For Vice President of the United States,

Hon. ALLEN G. THURMAN,

OF OHIO.

For Representative in the 51st Congress of the United States for the 1st District of Maryland,

Hon. CHARLES H. GIBSON,

OF TALBOT COUNTY.

For Electors of President and Vice President of the United States:

'IT is a condition which confronts us—not a theory.—Grover Cleveland.

'A DOLLAR a day and two meals are enough for any workingman.'—Benjamin Harrison, Republican Candidate for President.

SOONER than yield one inch of the Protection we acquired by the war, we will inflict on the country all the evils of free whiskey.—Republican Chicago Platform.

THE National Convention of Democratic Clubs will meet in Baltimore on Wednesday—tomorrow—the 4th of July. It will be one of the grandest political demonstrations ever held in this country. The Democrats of Talbot will be represented by delegations from at least four Democratic clubs. If the gentleman who only saw one Democrat in Chicago during the Republican Convention will put in an appearance in Baltimore on the 4th, he may see a few—enough to satisfy him that the country is roping with them. Now that harvest is over, there will doubtless be an outpouring of the Maryland democracy in Baltimore tomorrow.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE.

A LOUISVILLE dispatch to the Philadelphia Ledger, (Ind. Rep.) in speaking of Benjamin Harrison, the Republican nominee, says, 'he lives in a palace and drinks only Champagne out of cut glass. He never wore homespun in his life, and would not know a coon skin if he saw it. He is a cold, selfish, exclusive, arrogant and vain politician. He hates a poor man worse than the devil hates holy water. There is nothing popular or magnetic about him. If he lived in the East he would be a drawling Anglo-maniac. Living West he is but the grandson of his grandfather. With Morton for a yokemate, it man's platform, and will poll only the party vote.'

THE CRY IS STILL THEY COME.

SETH LOW, Ex-Mayor of Brooklyn, a prominent Republican and the leader of the New York Conservative Republicans, has pronounced in favor of Cleveland and Thurman.

George William Curtis, the brilliant editor of Harper's Magazine, and the ablest man in the Republican party, has announced his intention to vote for Cleveland and Thurman.

Thomas G. Sherman, the great Republican lawyer of Brooklyn, New York, will take the stump for Cleveland and Thurman.

Henry George, the leader of the United Labor Party, and late candidate for Mayor of New York against Mayor Hewitt, has declared his intention to vote for Cleveland and Thurman and tariff reform.

THE Republican ticket is General Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, for President, and Levl P. Morton, of New York, for Vice President. It is a boodle ticket, but it can't win. It creates no enthusiasm, and will fail to receive the support of thousands of Republicans throughout the country. The Irish vote that supported Blaine in 1884 under the leadership of Patrick Ford and the Irish World newspaper, will be cast against Harrison and Morton. The manufacturers who want their imported raw material free of duty will vote for Cleveland and Thurman. The great mass of the people everywhere, who want the tariff taxes reduced and realize the danger to business of a great surplus lying idle in the Federal treasury, will vote for Cleveland and tariff reform. The campaign opens most encouraging for the success of the Democracy.

On the Rock

of low prices we take our stand. There are none lower. The Bell Clothing House, Oehm's Old Stand, Pratt and Hanover sts, Baltimore, cannot and will not be beaten. Let us see you and we will prove it with some marvellous bargains in men's and boy's Clothing and Furnishings

The money now lying idle in the Federal Treasury resulting from superfluous taxation amounts to more than $125,000,000, and the surplus collected reaches the sum of more than $60,000,000 annually. Debauched by this immense temptation, the remedy of the Republican party is to meet and exhaust by extravagant appropriations and expenses, whether constitutional or not, the accumulations of extravagant taxations. The Democratic plan is to enforce frugality in public expense and to abolish all unnecessary taxation.—National Democratic Platform.

Sufferers from chills and fever, who have used quinine as a remedy, will appreciate Ayer's Ague Cure. This preparation, if taken according to directions, is warranted a sure cure. Residents in malarial districts should not be without it.

Notice.

I am paying the highest cash price for grain, wheat corn and oats.

A NEW LAND OF PROMISE.

