YOU can be cured
OF RHEUMATISM by using
RUSSIAN RHEUMATISM CURE.
It is not a cure-all. It cures nothing but Rheumatism, but it is a safe and sure cure for that disease. Thousands who have been cured will testify to its reliability.
MR. G. B. ULMER, of 1631 N. 12th St., Philada., wrote four months after he had been cured by the Russian Rheumatism Cure (without his knowledge or return), saying he was bedridden with the disease, and thought he would lose his reason from the agony he suffered. He procured a bottle of the Cure, and by this remedy, although he had his home physician, the only medicine he ever took, was restored to health by trying this wonderful remedy.
MR. OSCAR LEE, Lemon and Morris Sts., Phila., said: "My wife was bedridden, and her condition made us despair. Doctors and everything else failed. The Russian Rheumatism Cure restored her to our arms."

THE TOAD.
Oh, a queer little chap is the honest old toad,
A funny old fellow is he;
Living under the stone by the side of the road,
'Neath the shade of the old willow tree.
He is dressed all in brown,
From his toe to his crown,
Save his vest, that is silvery white.
He takes a long nap in the heat of the day,
And walks in the cool, dewy night.
"Yaup, yaup," says the frog,
From his home in the bog;
But the toad he says never a word.
He tries to be good,
Like the children who should
Be seen, but never be heard.
When winter draws near Mr. Toad goes to bed,
And sleeps just as sound as a top,
But when May-blossoms follow the soft April showers,
He comes out with a skip, jump and hop.
He changes his dress
Only once, I confess,
Every spring, and his old worn-out coat,
With trousers and waistcoat, he rolls in a ball,
And stuffs the whole thing down his throat.
"K-rruk, k-rruk," says the frog,
From his home in the bog;
But the toad, he says never a word.
He tries to be good,
Like the children who should
Be seen, but never be heard.
His legs are long, and he leaps when he walks,
Outstepping us all at a bound;
He wears both his eyes on the top of his head.
Queer place for one's eyes to be found!
You may think him a fright,
And of course you are right;
But his ugliness I would defend,
For he dines on the bugs that destroy the sweet flowers,
He's the gardener's assistant and friend.
"Yaup, yaup," says the frog,
From his home in the bog;
But the toad, he says never a word.
He tries to be good,
Like the children who should
Be seen, but never be heard.

THE REVIVAL OF SHEEP.
It is but a short time since some of our sheep farmers were feeling very much depressed about the condition of their industry, and declaring prices were too low to permit any hope of prosperity. The wise among them, however, kept right along in the same road they had been accustomed to travel, making no change beyond cutting of necessary expenses, the bestowal of little more care upon the flock, and the rasing and improvement of its general standard by the weeding out of inferior animals and breeding up the remainder. There has been a turn in the tide, which always comes sooner or later: prices have revived, and the men who have good sheep are among the happiest and most complacent to be found anywhere. The range of prices the past year has been quite discouraging also to farmers who have been accustomed to sell cattle at much better prices than have been recently current, but really there is nothing in the present outlook or situation to justify any distrust or alarm about the average and almost uninterrupted profit of beef production. Possibly other and more enduring causes would have operated in the direction of lower prices, for beef was really higher in price than any other agricultural product; but much of the swift decline was undoubtedly due to the unusual drought which prevailed over large sections of country, and which forced an unusual number of thin cattle to be offered for sale while the most important class of buyers of this discription of cattle, with the prospect of short feed before them, were to a large degree out of the market. Whatever of value is lost from this cause will be restored in the natural working of the market, and the number of thin cattle sent forward last fall may likely be found influencing the market for two years to come in the way of diminished supplies. The cattle interests are in no danger of such a long pull as the sheep industry has encountered, for while people in a fit of economy may continue to wear their last season's clothes their dinners must be provided every day. So cattle-growers should keep right along, in full confidence that they are secure from anything like prolonged depression in their business, which must ever be regarded as the most important and lucrative industry of the farm. If at any time current values should fall below the average it is likely that some inferior animals will cease to pay their way, in which case they should be relentlessly weeded out. The best animals will always bring the largest returns; if nothing pays they will come the nearest to it of any; if there is only a little money to be made it is from the best animals that it will come; and if prices are good it is the best cattle that first catch the breeze and ride on the top wave, almost turning car-loads into fortunes. No matter what comes, therefore, let the work of improving the character of the farm stock knows no interruption, and the lower the price the higher the standard to which the farmer should breed, and the more important will be the result of improvement.—Breeder's Gazette.

