CARTS! CARTS! CARTS!

FARMERS are respectfully informed that the subscriber is still at his old stand, adjoining the Easton gas works, doing all kinds of farm work, such as making and repairing Carts, Wagons, Plows, Harrows, Rollers, Cradles, Wheat Machines, Corn Shellers, out of the best material and in the most substantial manner. Now is the season for farmers to put their implements in good order, as a man with good tools will do twice the work he can with indifferent tools. All work warranted to give satisfaction. Thankful for past favors, the public are invited to give me a call.

DR. TUTT'S VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS.

DR. TUTT'S PILLS

Increase the powers of Digestion, and excite the absorbents to action, whereby all impurities of the system are carried off.—The old stereotyped opinion that Calomel must be used "to carry off the Bile," has given away before the light of science. The Vegetable Kingdom furnishes a remedy, free from all deleterious effects.

They act as kindly on the tender infant, the most delicate female and infirm old age, as upon the most vigorous system, eradicating every morbific Agent, invigorating the debilitated organs, building up the flagging nervous energies, imparting vigor to body and mind.

Price 25 Cents a Box.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

DR. TUTT'S

IMPROVED HAIR DYE.

This elegant preparation is warranted the BEST IN THE WORLD.

ITS EFFECT IS INSTANTANEOUS.

Imparts no Ridiculous Tints.

Will Remedy the Bad Effects of Inferior Dyes.

PERFECTLY HARMLESS—contains no Sugar of Lead—has no unpleasant odor, and imparts a Natural Glossy Color.

Price one dollar a box—sold by all Druggists.

DR. TUTT'S EXPECTORANT FOR COUGHS, COLDS, &C.

DR. TUTT'S EXPECTORANT

Is composed of Herbal and Mucilaginous products, which have a specific effect upon the Pulmonary organs, penetrating every portion of them. It detaches from the Bronchial or wind Tubes the irritating matter which accumulates, and assists them to throw it off; it mitigates the pain; resists the progress of inflammation, and removes the constriction of the chest.

The Properties of this Elegant Preparation

Are Demulcent, Nutritive, Balsamic, Healing and Soothing. It braces the nervous system, produces refreshing sleep, and relieves gloom and depression of spirits. It is very pleasant to take, causes no nausea, and strengthens the Lungs to resist attacks in the future.

YOU NEED NOT GO TO FLORIDA

To cure your Cough. If you use this Remedy, you can remain at home and enjoy its comforts, a privilege of vast importance to the sufferer from Pulmonary disease.

AVOID CONSUMPTION.

This disease is very insidious in its approach, and its first advance (which is often called a slight cold) should be promptly guarded against.

BEWARE! DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS.

Don't neglect that slight cough, or it will soon get beyond control. The timely use of the Expectorant will prevent much pain and suffering.

Dr. Tutt's Expectorant is a Specific for Croup.

This dread disease requires prompt treatment. No mother should ever be without a bottle of it. It is very pleasant, and children take it readily.

DR. TUTT'S EXPECTORANT

Is the most valuable Lung Balsam ever offered to sufferers from Diseases of the Throat or Chest.

PRICE $1 A BOTTLE, or SIX FOR $5.00.

TURN OUT.

'Mid the hurry and the strife,
And you run the race of life,
Never put your friend to rout;
Never trample on your neighbor—
Though it cost a little labor,
Just "turn out."

It may go against the grain,
It may give your feelings pain
If you put it to the test,
But you'll find the pain but slight—
Pass him gently to the right,
It is best.

Remember that he, too,
May have kindred thought towards you,
And if he should, nothing loath,
Too, resolve to turn aside.
Then the margin will be wide
For you both.

Run and let run, sir to you,
As a maxim, may be new,
And a trivial one, no doubt;
But 'twould save a world of woe,
If we all for friend or foe
Would "turn out."

LIFE IN UTAH.

TRIALS AT CHRISTMAS TIME.

BY MAX ADELER.

