THE EASTON STAR.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1887.

T. H. ROBSON, Editor.

L. JEFF WILBOURNE & CO., Manager Advertising Agents, Baltimore, Md., are authorized to contract for advertisements for THE STAR, at our best rates.

CLOSE observers admit that there is very little, if any, abatement of drinking in towns and districts, where local option laws are in force. Those who are disposed to drink alcoholic liquors manage to obtain all they want, as easily where their sale is prohibited as where the liquor traffic is licensed. And not only are liquors obtained in the prohibited places, but drunkenness prevails to an alarming extent. The reason of this is manifest. Before prohibition was introduced, temperance people exerted themselves by moral suasion to induce people to abstain from the use of intoxicating drinks. The dangers arising from their indulgence were graphically set forth, and the "tetotle" pledge was freely used as a means to prevent indulgence. While the evils arising from drinking were set forth in their most glaring forms, and the consciences appealed to, to aid the cause of temperance, the moral atmosphere created because so powerful that it was next to impossible for respectable people to indulge to excess without feeling a sense of degradation that superinduced reform. All that has really been done for the cause of temperance has been done by moral suasion. It has cured thousands of the habit of drinking, and prevented other thousands from imbibing the habit. It created a sentiment against the use of strong drinks, and this sentiment became a law of society which made people temperate; a law stronger than any prohibition law ever enacted.

On the other hand, where prohibition prevails, the local option law is alone relied upon for the suppression of intemperance. There is no appeal to the conscience of the drinker; there is no attempt made to improve his moral nature; there is no arousing of his religious sensibilities against indulging in intoxicants; moral suasion is given to the winds, and the law is looked upon as all sufficient to reform the old, and to prevent the young from indulging in the dangerous habit of drinking.

As we remarked in the beginning of this article, observation proves that prohibition legislation has failed to do what moral suasion was doing before the advent of the local option laws. Drinking has increased, and drunkards have multiplied, even where they are most rigidly enforced.

It is manifest that if intemperance is to be arrested, and the young are to be restrained from indulging in the intoxicating bowl, the friends of temperance must fall back upon moral suasion. They must begin where they left off, when the local option laws were introduced. People can no more be legislated into habits of temperance than they can be made religious by penal laws. The desired good in both cases must be accomplished by educating the moral sense of men and appealing to their religious sentiments. Where the indulgence of the habit of excessive drinking has gone so far as to deaden the conscience, and cause the sufferer to lose his self-respect, there is little hope of reformation, for the local option system offers no moral support in his reclamation. It is sad to think, that chances are as nine to one against reformation in all such unfortunate cases. The local option treatment is as cold as an icicle, and utterly lacking in human sympathy. It simply divides a community into opposing factions, kept alive by a constant war of crimination and recrimination. The invitation of the sincere temperance preacher to come together and hear the truth of the matter as of old, is regarded but as a tactical movement to decoy those opposed to local option laws into the local option camp, and is stigmatized as a trick of the enemy to raise new recruits for a waning faction. It virtually places those who need the sympathy of association, and the stimulus of fervid oratory to bring them back to reason, beyond the pale of such moral treatment. This is a most unfortunate state of affairs, considering that drinking, especially among the young men, who have never been brought under the reformatory or restraining power of temperance oratory is on the increase.

It was not so under the old moral suasion treatment. There was no prejudice then against attending temperance meetings; drinking men and temperance men together thronged the assembly, attracted by the eminence of eloquence of the speakers. The influence was healthful and strengthening; the latent conscience of the drinking man was aroused into life, his reason was appealed to; the truths enunciated were admitted without controversy; and the force of example influenced the unfortunate to take the pledge and abstain from indulgence. There was such a wholesome moral atmosphere created in the community as rendered it almost impossible for the self respecting young men to become drunkards.

We are grieved to say, the moral atmosphere does not appear to improve under the local option treatment, and that there is a very great need today, in local option communities, of a return to the old moral suasion methods. It is the only treatment that can cure or prevent the evil of excessive indulgence in intoxicating drinks. Without pursuing the subject further at this time, we commend it to the calm consideration of thoughtful temperance men.

PINKERTON'S detectives have succeeded, after a long chase, in running down and capturing the gang of train robbers that robbed Adams Express Company, some time ago, of some $60,000 on the train between Kansas City and Leavenworth. $40,000 of the money was recovered. The names of the robbers are Frederick Witrock (Jim Cummings) who did the robbing, W. W. Haight, who planned the job, Thomas Weaver, a friend of Witrock's, Edward Kinney, Witrock's brother-in-law, and Oscar Cook, who hid Witrock after the robbery and distributed the boodle. The robbers are all in limbo. It has not transpired that Frotheringham was an accomplice in the robbery. It is admitted that the discovery and arrest of the thieves was a very clever piece of detective work.