Managing a Cross Bull.
A bull may be blindfolded so that he can see to feed, but is unable to pursue or attack persons, in this manner: A a piece of thin sole leather is cut into proper form and fitted with two strrps one to go around the horns and the other to fasten under the throat. This shield is cut long enough to reach the middle of the face and be curved enough to premit the animal to see the ground. This may be won at all times, as it will not interfere with his useful ness in any respect. A savage bull is effectively tamed by removing the horns near to the skull. It is not a serious operation; the horns are simply sawed off and the stump covered with a pitch plaster until they heal. They are to be cut close to the head.—New York Times.

FARM NOTES.
The best time to apply ashes to grass land is early in spring. The quartity should vary with the needs of the soil, and this can be determined only by experience, some soils requiring much less than others according to their composition; but the usual amount is twenty to fifty bushels per acre. Occasionally much larger applications have been found useful. It is best to try different quantities in different parts of the same field, and measure the result on the crops.
It has been repeatedly shown that the amount of butter that can be obtained from milk by any of the ordinary processes is no guide to the amount of fat that may be in the milk. Hence to assume that a poor butter cow may not be a good cheese cow, or that she necessarily gives poor milk, is a gross error.
When wheat is sown on very dry soil the condition may be greatly improved by thoroughly harrowing the field, which will bring the seed in close contract with earth reduced to the finest tilth, fitted to recieve and condense atmospheric vapor until the requisite moisture for germination is obtained.
No particular variety of fruit will suit all sections. Choice is a local question, varying on each side of a creek, between two seasons or two different and equally correct methods of treatment. Hence choice can only be made of those varieties that have been tried and tested.
Good tillage is the strongest weapon with which the farmer can fight hard times and gain success. Imperfect culture, on the other hand, will scarcely enable him to gain a living from the richest soil, and the soil will deteriorate rapidly in quality from such treatment besides

The Star Joker.

An Earnest Letter.
"Old time" people, who not live near postoffices, are not promptest of correspondents. The following is a letter from a mother to her son;
"MY DEAR HENRY—We recieved your letter year before last, and I seat myself this bright morning to answer it. We killed hogs last week, and are now living on the fat of the land. Your Uncle Emanuel fell and hurt his hip last year, but he is improving. Your pa's health with the exception of a little dab of rheumatism now and then, is first rate. Your Aunt Patsy has had mighty bad luck with her young chickens, and your Uncle Rubin is dead. We had a big revival here last month, and Gabe Bradley was one of the converts, and he has quit selling licker. Mose foster is dead. We have had a good deal of rain and dry weather since I wrote to you last. First we have drouth, and then rain, and both of them, it 'peared like, never come together. Your Cousin Anderson Scroggins is dead Your pa had afuss with old man Buck last week, and the doctors say that Buck may get well Your pa ain't got but one ear, but I am glad to say that his hearing is not affected. Your Aunt Rose is dead. Write to me and tell me all you know. Wil send you a sack of meat as soon as we kill hogs again"

Getting Toboggan Points.
"What is this toboggan business we read so much about in the papers?" he asked in a Grand River avenue store the other day, as he and his wife stood warming their hands at the stove.
"Why, a toboggan is a high platform with an icy slide running down."
"Yes."
"You get up there with your sled, take a pretty girl on for a partner, and down you go like greased lightning."
"Girls are willing, are they?"
"Oh; yes."
"Lots of 'em around?"
"Dozens of 'em."
"Any toboggans nigh here?"
"Now, that's enough!" said the wife, as she turned on him. "If there was twenty toboggans between here and the City Hall you'd go right along and sell them butter and eggs, and then jog home with me without a slide!"
"Yes, I reckon I'd have to," remarked the old man with an awful sigh, and then he changed the subject to brown sugar and baking powder.