Bishop Potts, of Salt Lake City, was the husband of three wives and the happy father of fifteen interesting children.—Early in the winter the bishop determined that his little ones should have a good time on Christmas, so he concluded to take a trip down to San Francisco to see what he could find in the shape of toys to gratify and amuse them. The good bishop packed his carpet-bag, embraced Mrs. Potts one by one and kissed each of them affectionately, and started upon his journey.

He was gone a little more than a week, when he came back with fifteen beautiful mouth-organs in his valise for his darlings He got out of the train at Salt Lake thinking how joyous and exhilarating it would be at home Christmas morning when the whole of those mouth-organs should be in operation upon different tunes at the same moment. But just as he entered the depot he saw a group of women standing in the ladies' room, apparently waiting for him As soon as he approached, the whole twenty of them rushed up, threw their arms about his neck and kissed him, exclaiming:

"Oh, Theodore, we are so—so glad you have come back! Welcome home! Welcome once more to the bosom of your family!" and then the entire score of them fell upon his neck and cried over his shirt and mussed him.

The bishop was surprised and confused. Struggling to disengage himself, he blushed and said:

"Really, ladies, this kind of thing is well enough—it is interesting and all that, but there must be some kind of a—that is an awkward sort of a—excuse me, ladies, but there seems to be, as it were, a slight misunderstanding about the—I am Bishop Potts."

"We know it, we know it, dearest," they exclaimed in chorus, "and we are glad to see you safe at home. We have all been right well while you were away, love."

"It gratifies me," remarked the bishop, "to learn that none of you have been a prey to disease. I am filled with blissful serenity when I contemplate the fact; but really I do not understand why you should rush into this railway station and hug me because your livers are active and your digestion good The precedent is bad; it is dangerous!"

"Oh, but we didn't?" they exclaimed in chorus. "We came here to welcome you because you are our husband."

"Pardon me, but there must be some little—that is to say, as it were, I should think not. Women, you must have mistaken your man."

"Oh no, dearest!" they shouted. We were married to you while you were away!"

"What!" exclaimed the bishop, "you don't mean to say that—"

"Yes, love. Our husband, Wm. Brown died on Monday, and on Tuesday Brigham had a vision in which he was directed to seal us to you; and so he performed the ceremony at once by proxy."

"Th-th-th-th-undef!" observed the bishop, in a general sort of a way.

"And, darling, we are all living with you now—we and the dear children."

"Children! children!" exclaimed Bishop Potts, turning pale, "you don't mean to say that there is a pack of children, too?"

"Yes, love, but only one hundred and twenty-five, not counting the eight twins and the triplets."

"Wha-wha-wha-what d'you say?" gasped the bishop, in a cold perspiration, "one hundred and twenty five! One hundred and twenty-five children and twenty more wives! It is too much—it is awful!" and the bishop sat down and groaned, while the late Mrs Brown and the rest of the brides stood round in a semi-circle and fanned him with their bonnets, all except the red-haired one, and she in her trepidation made a futile effort to fan him with the coal scuttle.

After a while the bishop became reconciled to his new alliance, knowing well that his protests would be unavailing; so he walked home, holding as many of the hands of the brides, as he could conveniently grasp in his, while the red-haired woman carried his umbrella and marched in front of the parade to remove obstructions and to scare small boys.

When the bishop reached the house, he went round among the cradles which filled the back parlor and the second story rooms, and attempted, with such earnestness, to become acquainted with his new sons and daughters, that he set the whole one hundred and twenty-five and the twins to crying, while his own original fifteen stood around and joined in the chorus.

Then the bishop went out and sat on the garden fence to whittle a stick and solemnly think, while Mrs. Potts distributed herself in twenty-three places, and soothed the children. It occurred to the bishop while he mused, out there on the fence, that he had not enough of mouth-organs to go around among the children as the family now stood; and so, rather than seem partial, he determined to go back to San Francisco for one hundred and forty-four more.

So the bishop repacked his carpet-bag and began again to bid farewell to his family. He tenderly kissed all the Mrs. Potts who were at home, and started for the depot, while Mrs. Potts stood at the various windows and waved handkerchiefs at him—all except the woman with the warm hair, and she, in a fit of absentmindedness, held one of the twins by the leg and brandished it at Potts as he fled down the street.

