Poetry.

WISTERIA.

The standard-bearer of the Spring,
Lead your squadrons everywhere,
As with courageous front you fling
Your graceful banners to the air.

And if the landscape chance to show
Unsightly rock or ugly wall,
You seek it out and kingly throw
Your royal purple over all.

The boldest lover scarce would climb
As high as you to lady's bower,
Yet, bending low, full many a time
You reach a little child a flower.

The south wind bears your conquering train
Of perfume over towns and farms;
Your marshals are the sun and rain,
The bumble-bees your knights-at-arms.

Each year your sweet invasion brings
The memories of long ago:
And through a thousand future springs
Your flags shall wave, your trumpets blow.

Agricultural.

Lice on Turkeys.

There are, perhaps, no fowls that pay better for the raising than turkeys. They are small consumers, rapid growers, and when matured and fattened, command remunerative prices. The farmer has much to contend with in raising them. They are great wanderers, frequently through the grain fields and meadows of the owner, and even his neighbors. So long as they keep on the home farm, and are regularly fed, they will return for their rations at stated intervals.

Some of the difficulties in raising them are of recent introduction. When young, vermin on the body are a great drawback. This difficulty may in a great measure be avoided, if the mother turkey, or hen, be cleaned once the first week of incubation, and once the week before hatching. This may be done without injury to either the fowl or eggs by the free use of Persian insect powder. Place the powder in the bellows made for that purpose, and raising the feathers blow the powder against the skin on the back, crop, under body, head, neck and wings, and indeed all over the fowl, leaving no place where the lice may lurk. After thoroughly powdered, allow the fowl to go out in the sunshine to shake off the loosened pests and preen the feathers, which she will do before returning. If carefully handled, and accustomed to being handled, the fowl will be none the worse for this operation, which spares much trouble in the future.

When complaints are made in early Spring of hens not laying, but manifesting a tendency for broodness, the cause is an overstock of vermin on the body. It causes young turkeys to be restless and uneasy and hinders growth. It is better to wait until the young poults have commenced to eat well before doctoring them for vermin. The presence of vermin is the root of many difficulties. Adult fowls, if healthy and given dry earth to wallow in, will generally keep themselves clean. Farmers and poultry-keepers must battle with this enemy. It causes the fowls to be restless and uneasy. They can be kept as clean in confinement as out of it.

Straw upon Young Grass.

One of my neighbors covered his timothy and clover seeding with straw which had served as stable bedding, the proportion of dung being small, as the straw was very freely used. This was spread as drawn, during the fore part of last winter, covering part of a field. The open winter favored the application, and called for protection. After the opening of March the severe freezing and thawing were hard upon seeding, lifting the young grass and clover of the unprotected part of the field. Where the straw was applied the seeding came out all in its place and safe. The little dung that went with the straw undoubtedly helped to retain the vigor of the plant; the protection being what was most needed; and this the straw afforded. The case I think is a clear one, showing that straw, or a similar coarse material, is a protection in open winters. It also serves to some extent as a guard against the sun and drouth in summer, and lessens the effect of the early drying winds which not unfrequently occur. It also keeps imparting some fertility till it is decayed, serving much the purpose of aftermath.

Where fields are fed close in the fall, as too many farmers still persist in doing, straw may be put to good use as a substitute for the missing grass. My neighbor thinks that using straw abundantly in all the stables, and applying it on grass lands and winter grain, is the best use to which it can be put. It is also at the same time disposing of the manure, making one job of it. There are those who sell their straw, realizing three to four dollars per ton. He expects to realize more than double that from his straw. Even if snow covers the fields during the winter, protection is needed in the spring, and needed the most. The application therefore may be continued during the entire winter, the snow permitting. In the fall also it may be needed, as the weather then is sometimes very severe.

A late writer gives it as his opinion that if the ease with which the raspberry can be grown were fully appreciated, there would not be a farmer in the country who would not cheerfully set out enough plants to supply his family with as many as they could eat at three meals a day during the season; and that there is not a farmer's wife who would not rather pick the fruit than spend so much time in the hot kitchen, making cakes and pies. The children would come in for their share of the delight, in connection with the care of the plantation.

There is scarcely a better food for poultry, young or old, than sour milk allowed to thicken and with a portion of the whey drained off, or it may be used for wetting dough without separating the whey. Farmers who have a surplus of skimmed milk, or families who keep but one cow, can scarcely do better than to use the surplus for feeding poultry. It will pay better than if fed to swine, as poultry and eggs always bring better prices by the pound than swine flesh.

HALF A CENTURY
Career of this recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world.
What it is To-Day!
Six months ago the American Agriculturist entered upon a new career of prosperity, and to-day it is far superior to any similar periodical ever produced in this or any other country. Richer in editorial strength; richer in engravings; printed on finer paper, and presenting in every issue 100 columns of original reading matter from the ablest writers, and nearly 100 illustrations. Dr. George Thurber, for nearly a quarter of a century the editor-in-chief of the American Agriculturist, Joseph Harris, Byron D. Halsted, Col. M. C. Weld, and Andrew S. Fuller, the other long time Editors, together with the other writers, who have made the American Agriculturist what it is to-day, are still at their posts.

A CARD.
To my Old Patrons and Friends on Miles, Choptank and Wye Rivers.
For the past 30 years I have diligently and faithfully, to the best of my ability endeavored to serve my customers to their entire satisfaction, and this is to inform them and the public generally, that notwithstanding the untrue report that I have sold out and quit, I am still in the boating business and expect to remain in it as long as the public sustains me. The

Schooner DEXTER,
is in complete order, and I am prepared to freight the grain of my customers on Miles river, Wye river, or Choptank, as usual, and respectfully solicit a continuance of their business, ever grateful for past favors. Freights handled carefully and at prices as low as others. All orders promptly attended to.
The Public's Obedient Servant,
GREENBURY MARSHALL.

Livery & Exchange.
FRANKLIN G. WRIGHT, next door to the Easton Star office, informs the public that he now has the Brick Hotel Stables, near his office, and continues to give strict attention to feeding and grooming horses. He has several teams for hire and every facility for transporting travelers to any section of this or adjoining counties. He hopes by strict attention to business, and good care of horses to merit a continuance of the public patronage.
