PARTING.

You saw me safely up the hill,
(The day was almost spent,)
And there you told me you must go;
We parted, and you went.

But I stood still and watched the woods
Glow with the setting sun,
And gazed upon the little path
That you were winding down.

And there the spire amongst the trees,
Still in the sunlight gleamed,
But I turned down the other side,
And oh, how dark it seemed?

In dreams how many times since then
I've parted from you so!
My heart dwells on the hilltop yet,
And gazes down below.

UNHEALTHY HOMES.

It is undoubtedly true that the most favorable conditions for healthfulness of mind and body are to be found on the side of country life. Sunshine, pure air, and out door exercise are each conducive to strength of body and length of days. But a feeling seems to exist among many who live in country homes, that by virtue of their naturally healthful surroundings, their outdoor life and occupations, they may safely set at naught the plainest hygenic and sanitary rules. No doubt the pure air, which they cannot help but breathe when out of doors, and the vigorous open air employment, in which they must engage, does tend for a time to counteract the influence of unhealthful habits and improper ways of living. But the imprudent exposures, the improper diet, the lack of cleanliness, the tainted, damp air of sleeping rooms, begin to show their effects before the prime of life is past in many painful and disagreeable ways. Rheumatic and dyspeptic troubles and nervous affections are some of the methods by which nature punishes these transgressors of her laws. It is a fact that diseases coming under the head of those mentioned, are more common in the farming regions than anywhere else. A distinguished medical authority has put it on record that insanity, which so frequently breaks out in farmers' families, is mainly caused by the severe and constant manual labor, with innutritious food, improperly selected or poorly cooked.

In the building of country homes generally very little attention is paid to proper ventilation, drainage and other health considerations. The sleeping rooms are often constructed in utter defiance of the plainest sanitary regulations. Their situation as respects light, heat and ventilation are often quite as bad as circumstances will permit. The living rooms in winter are poorly and irregularly heated, and the inmates are constantly exposed to sudden drafts and chills from open doors and casements.

And as a breeder of disease there are few things that excel the average farmhouse cellar. It underlies the whole house, with nothing to prevent its exhalations rising into the upper rooms except a thin board floor. In this cellar all manner of things for family use are kept the season round. Meat, vegetables, milk, butter, bread, pastry, preserves, pickles and fruit are here stored in their various receptacles. There is very seldom anything to separate the fruit and vegetables from the other parts of the cellar, and there is usually more or less decaying vegetable matter to load the air with poisonous germs. At various seasons of the year the cellar walls collect dampness, or small pools of water lie under their loose board floors, sending up malarious odors into the rooms above.

It is very frequently the case that there is no system of drainage at all, unless the process of nature can be called by that name. The rain water from the eaves, and the slops from the kitchen sink and the dairy house are carried at the most but a few feet away and are then left to sink into the ground or to form festering pools on top at their pleasure. A condition of things that would put the inhabitants of a city block in a panic of alarm, and cause the peremptory interference of the health officers, is suffered to exist for years under the shadow of country homes. Water for family use is often drawn from springs and wells that cannot be otherwise than affected by the surrounding drainage, and especially by their contiguity to the farm yard and other unsavory places

In matters of diet there is the same reckless disregard of the rules of health. In the busy season especially, the meals are eaten hurriedly, with scarcely an interval of rest afterwards for the digestive organs to perform their work.

And there is very much less attention paid to personal cleanliness than considerations of health and comfort would seem to require. This is owing largely to a lack of those facilities for the use of water that are so common in city homes. For people who are employed in fields and around farm yards, toiling and sweating all day, it would seem that frequent and general ablutions would be quite essential. It might not be an easy matter to build country residences with a heating apparatus and hot and cold water pipes, but they might be constructed with a view to proper ventilation and drainage, and it would cost but little more in the beginning to furnish them with bath rooms. The cellar could be arranged with some regard for healthfulness and, at least, kept free of garbage. The barns and other out-houses could be placed at a respectable distance from residences, and the surroundings of the latter might be kept pure and clean. There might be less haste and more manners at the family table and fewer luncheons before retiring at night.

A Tilt with Time.

LADIES in their attempts to baffle old Time are bound to receive some wounds in the encounter. These, however, they can conceal, as far as the complexion is concerned, by a timely and regular resort to the use of "GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP." Without obstructing the pores, or in any way injuring the health of the skin, it removes from the surface pimples, redness, and the various disfigurements caused by increasing age or exposure to the sun. See that "C. N. CRITTENTON, Proprietor," is printed on each packet, without which none is genuine. Sold by druggists and fancy goods dealers.

HILL'S HAIR AND WHISKER DYE, black or brown, fifty cents.

Prof. James A. Sewell, A. M., M. D., of Medical Faculty, Laval University, Quebec, states: "I have found COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC particularly useful in advanced stages of Consumption, Weakness, Dyspepsia, and all Nervous Affections. In pregnant women it has been retained when every other article of food was rejected. I can recommend it as convenient, palatable, and easy of digestion." To the Public, Property Owners and Consumers of House Paints.

During the past ten years every gallon of our paints have been sold under our Positive Guarantee—that any building would be repainted at our expense if not satisfactory for a proper term of years thereafter. In view of the apparently low prices at which cheaply made benzine and water paints are offered, and the difficulty experienced by inexperienced buyers in discriminating between the best paints and paints of inferior character, we now add to our previous guarantee the additional guarantee of cost, thus placing the low price of our paints beyond doubt.

We authorize any dealer to furnish our paints free of cost to any buyer, who having painted his building with our paints, can demonstrate that our paint has not cost 10 per cent. less per paint used, than cost would have been for either pure white lead and linseed oil or any other mixed paint in this country.