THE "Bingusters'" convention meets in Baltimore on the 12th. An effort will be made to rope in the farmers, and use them to help smash the Democratic party; but it is not likely that many of the Democratic farmers will fall into the trap set for them.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is reported as being very much amused over the newspaper accounts of his fright at Senator Logan's death, by rheumatism. Col. Lamont says the President is perfectly well with the exception of the rheumatism in his knee.

Burial of Senator Logan.

Gen. John A. Logan, the Senator from Illinois, whose death on Sunday week was noticed in last Tuesday's STAR, was buried last Friday. The funeral services was held in the Senate chamber, and he was buried in the City Cemetery at Washington. Gen. Logan was an officer in the Mexican war, and a General officer on the Union side in the late civil war. He was esteemed as a brave soldier and a hard fighting general. He was the Republican candidate in 1884 on the Republican ticket with James G. Blaine and was a prominent Republican candidate for the presidential nomination in 1888. West of New York, he was even more popular in his party than Mr. Blaine, and had a good showing for the presidential nomination over Blaine in 1888. His death has upset the calculations of a great many Republican politicians, and it is now uncertain who will be the western favorite for president in the next Republican national convention. Gen. Logan was but 60 years old, and he died of an attack of rheumatism before the country at large knew of his sickness. A great many distinguished men of both parties attended his funeral.

War Prospects.

Russia is said to be concentrating a large army on the Austrian frontier, and the latest news from the East looks very warlike. Hostilities may commence at any time, and the general opinion in Europe is, that war cannot be deferred longer than February. The French Secretary for war has been forced by public sentiment at Paris to largely curtail his extraordinary war estimates. This looks more pacific. And there is also a strong opposition in Germany to granting the large increase of the German army asked for by Bismark. Montenegro has mobilized her army of sixty thousand and is ready to help Russia when she invades Bulgaria.

TRADE is the very life of the civilized world. Free trade is the motor power that causes trade to diffuse wealth and comfort throughout its ramification. Protection, socalled, is an embargo on trade. It is a prohibition of exchange, and says a man shall not buy and sell to the best advantage. It is barbarism planting its battlements in the heart of civilization, to prevent trade from flowing in natural channels, and making consumers buy in the highest market, and producers sell in the cheapest market. Trade should not be fettered, but encouraged. The more free it is, the better it is for the producer and consumer, the rich and the poor, and especially is it the best thing for working men.

Whiskey That Does Not Make Drunk Come.

A New York paper announces, that a chemist of that city has discovered the process of extracting the ethers from whiskies which cause them to produce intoxication, at the same time leaving the natural taste and the exhiliarating qualities of the liquor. It is said a man may drink a quart of the purified fluid without it producing any more effect upon the brain or knees, than would the imbibing of a couple of glasses of lager beer. This is news indeed! What a glorious future is here promised for local optionists. No doubt the dryest will be the first off for Gotham, when the article is put upon the market.

COL. WILLIAM KIMMEL, ex-member of Congress, and ex-State Senator, died in Baltimore last week. Col. Kimmel was formerly a Republican, but represented the 3rd Md District in Congress as a Democrat. He was elected State Senator as a Republican, but went with Gov. Swann at the time the Democratic emancipation measures, including the new constitution bill, were passed in the legislature in 1867. Honor to his memory.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has lately had another attack of rheumatism, but was so much better on Saturday that he was able to hold his New Year's reception.

IT is most unfortunate for the Democratic party, that it has not at the present time a leader in Congress or the country, whose word is law to the party. The Federalists had their Alexander Hamilton, the Democratic Republicans had their Thomas Jefferson, the Whigs their Henry Clay, the Democrats their General Jackson, the Republicans their Abraham Lincoln and Thaddeus Stevens, and now their James G. Blaine, but the Democrats have no leader for the Democratic masses to look up to for guidance as the embodiment of Democratic principles. Can a party live and be successful under such circumstances? Samuel J. Tilden in a measure came up to the standard, but Mr. Tilden is dead. Each of the present Democratic leaders has a crotchet of his own, not in accord with the views of the masses which precludes successful leadership. Randall is wedded to protection with a large majority of his party against him. Cleveland is for suppressing the coinage of silver with his party in Congress against him. Morrison is for free trade with a large fraction of his party for protection. Bayard is for withdrawing the greenbacks and contracting the currency in opposition to a large majority of his party. Carlisle might fill the bill of fare, were he not a negative character, almost afraid to open his mouth, lest he might say something that might affect his popularity. Samuel S. Cox is a good and a sound man, but he is unfortunately a joker, and when he speaks those who hear him are looking out for the joke rather than taking the law from his utterances. The Democratic party has no national leader, and yet it has a hundred too many, which is much worse off than none. In this respect the party is in a bad way; much worse off than the Republican party.

We earnestly recommend our readers to give up the use of poisonous hair preparations, as they too frequently produce, first, headache, and afterwards, more serious complaints. Use a restorer entirely harmless, and such a one Nattans' Crystal Discovery certainly is.

