BEAUTIFUL DAYS.

Splendors of gold and crimson
Pass from the clouded hill;
Shadows fall on the valleys,
Lying so dark and still;
Sadly the autumn's beauty
Fades in a cold, gray haze;
Where have ye drifted from us—
Beautiful days?

Joys that came in the morning,
Rosy with dawning light,
Dreams that we fondly cherished,
Hopes that were fair and bright,
All like the leaves have vanished;
Yet o'er life's wintry ways
Softly your memory lingers—
Beautiful days.

Bright in unchanging beauty
They have hurried on before,
Beckoning us from the shadows
On to the Heaven-lit shore;
Out in the world's cold darkness,
Sending their warm soft rays,
Waiting us—calling us upward—
Beautiful days.

Agricultural.

RAISING FIGS IN THIS CLIMATE.

When Bayard Taylor was alive he had a fig tree growing out of doors at Cedarcroft, in Kennett township, Chester county, Pa., and a short time ago a fig tree was advertised for sale in the Village Record of that county, the seller stating it bore two crops a year. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, writing from Randor, Delaware county, thus tells his success in raising figs out of doors in this latitude: Living in a very exposed situation, I planted the tree in the spring of 1882, in a sheltered northwest wind. I removed all dirt from the roots and in planting, trained all the roots to the north and south letting none grow east or west. As soon as the leaves dropped in the fall, after frost and before hard freezing I dug the earth from the but of the tree cut off any east and west root, and made a shallow trench on the west, then bent the tree over covered it with about six inches of earth, making a mound over it, and laid 2 or 3 boards over to shed water. In the spring, about April 20th, I dug it up, set it upright, and pressed the earth firmly against it. This I have done every year, and every year I have had two crops of figs, the second generally cut short by frost, but a good many maturing. The first crop is the best. The tree is seven or eight feet high, with a spread of branches, probably ten feet in diameter, and has on it probably 200 or 300 figs, but the branches are so flexible that when the leaves are off, they can be drawn into small compass for burying.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

After the fruit, raspberry canes are of no further use, and in due time will die. Some cultivators cut them away as soon as the fruit is off, while others leave them until late in the fall, thinking that the old canes may contribute something to the growth of the new ones that are to bear fruit next year. The best cultivators cut away the canes soon after fruiting.

The price of milk and butter naturally have some relation to each other, and thus bogus-butter manufacturer has worked against the milkman. It requires on the average eight or nine quarts of milk to produce a pound of butter. Hence, milk sold at four cents wholesale cannot be made into butter at less than thirty to thirty five cents a pound.

The cob of green, sweet corn has considerable value as food. Until the corn ripens much that should go to making the grain is stored in the cob. Cows eat them greedily, and even the cob of green corn is an improvement on the pasture feed at th's season. The husks a.e also very nutritious and sweet while green.

With trees and grass both drawing or the soil, the grass can not make the rich est feed. The shade of the trees prevents the full development of the naturally rich juices in the grass, and if cows fill themselves on this innutritious food they will need a grain ration to keep up the flow of milk.

Butter takes nothing from the soil that affects its fertilization as does crops of cereals. It is almost wholly carbon, which is derived by the plants from the air. Butter, though sometimes high in price is really produced from the cheapest element known.

Irregularity in the amount of food given the cow will cause her sometimes to gradually dry up. So will worrying, fast driving, or excitement of any kind. An animal giving milk is very sensitive to bad treatment or surrounding influences.

After cream become sour, the more ripening the more it depreciates. The sooner it is then skimmed and churned the better, but it should not be churned while too new. The best time for skimming and churning is just before acidity becomes apparent.

A correspondent of Country Gentleman says that a cow which at home will test up to a fourteen pounds of butter standard, if taken to a strange place, among strange cattle, and milked by a cross man, will not make half the quantity.

To have fine pears they should be picked when the early specimens begin to drop from the tree rather freely, or some ten days before the main crop would fall. They should be free from rain or dew and be planted very carefully.

The experiment of burying manure fifteen inches deep has been tried. It was never heard from in the succeeding crops. All experience proves that it is better to have the manure as fine as possible and applied on the surface for the wheat crop.

To make the finest flavored and longestkeeping butter, the cream must undergo a ripening process by exposure to the oxyge of the air while it is rising. The ripening is very tardy when the temperature is low.

While milk is standing for cream to rise the purity of the cream, and consequently the fine flavor and keeping of the butter, will be injured if the surface of the cream is exposed to air much warmer than the cream.

The way to grow red raspberries, and to get the best and the largest fruit with the most of it, is to grow them in hills, cultivated both ways up to the time the fruit turns red.

The authorities of Denver, Col., drove the gamblers from the city; the value of property immediately went down, and the place is said to be in a state of collapse.

The Star Joker.

A Gas-Crank.

The Boston gentleman who recently defined a crank as a person who hold opinion which are opposed to those of his set, might find in the history of inventions many illustrations of his irionical definition.

When, in 1792, Murdock, the iron founder, lighted his house and offices with gas, he was called a wizard, the then equivalent for crank. In 1808 Winzer, a German, proposed to light London with gas. Ridicule rained down upon him, and one of the most boisterous of the laughing throng was Sir Humphrey Davy, the inventor of the safety-lamp.

Those who looked upon the project as the dream of a crank predicted all sorts of injurious results should gas be used as a light. No one would be able to pass a gaslamp without holding his nose or risking suspended animation. Houses would be blown up by the dangerous mixture, and London would be uninhabitable.