A Negro Preacher in Kentucky Ready to Lead His People to the Dark Continent—He Says He Converses Daily with the Angel Gabriel, and Prophesied Emancipation—Colored People Preparing for the Exodus—White Cape Organize in Southern Illinois—A Modern Moses.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 23.—Special Telegram.—The Rev. Giles Moss, an old negro preacher living upon a plantation near Rochester, Ky., about twenty-five miles from this city, is creating considerable excitement among the negroes of that section by his claims to supernatural power and a revelation. He claims to be a licensed apostle of God. He declares that he daily converses with the angel Gabriel, and that he has been delegated to lead all of his people back to their native land in the wilds of Africa, where they in turn are to evangelize all the savages of the Dark Continent. He says that the hour for departure is near at hand, but the time has not been designated by the angel. The negroes are greatly excited, and, though many are dubious as to these divine dispensations, they keep their doubts to themselves, as Moss has always maintained a strong influence over them and his word has been law. What causes many to believe this modern Mahomet is the prophecy, remembered by the older negroes, concerning emancipation. The fulfillment of that prophecy has been the secret of his long influence over them, and the additional fact that he is said to have prophesied the earthquakes last year and the premonition of wonderful changes to be made in his race in the near future. Many of the negroes are getting themselves in readiness for the proposed hegira under the leadership of their prophet. Moss is a negro of large experience and considerable intelligence, and in no wise a crank. He declares that the Georgia negro, Carter, is an imposter, and will meet a direful fate.

A New Party Alignment.

In 1884 the Republicans were defeated by a weak and assailable candidate. In 1888 they have presented an unobjectionable if not popular candidate, and will be beaten, if beaten at all, by their platform. In other words, the issue has been changed from one of candidates to one of distinctive party policies. The oft-reiterated charge that the two parties were alike in everything but name is true no longer. Thanks to President Cleveland, the Democratic party has taken a positive stand on the issue of a reduction of taxation to the wants of the government, economically administered. This has forced or induced the Republicans to plant themselves squarely on the principle of taxation for protection, let the revenues be what they may from this source, with the alternative that if the revenues must be reduced it must be done by removing the internal taxes from tobacco and whisky.

As might be expected this calls for a new party alignment, and already it is manifesting itself. Although Harrison's nomination is only three days old such former Republican journals as the Providence Journal, the Springfield Republican, the New York Times, the Evening Post, Harper's Weekly, and the New York Commercial Advertiser have planted themselves squarely on the Democratic side. Each of the above-named journals acknowledges General Harrison's fitness as a candidate, and justifies its advocacy of the election of Cleveland solely on its objection to the high tariff attitude of the Republican party as expressed in the Chicago platform.

How large a following these journals will carry with them into the Democratic party it is entirely too soon to estimate. The most notable individual utterance on this subject yet made is that of Ex-Mayor Seth Lowe, of Brooklyn, who has already declared that he cannot support Mr. Harrison, not because the latter is not a clean and creditable candidate, but because he stands on a platform in which Mr. Low does not believe. He says the Republican party in its Chicago utterance on the tariff question stands on what seems to him to be entirely new ground, and the tariff policy outlined in the platform is a policy in which he does not believe and one in behalf of which he can make no fight. That a good many other Republicans who have not yet been heard from will declare themselves of Mr. Lowe's way of thinking is not to be doubted.—Philadelphia Times.

New York Commercial Advertiser, (rep.:) 'The platform is astounding in its proposals. It is, as we have said, un-republican and un-American. It is a platform in direct contradiction of the history, the principles, the teachings and the oft reiterated promises of the party in whose name a conspiracy of unscrupulous politicians has put it forth. Lincoln would have repudiated it with disgust and loathing, because it antagonizes the individual liberty and the rights of the people in the interest of a favored and would-be aristocratic class. Henry Wilson would never have assented to it. Salmon P. Chase would have scorned it. Garfield, Grant, Arthur, McCullough and Folger left words on record which condemn its most vital parts, and we mistake the character of intelligent republicans of to-day if many thousands of them do not condemn it with their ballots as their representative newspapers have through many months condemned its suggestions in advance.'

In another article, headed 'What Are We Going to Do About It?' the same paper says: 'What are we—the people of the United States—going to do about it? We will tell you plainly, gentlemen monopolists, who desire to tax us for your enrichment and to make of yourselves our aristocratic rulers, we are going to enforce the American idea, which all great parties in this country have hitherto respected, and to which only cranks, anarchists and communists have ventured to oppose themselves. We are going to stand by the American doctrines of individual liberty, personal equality of right, the economical administration of a government that confines itself to the immediate purposes of government, and the rights of the people to be relieved of taxation when the government has no legitimate need for the proceeds of taxation. We are going to oppose your schemes to tax us for your benefit. We are going to contest your right to make use of our government for our oppression and your advantage.'