Ages of Chinese Children.
The Chinese do not reckon their age from the day of their birth, but from New Year's day. It is on this account sometimes difficult to find out the true age of young children. Here is a tiny shaved-headed bundle of humanity, scarcely able to stand alone for a moment, and you are gravely assured that he is three years old! If you have left the sacret rules of propriety at home, you venture mildly and politely to cast just a faint shadow of doubt upon the statement; or if you do not discredit the parent's assertion but are still unacquainted with the mode of reckoning, you probable condole with its parents on the slight degree of pregress he has made toward maturity. Should a child arrive in this world at 11 55 on New Year's eve, the fond father will proudly assure you the next morning that the new arrival is two years old, and never so much as think that what he says is untrue.

Mr. Barnes' Wig.
A Methodust minister tells this story: Rev. William Barnes was an Irishman, noted equally for his power and his eccentricities. He wore a shirt collar of stupendous size, and a curly wig. The latter article of decoration was the subject of some unfriendly criticism, and, this coming to his ears, he prefaced his Sunday sermon with the following remarks: "Braithren, I understand ther's some of ye that don't like it because I wear a wag. Now, I've made up my mind to wear it or not jist as the congregation says. Here I am: look at me. This is Billy Barnes with the wig. And this,"—at the same time snatching the offending wig from the top of his bald pate,—"this is Billy Barnes without the wig? Which way will ye have him?" In the roars of laughter and vociferous responses—"Brother Barnes with the wig!"—that ensued, the wig critics of old Union were utterly discomfited.

A Case of Conjugal Fidelity.
A merchant of Athens was recently captured by Greek brigands who carried him off to the mountains, whence he wrote a letter to his wife recounting his misfortunes, 'and containing the following most impotant passage: "My ransom is fixed at 1,000 drachmas; if the brigands do not recieve this sum by the 15th instant they will cut off my nose; the 16th my ears; the 17th my upper lip; the 18th my lower lip. and the 19th, if the money is not forthcoming, they will kill me." The poor woman used her best efforts to procure the required amount, but it was not until the evening of the 18th that she had managed to scrape together the 1,000 drachmas for her husband's ransom. She then said to a neighbor: „My husband must look like a perfect fright by this time. I think I will keep the 1,000 drachmas to make a better match.

A correspondent writes: "I am in love with a young lady, but too bashful to propose. Who can help me out?" We should say her father could; that is, if you happen to stay too late.—New Haven News.

"You cannot have hearts, as you do rooms. You cannot have thoughts as you do books. Those you love only come nearer to you when you go away from them."—Geo. Macdonald.

Valuable Farm for Sale
The subscriber offers for sale, and on easy terms, a farm of 300 acres, situate on Choptank river.
The soil is a rich loam and adapted to the growth of wheat, corn, hay, clover, vegetables and fruits.
Within the last four years it has had 15,000 Bushels of Lime
spread upon it, which the purchaser will reap the advantage of.
As a site for a first-class
PEACH FARM
it is not excelled by any place on the peninsula.
It has a solid water front of two miles and steamboats passing and repassing daily. No distance to haul produce, and little expense in shipping.
The farm is improved by a two-and-a-half story brick mansion, 34x39 feet, with 8 large rooms and a large hall on each floor, and a frame addition 18x32 feet, ample farm buildings, and a frame tenement house of six rooms.
There is a splendid shad and herring fishery on the store. Rock and perch fish in abundance. Game incident to the country abound in the neighborhood.
A private avenue runs from the public road through the farm to the river.
The place will beautifully divide into four farms, giving 200 acres to each, with sufficient wood and grazing marsh for each.
This farm is located near the projected airline railroad from Salisbury to Baltimore.
It is offered at a great bargain, and only because it is owned by a gentleman not engaged in farming, and who is unable to give it his personal attention. Possession given January 1st, 1887.
The subscriber will be pleased to show the property to any one wishing to see it, and give all necessary information as to terms of sale.