The bishop reached San Francisco, completed his purchases, and was just about to get on the train with his one hundred and forty-four mouth-organs, when a telegram was handed him. It contained information to the effect that the auburn-haired Mrs. Potts had just had a daughter. This induced the bishop to return to the city for the purpose of purchasing an additional organ.

On the following Saturday he returned home. As he approached his house a swarm of young children flew out of the front gate, and ran toward him, shouting: "There's pa! Here comes pa! Oh, pa, we're glad to see you! Hurrah for pa!" etc.

The bishop looked at the children as they flocked around him and clung to his legs and coat, and was astonished to perceive that they were neither his nor the late Brown's. He said, "You youngsters have made a mistake; I am not your father;" and he smiled good-naturedly.

"Oh, yes, you are though!" screamed the little ones in chorus.

"But I say I am not," said the bishop, severely, and frowning; "don't you know where little story-tellers go? It is scandalous to violate the truth in this manner. My name is Potts."

"Yes, we know it is," exclaimed the children—"we know it is, and so is ours; that is our name now too since the wedding."

"Since what wedding?" demanded the bishop, turning pale.

"Why, ma's wedding, of course. She was married yesterday to you by Mr. Young, and we are all living at your house now with our new little brothers and sisters."

The bishop sat down on the pavement and wiped away a tear. Then he asked:

"Who was your father?"

"Mr Simpson," said the crowd, "and he died on Tuesday."

"And how many of his infernal old widows—I mean how many of your mothers are there?"

"Only twenty-seven," replied the children, "and there are only sixty-four of us and we are awful glad you have come."

The bishop did not seem unusually glad; somehow, he failed to enter into the enthusiasm of the occasion. There appeared to be in a certain sense, too much sameness about these surprises, so he sat there with his hat pulled over his eyes and considered the situation. Finally seeing there was no help for it, he rushed up to the house, and forty-eight of Mrs. Potts rushed up to him, and told him how the prophet had had another vision in which he was commanded to seal Simpson's widows to Potts.

Then the bishop stumbled around among the cradles to his writing-desk, where he felt among the gum rings and rattles for his writing paper, and then addressed a note to Brigham, asking him as a personal favor to keep awake until after Christmas. "The man must take me for a foundling hospital," he said. Then the bishop saw clearly enough that if he gave presents to the other children and not to the late Simpson's, the bride relict of Simpson would probably souse down on him, fumble among his hair and make it warm for him. So, re-packing his carpet bag, he started again for San Francisco for sixty-four more mouth-organs, while Mrs. Potts gradually took leave of him in the entry—all but the red-haired woman, who was up-stairs, and who had to be satisfied with screeching good-by at the top of her voice.

On his way home, after his last visit to San Francisco, the bishop sat in the car by the side of a man who had left Salt Lake the day before. The stranger was communicative. In the course of the conversation he remarked to the bishop: "That was a lively little affair up there in the city on Monday."

"What affair?" asked Potts.

"Why, that wedding; McGrath's widow, you know—married by proxy."

"You don't say," replied the bishop, "I didn't know McGrath was dead."

"Yes, he died on Sunday, and that night Brigham had a vision in which he was ordered to seal her to the bishop."

"Bishop" exclaimed Potts, "Bishop! what bishop?"

"Well, you see there were fifteen of Mrs McGrath and eighty-two children, and they shoved the whole lot off on old Potts. Perhaps you don't know him?"

The bishop gave a wild, unearthly shriek, and went into a hysterical fit, and writhed on the floor as if he had hydrophobia. When he recovered, he leaped from the train and walked back to San Francisco. He afterward took the first steamer for Peru, where he entered a monastery and became a celibate.