The New York Press.

The New York daily papers are almost a unit in support of Cleveland and Thurman. The list includes the Sun, Star and World, democrat; the Times and Commercial Advertiser, republican, and the Herald and Evening Post, independent. The Staats Zeitung, the most largely circulated and influential German paper in this country, also accords the democratic national ticket its hearty support. The only papers of prominence in New York supporting the republican ticket are the Tribune, Press and Mail and Express. Perhaps there never was a greater preponderance of New York newspaper support given a presidential candidate than is now accorded to Mr. Cleveland.

A Sign of the Times.

From the Chicago Times

Mr. George Everhart, a prominent young real estate dealer and capitalist of Chicago, has been authorized by a gentleman in New York city to place $200,000 on the election of Cleveland against any man whom the Convention might nominate—the bets to be made in sums of $2,000 each and upward.

CHARMS FOR DISEASE.

SOME POPULAR MEDICAL SUPERSTITIONS THAT ARE STILL BELIEVED IN.

The Potato and Buckeye for Rheumatism—Stump Water for Freckles—Remnants of Ancient Religious Sacrifices—Curing Warts.

THE New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal recently published an instructive paper by Henry Dickson Bruns, M. D., on the popular medical superstitions of the day, from which we condense the following abstract:

All of you know, I suppose, the belief that a potato carried in the pocket will cure hemorroids or rheumatism. Perhaps the "buckeye" (æsculus flava) used in the same manner is more familiar to you, for in the Southern and Western States therapeutic properties are ascribed to this seed. I have known a most intelligent gentleman wear a string of amber beads about his neck to prevent asthmatic attacks, and another a necklace of coral to avert an apoplectic seizure. The negroes of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia assert that a mole's foot cut off and hung around a child's neck will help it in teething.

In some parts of Pennsylvania, the superstition prevails that bleeding from the nose may be arrested by the recitation of certain words from the Bible by an occult person—i. e., the descendant of a seventh son of a seventh son. To relieve the pangs of toothache a branch is cut from a sweet apple tree during a certain phase of the moon; both ends of it are sharpened, and the "occult person" with it picks the gum until it bleeds.

Stump water—the water that gathers in an old stump—is regarded as a sovereign remedy for freckles but to be efficient it must be taken before daylight on the 1st of May and the two following mornings. The chances for health and long life of a puny child are thought to be improved by boring a hole in a tree, putting a lock of the child's hair in the hole and plugging it up. The use of eye-stones, the crystalline lenses of crabs and crayfish hardened by boiling, and flaxseed for the removal of foreign bodies seem to me mainly superstitions, though occasionally, perhaps, the offending particle adheres to the stone or seed and is removed with it.

Our fellow townsman, Lafcadio Hearn, who is curiously learned in such lore, says that "in New Orleans among the colored people and among many of the uneducated of other races the victims of muscular atrophy is believed to be the victim of voudooism," and "that it is dangerous to throw hair-combings away instead of burning them, because black may weave them into their nests, and while the nest remains the person to whom the hair belongs will have a continual headache."

In the vicinity of Stamfordham, in Northumberland, whooping cough is cured by putting the head of a live trout into the patient's mouth and letting the trout breathe into the latter. Or else a hairy caterpillar is put into a small bag and tied around the child's neck. The cough ceases as the insect dies. Another cure for whooping cough is offerings of hair. In Sunderland the crown of the head is shaved, and the hair hung upon a bush or tree, with the full faith that as the birds carry away the hair so will the cough vanish.

In Lincolnshire, a girl is suffering from the ague cuts a lock of her hair and binds it around an aspen tree, praying the latter to shake in her stead. In Roeshire, where living chicken cocks are still occasionally buried as a sacrifice remedy for epilepsy, some of the hair of the patient is generally added to the offering. At least one holy well in Ireland (that of Tubber Quan) requires an offering of hair from all Christian Pilgrims who come here on the last three Sundays in June, to worship St. Quan. As a charm against toothache it is necessary to go thrice around a neighboring tree on the bear knees and then cut off a lock of hair and tie it to a branch. The tree thus fringed with human hair of all colors is a curious sight and an object of deep veneration.

The remedy for a toothache at Tavislock, in Davonshire, is to bite a tooth from a scull in the churchyard and keep it always in the pocket.

Spiders are largely concerned in the cure of ague. In Ireland the sufferer is advised to swallow a living spider. In Somerset and the neighboring counties he is to shut a large black spider in a box and leave it to perish. Even in England a lingering faith in the superstition of the mother country leads to the manufacture of spider web pills for the cure of ague.