Cluverius, who is sentenced to be hung at Richmond, Va., on the 14th inst., is still fighting for his life. His last hope is, that the members of the Virginia legislature may intercede for him and have his sentence commuted to imprisonment for life. Under the present constitution of Virginia, the Governor has no power to pardon any one sentenced to death.

"Consumption can be Cured."

Dr. J. S. COMBS, Owensville, Ohio, says: "I have given SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites to four patients with better results than seemed possible with any remedy. All were hereditary cases of Lung disease, and advanced to that stage when Coughs, pain in the chest, frequent breathing, frequent pulse, fever, and Emaciation. All these cases have increased in weight from 16 to 28 lbs., and are not now needing any medicine. I prescribe no other Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, Lime, and Soda, but Scott's, believing it to be the best."

"SOME REASONS WHY WOMEN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY ARE LESS BEAUTIFUL THAN MOTHER EVE."

Mrs. Jenness Miller will be introduced to the Easton public,

Wednesday, Jan'y 5th,

AT

MUSIC HALL,

when she will deliver the above Lecture, which is replete with suggestions as to a correct and healthful dress for women. Mrs. Miller has devoted many years of her life to the consideration of this important matter, and is now prepared to lay before the public the results of her efforts. She treats her subject in a popular and entertaining manner, instructive alike to women and men who are interested in the physical welfare of their race.

TICKETS, 50 Cents Each.

No Extra Charge for Reserved Seats.

May now be found at Music Hall, or at M. M. Higgins' shoe store, on the evening of the lecture.

Sangston's Jewelry Store,

OR

Larrimore's Dry Goods Store.

Mrs. Miller is an experienced and accomplished speaker and has received the endorsements of the public press throughout the country, as may be seen from the following notices of lectures previously given:

Boston, Daily Evening Traveller:—Mrs. Miller was greeted by an audience at Tremont Temple yesterday afternoon that filled every seat and many were standing—there being over 2500 present. She was frequently applauded, and the large audience listened attentively to the end. Her remarks were logical and convincing.

Pittsburg (Pa.) Leader:—Such was the satisfaction which the lecture gave that the audience, by a rising vote, asked her to come back and give another lecture. Her oratorical powers are uncommonly good, her gestures very graceful; her utterances distinct; her choice of language excellent; her style highly pleasing; her appearance on the rostrum quite queenly; her manner of delivery attractive and forcible. She deals in thoughts of the highest order, which she expresses with freshness and beauty that make it easy and delightful to grasp.

Brooklyn, Daily Times:—Mrs. Jenness Miller makes a pleasing appearance on the platform, and speaks in a forcible and effective manner.

Springfield, Republican, Mass.: — Mrs. Miller is a handsome woman, and young—possessed of natural oratorical powers unequalled by any other woman on the platform at the present time

New York Herald:—Mrs. Miller is beautiful, logical and eloquent.

New York Graphic:—Mrs. Miller denounces woman's dress as responsible for most physical ills burdening them, and ridicules its deformities which masquerade under the name of "style." She practically illustrates the absurdity of the pretense that women must wear corsets, bustles, bones, steels, petticoats and all the rest to look well, by clothing herself most gracefully and becomingly without these things; and armed cap-a-pie with arguments based upon reason and physiological truth, which men at least will applaud, she goes forth to a battle with fashion, the end of which is not yet, though it is confidently whispered that the ultra fashionable lady admits beauty and grace in this new departure, impossible to the stiff-laced bodice and general bundlesomeness of the old style, and agrees to accept the innovation as fast as she can get the courage up. Meantime the work being done by Mrs. Miller will receive the sanction of the thoughtful everywhere, for it is not to be doubted that women expend far too much vital energy in carrying about useless and ungraceful clothing.

Its Policies are non-forfeitable.

Its interest receipts in 1885 were more than sufficient to pay all death losses and general office expenses.

This Company has just paid a loss of $3,000.00 to Mrs. Annie V. Jones, on the life of her late husband, Benjamin F. Jones, of Easton, Md.

AT LAST.

Seeing the necessity of a Flour and Feed Store in Easton, the undersigned has the assurance to try the experiment. We propose to make a specialty of it alone. Having an experience of some 40 years in the business, we think we can safely say that we can supply the demands of this community. We will keep at all times Flour of the best grades manufactured in the United States at close prices. Buying direct from the manufacturer, we are prepared to offer inducements never before met with.

Also, Bran, Brown Ship, White Ship, Sifted Meal, Chop, Cotton Seed Meal, Oil Cake Meal, Farina, Prepared Wheat, Wheaten Grits, Graham Flour, Hominy, &c. We are also in condition to handle choice Cecil county Hay, bought from first hands.

We will shortly put upon this market a brand of Flour, to be known as the "Pride of Easton," manufactured expressly for us.

A call solicited at the