His carpet-bag was sent to his family. It contained the balance of the mouth-organs. On Christmas morning they were distributed, and in less than two hours the entire two hundred and eight children were sick from sucking paint off them.—A doctor was called, and he seemed so much interested in the family that Brigham divorced the whole concern from old Potts and annexed it to the doctor, who immediately lost his reason and would have butchered the entire family if the red-haired woman and the oldest boy had not marched him off to a lunatic asylum, where he spent his time in trying to arrive at an estimate of the number of his children by cyphering with an impossible combination of the multiplication table and algebra.

A LOVE STORY FROM THE LUNATIC ASYLUM.—While visiting the Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island Miss Loughlan, a lady in charge of one of the female wards, called a reporter's attention to a pretty, fair haired girl about twenty years of age, who had not spoken a word since she entered the asylum, over two years and a half ago. Her name is Lora Beekman, and her insanity was caused by disappointment in love. She was engaged to be married to a young man who, shortly before the appointed wedding day, left her and became engaged to another woman. The keeper, and his assistants have resorted to many expedients to make her speak, but her strange silence remains unbroken. With her arms tightly drawn over her breast, she sits on the same stool and listlessly stares at the walls the whole day long, recognizing nobody, and seemingly unconscious of the presence of others. The most romantic episode in this deranged woman's life is that once a year a young man comes and places a bouquet of flowers in her hands, after which he immediately goes away. The name and residence of this mysterious visitor are unknown.

END OF THE SUSQUEHANNA ICE GORGE.—All possibility of danger from the ice gorge is regarded as past. A small portion of the ice still remains in the river, but it is thought that it cannot now do any damage. The river is still falling. There was a fall of several feet at Columbia the 17th.

A MYTH REVIVED.

A TRUE ROMULUS AND REMUS IN INDIA.

Professor J. H. Steelye, in a letter dated Allahabad, India, November 28, 1872, and published in the Amherst College Standard, tells the following strange story:

"Not far from Agra, in Northern India, is a mission station of the Church Missionary Society, connected with which is an orphanage with several hundred children, now under the efficient care of the Rev. E. G. Erhardt. The region around is infested with wolves, by which every year, numbers of children are carried off and devoured. But in two instances, at least, instead of being killed and eaten, the children have been kept alive and nourished with, if not by, these beasts. Whether the story of Romulus and Remus be a myth or not, this is an actual reality, for the children themselves have been captured from among the wolves and brought to the orphanage above mentioned.—They were both boys, and apparently of some seven or eight years of age when taken. They were found at different times, the last one in March of the present year.

"Some hunters smoking wolves out of a cave were startled when the wolves appeared by the appearance among them of a creature looking strangely human, but running rapidly on all fours like the wolves, though not so rapidly as they. He was caught with difficulty, and there was no mistaking that he was a child of human parentage, but with the habits and actions of a wild beast. The hunters brought him to the orphanage, where he was received and cared for. Though his physical form and features were sufficient to show that he was a Hindoo child, there were no other indications about him of anything human. In all other respects, in the language of Mr. Erhardt, 'a perfect animal.' He had no speech, but a whine. He would wear no clothes, tearing from him everything of the kind whenever put on. He would eat nothing but raw flesh, and when he drank he lapped the water with his tongue. Left to himself he would hide in some dark spot during the day, from which he would come out at night, and prowl about the enclosure, picking up bones, if any were to be found and ravenously gnawing them.

"It at first seemed impossible for him to walk erect, but after much difficulty he was taught to do so, and also to use a fork and a spoon, and to drink like a human being.—Though treated with the utmost care and with great patience and kindness by the Christian hands and hearts which received him, he pined away and died after he had been in the orphanage a little over four months. In all this time he could not be made to utter a word; he was never seen to smile, nor show any signs of joy, or shame, or gratitude. But Mr. Erhardt, who gave me this account, assured me that his face looked more intelligent than the average Hindoo children, and that his color and features indicated that his parentage must have been of a family of high caste.