The company which proposed to introduce the novel light had an office, in front of which gas lamps were shown lighted, to the public. A picture, satirizing the foolish objections to its use, represented a gentleman as standing under the lamp and explaining the light to a lady:

"The coals, being steamed, produce tar or paint for the outside of houses; the smoke, passing through water, is deprived of substance, and burns as you see."

"Arrah, honey!" exclaims an Irishman, overhearing this luminous explanation, "if this man brings fire through water, we shall soon have the Thames and Liffey burnt down, and all the pretty little herrings and whales burnt to cinders."

Wise as a Serpent.

He had a back-load of feather-dusters as he rang the door-beel on Montcalm street east, and when a woman opened the door about two inches and said that nothing was wanted, he inquired:

"Madam, will you kindly inform me who lives next door?"

"Next door?" she inquired, coming out on the step. "Why, it's a new family, and I don't remember the name?"

"Lady puts on a good deal of style, doesn't she?"

"Rather."

"I thought so. That's the way with those sort of people; they put it all on their backs. I asked her if she didn't want a duster to dust off her upholstered furniture and bric-a brac, and she slammed the door in my face. She didn't have any dust, you see. People who have plush furniture and articles of vertu and taste always want my goods. Pleasant day, madam!"

"Y-e-s. What did you say the price was?"

"Seventy-five cents, madam, and the woman next door is peering through the parlor blinds at us."

"Is she? Well, I'll take one, and if there should be any other invention to dust bric-a-brac and oil paintings you might call around. You may also bring me a box of polish for my silverware."

"When I was abroad," remarked McSquint, "I—" "You what," exclaimed Robb, "when you were abroad? Why, hang it, I have known you all of your life and to my certain knowledge you have never been out of Arkansas. I wouldn't bet that you were ever fifty miles from Little Rock." "You will please excuse me," continued McSquint, "but I'll bet you $25 that I went out of the United States some time ago." "I'll take you. Put up." The money was given to a stakeholder. "Now," said Robb, "can you prove your assertions?" "I said that I had been out of the United States, didn't I?" "Yes." "Well, I have." "When?" "In 1861, when Arkansas went out of the Union." The bet was decided in McSquint's favor.

Here is a good Irish story—we fancy it has not been in print before. A pair of "victims" are waiting behind a hedge for their landlord—guns loaded, cocked and ready for action. It is past the time at which he was expected to go by. Still they wait, and wait, until at last they become uneasy.

"Bedad, Pat," says Tim, "I hope nothin' has happened to the poor ould jintleman!"—Whitehall Review.

An Arkansas politician was approached by a man who said; "Colonel, please give me a nickle; I want to cross the river."—"Haven't you got a nickle?" "No, sir." "I won't give you one. A man who hasn't a nickel is just as well off on this side of the river as the other. Now, if you had money enough to establish yourself in business after crossing I'd give you a nickle."

Dr. Hawks, an eloquent and popular New York divine, once asked the vestrymen of his church to increase his salary because of his increased family expenses. "Don't trouble yourself," said the vestrymen, "the Lord has said, He will care for the young ravens when they cry." "I know that," said the clergyman, "but nothing is said about the young Hawks."

"See here," said a fault-finding husband to his wife, "we must have things arranged in this house so that we shall know just where everything is kept." "With all my heart," she sweetly answered, "and let us begin with your late hours, my love; I should dearly like to know where they are kept." He lets things run on as usual.

In Spain a village priest preaching on the miracle of the loaves and fishes made a mistake, saying that five thousand loaves and fishes sufficed for five persons. "And did they not suffer from indigestion?" asked a wag of the priest after the sermon was over. "No," replied the latter, not to be outwitted; "therein consisted the miracle!"

It Was The Cat.

First servant—"I'm going to quit."
Second servant—"What's the matter?"

"What constitutes burglary?" Student—"There must be a breaking." Professor—"Then, if a man enters your door and takes five dollars from your vest pocket in the hall, would that be burglary?" Student—"Yes, sir, because that would break me."

In October fall over coats.

The family of Hon. W. A. Hoke, Judge of the Jefferson County, Ky., Court, used St. Jacobs Oil with signal success.

Miscellaneous.

Valuable Farm for Sale

The subscriber offers for sale, and on easy terms, a farm of 300 acres, situate on Choptank river.
The soil is a rich loam and adapted to the growth of wheat, corn, hay, clover, vegetables and fruits.
Within the last four years it has had 15,000 Bushels of Lime
spread upon it, which the purchaser will reap the advantage of.
As a site for a first-class
PEACH FARM
it is not excelled by any place on the peninsula.
It has a bold water front of two miles and steamboats passing and repassing daily. No distance to haul produce, and little expense in shipping.
The farm is improved by a two-and-a-half story brick mansion, 34x39 feet, with 8 large rooms and a large hall on each floor, and a frame addition 18x32 feet, ample farm buildings, and a frame tenement house of six rooms.
There is a splendid shad and herring fishery on the shore. Rock and perch fish in abundance. Game incident to the country abound in the neighborhood.
A private avenue runs from the public road through the farm to the river.
The place will beautifully divide into four farms, giving 200 acres to each, with sufficient wood and grazing marsh for each.
This farm is located near the projected airline railroad from Salisbury to Baltimore.
It is offered at a great bargain, and only because it is owned by a gentleman not engaged in farming, and who is unable to give it his personal attention. Possession given January 1st, 1887.
The subscriber will be pleased to show the property to any one wishing to see it, and give all necessary information as to terms of sale.
