, or on soil to be inverted in Spring for corn. Not less beneficial is the autumn application to Winter wheat, where, in addition to the enriching of the plants by the soluble manure, they are protected from the exposure and winds of Winter by the fibrous or insoluble portions.

Muse's

Specific for the Horse

IS THE BEST!

THIS preparation is the result of considerable thought and experiment. Twelve years having been devoted to its preparation, it is now all that the horse needs. It will regulate Digestion, Purify the Blood, and promote General Health. It will destroy and prevent an accumulation of Worm in the Maw, which so often proves fatal, and is besides a great consumer of the nutritious elements of the food eaten by the Horse.—Containing nothing in any way injurious, it is the ounce of preventative which is worth the pound of cure. It saves food and prolongs life, and has met with the highest approval of all who have ever used it. Sold wholesale by CANBY, GILPIN & Co., Cor. Light and Lombard Sts., Baltimore, Md., and at retail by all country store-keepers.—Ask your dealer for it, and send for circulars, containing valuable certificates and full information, which will be furnished free.

Is now treating successfully

Consumption, Bronchitis,

and all diseases of the Throat and Lungs with his COMPOUND MEDICATED INHALATIONS, CONCENTRATED FOOD, AND COUGH SYRUP.

During the past ten years Dr. Carpenter has treated and cured thousands of cases of the above named diseases, and has now in his possession certificates of cures from every part of the country. The Inhalation is breathed directly into the lungs, soothing and healing over all inflamed surfaces, entering into the blood, it imparts vitality as it permeates to every part of the system.—The sensation is not unpleasant, and the first inhalation often gives very decided relief, particularly when there is difficulty of breathing. Under the influence of my remedies, the cough soon grows easier, the hectic flush vanishes, and with improved digestion the patient rapidly gains strength, and health is again within his grasp.

The CONCENTRATED FOOD rapidly builds up the most debilitated patient, presenting to the stomach food all ready to be assimilated and made into good, rich, healthy blood.

THE COUGH SYRUP is to be taken at night to alleviate the cough and enable the patient to obtain sleep. Full directions accompany each box of my remedies, which consists of One Inhaler, One Bottle of Alterative Inhalant, One Bottle of Soothing, Febrifuge Inhalant, One Bottle of Anti-Haemorrhagic Inhalant, One Bottle Concentrated Food, One Bottle of Cough Syrup.

Price of Box containing inhalants to last one month, $10; two months, $18; three months, $25. Send for my treatise, a pamphlet containing large list of patients cured, sent free. Letters of inquiry must contain one dollar to insure answer. Address

ROSADALIS

THE GREAT SOUTHERN remedy for the cure of Scrofula, Scrofulous Taint, Rheumatism, White Swelling, Gout, Goitre, Consumption, Bronchitis, Nervous Debility and all diseases arising from an impure condition of the Blood.

The merits of this valuable preparation are so well known that a passing notice is but necessary to remind the readers of this journal of the necessity of always having a bottle of this medicine among their stock of family necessities.

Certificates can be presented from many leading Physicians, Ministers, and heads of families throughout the South, endorsing in the highest terms.

Dr. R. Wilson Carr of Baltimore says "he has used it in cases of Scrofula and other diseases with much satisfaction."

Dr. T. C. Pugh of Baltimore, recommends it to all persons suffering with diseased Blood, saying it is superior to any preparation he has ever used.

Rev. Dabney Ball of the Baltimore M. E. Conference South says he has been so much benefitted by its use that he cheerfully recommends it to all his friends and acquaintances.

Craven & Co., Druggists, at Gordonsville, Va., say it never has failed to give satisfaction.

Sam'l G. McFadden, Murfreesboro, Tennessee, says it cured him of Rheumatism when all else failed.

Rosadalis is not a secret quack preparation, its ingredients are published on every package. Show it to your Physician and he will tell you it is composed of the strongest alteratives that exist, and is an excellent Blood Purifier. Did our space admit we could give you testimonials from every State in the South and from persons known to every man, woman and child either personally or by reputation.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, postpaid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents.

THE RADIANT.

RADIANT is the name of the new

FIREPLACE STOVE, just improved and patented by Librant McDowell, of Philadelphia.

CALL AND SEE IT.

The improvement consists in shields to prevent the smoking of the windows when kindling fires; also in the damper, so that all the heat may be thrown above or below at pleasure, or distributed between the upper and lower room, when desired.

This is the neatest and most economical stove yet invented.

A general assortment of Grates, Cook Stoves, Parlor Stoves, Radiators, Ranges, Furnises, &c., always on hand, at city prices.

Also, constantly on hand, a full line of Tin Ware, Stove Fixings, and House Furnishing goods.

The public are invited to call and examine my stock before purchasing.