"The other boy I saw myself, a few days since, at the orphanage, where he was brought about six years ago, having been when captured much as was the first-mentioned boy, and having shown precisely the same habits as belonged to him. He has not yet spoken a word, but has exchanged the whine, which was his only utterance, for sounds expressive of pleasure and, apparently, also of gratitude. He no longer prefers raw flesh for food, but eats bread and fruit with ravenous avidity. He walks erect, but with a strangely awkward gait, throwing out his hands with every step. His hands are perfectly formed, but he uses them awkwardly. A piece of bread tossed to him from a little distance, which he was eager to get, he could not catch, but let it fall clumsily to the ground. He wears clothes, to which he was at first as adverse as the other boy. His forehead is low but his face would hardly be called dull, and certainly not idiotic. His eyes have a wild and restless but not an inquiring look. His jaws are not protruding, and his teeth are well formed and thoroughly human. On his left cheek are scars bearing plainly the marks of teeth, where he must have been fearfully bitten. He has been taught to do some kinds of work, but not faithfully. He seems to have lost all desire to escape. He mingles freely with the other children, among whom he has his favorites. When the boy first mentioned was brought to the orphanage this one was made to understand that he must teach the other how to eat and drink and walk, and much of the improvement of the younger one in these respects seemed due to the efforts of the older one."

THE SHAH IN EUROPE.

The Shah of Persia is going to visit Europe. Not as a private individual; not in chaste simplicity of the civilized garb, black broadcloth, relieved only by a fez cap—as was done by the sultan of Turkey and the Khedive of Egypt—will the modern occupant of the throne of Cyrus and Darius enter upon his western journey. Proud of Persia; proud of her history in the past, from which statesmen, poets, antiquarians, dreamers, lovers, and even children may draw useful lessons; proud, to, of the vast trade which, within late years, has sprung up between Persia and European nations, his Majesty intends his coming visit both as a recaller of the past glory of the realm over which he reigns absolute, and as a pledge of the future greatness which is to crown the land of romance and the cradle of the world. By the splendor of his jewels; by the beauty of his royal robes; by the grandeur of his royal retinue, fitted in all the quaint varieties of the Orient—mollahs, astrologers, sage men, interpreters, and the like—by all these does his Majesty hope to throw down at the feet of Modern Civilization the friendly defiance of an ancient realm. Europe is stirred to the quick at the advance of this magnificent Oriental. The continental courts are making ready with a welcome suited to the dazzling grandeur which will surround him; the scholiasts are burnishing up their knowledge of the Oriental languages, and the belles of civilised society are already beginning to flutter at the approach of the luminary who, from all accounts, will shine on the Western World like a sun, with crown jewels that throw the Koh-i-noor and the great stone of Charlemagne into the shade.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR DINNER.

One of the greatest pieces of extravagance on record in this country is described by a New York correspondent of the Boston Transcript. It occurred on the 17th ult., in the shape of a private dinner given at Delmonico's. A wealthy German importer, who has retired from business, and was about to sail for Europe, decided before leaving America, to invite his friends to dinner. Covers were ordered for seventy-four guests, and carte blanche was given to Delmonico for the dinner. The large banquet hall of that establishment was secured, the same hall where the dinners to Dickens and Tyndall were given, at the rate of fifteen dollars a ticket. For nearly a week the employees of Delmonico's were engaged in preparing for this dinner. A table twenty-four feet wide, extending the whole length of the room, was constructed.—In the centre of it an artificial pond was made, with a fountain, while around the fountain live swans were floating. Of course the pond was caged over. The centre of the table was banked with flowers, from the water's edge, at a cost of over three thousand dollars. Perfume fountains were constructed in various parts of the table, and to add to the intoxication of the senses, Berstein's full band of thirty five pieces was engaged to furnish the music. The dinner commenced at 8 P. M. and continued for a couple of hours, after which dancing took place until after midnight, when the dinner, or supper as it was then called, was resumed for an hour or two, followed by dancing until four o'clock in the morning.—The bill for this dinner amounted to just ten thousand dollars.

DIVORCES are not so readily obtained at Dover as many have supposed. Those who have made the effort are convinced that it is necessary that there must be real and justifiable causes in each case. Beside the cost appears to be considerable in many cases, where counsel have to be employed.—Delaware paper.