In Devonshire the approved treatment for scrofula is to dry the hind leg of a toad and wear it round the neck in a silk bag; or else to cut off that part of the living reptile that answers to the part affected, and, having wrapped the fragm nt in parchment to tie it round the sufferer's neck. In the same county the "wise man's remedy for rheumatism" is to wear in the shoe a little of the dust in a bit of silk to be worn round the throat. Toads are made to do service in divers manners in Cornwall and Northampton for the cure of nose bleeding and quinsy; while "toad powder," or even a live toad or spider, shut up in a box, is still in some places accounted as useful a charm against contagion as it was in the days of Kenelm Digby. The old smallpox and dropsy remedy, known as pulvis cathopicus, was nothing more or less than powdered toad.

Frogs, too, are considered remedial. Thus, frog's spawn placed in a stone jar and buried for three months, till it turns to water, has been considered wonderfully efficacious in Dengal, when well rubbed into a rheumatic limb. In Aberdeenshire a cure for sore eyes is to lick the eyes of a live frog. A man thus healed has henceforth the power of curing all sore eyes by licking them! In like manner, in Ireland, it is believed that the tongue that has licked a lizard all over will be forever endowed with the power of healing whatever sore or pain it touches.

In some of the Hebridean Isles, notably that of Lewis, the greatest faith prevails in the efficacy of perforated water worn stones, called "snake stones." They are dipped into water, which is then given to cattle as a cure for swelling or for snake bite. If the stone is unattainable the head of an adder dipped in the water gives an equally good result.

In Devonshire any person bitten by a viper is advised to kill the creature at once and rub the wound with its fat. It is said that this practice has survived in some portions of the United States, where the flesh of the rattlesnake is accounted the best cure for its own bite. Black, in his "Folk Medicine," states that the belief in the power of snake skin as a cure for rheumatism exists in New England. Such a belief is probably a direct heritage from Britain.

The common wart, that curious little tumor the microscopical anatomy of which approaches so closly the malignan type, that while its clinical behavior is so entirely benign, may be said to be fairly incrusted with superstitions. I have heard rubbing with a pea, a piece of meat, stolen or otherwise procured, an apple, a potato, all of which are buried and allowed to rot away, highly extolled by persons in all classes of society. My Pennsylvanian authority states that in his part of the world the favorite cures are rubbing with a potato, which is afterward thrown to the hogs, or tying a knot over each wart in a bit of string which is then buried at the northeast corner of the house under the eaves. They may be cured by the "occult person," who utters certain words and blows them away.

How Candidates are Created.

First Citizen.—"This is a good year for candidates; why don't you run for the Legislature, Smith?"

Second Citizen.—"I have never thought of such a thing."

"I believe you could be elected."

"Nonsense!"

"But I am certain that you would poll an immense vote."

They part, and the next morning the following card appears in the papers:

"I have reluctantly, and after much solicitation on the part of the public, resolved to sacrifice my own desires for private life, and hereby announce myself as a candidate for the Legislature.—John Smith."—[Texas Sittings.

THE CHILDREN.

They are such tiny feet!
They have gone so short way to meet
The years which are required to break
Their steps to evenness, and make
Them go
More sure and slow.

They are such little hands!
So kind; things are so new, and life but stands
A step beyond the doorway. All around,
New day has found
Such tempting things to shine upon; and so
The hands are tempted off, you know.

They are such fond clear eyes,
That widen to surprise
At every turn! They are so often held
To sun or showers; showers soon dispelled
By looking in our face,
Love asks, for such, much grace.

They are such fair, frail gifts!
Uncertain as the rifts
Of light that lie along the sky;
They may not be here by and by.
Give them not love, but more, above
And harder, patience with the love.

A QUEER COLLECTOR.

What He Does With His Curios—His $300 Umbrella.

"Do you see that small, stout man across the way?" asked a loquacious policeman, as he pointed out to the writer a stocky little person who stared abstractedly through his iron-rimmed spectacles and waddled complacently along swinging an umbrella of generous proportions and sea-green hue.

The writer remarked that he had seen the little man before, and inquired who he was.

"That man," replied the officer, "is a connoisseur and collector of curios, and owns what is perhaps the largest and most interesting private collection of relics in the United States. He is not a mere accumulator of worthless bric-a-brac, nor is his collection one of curiosities only. Every article in his large collection has a history, and the strangest thing about them is that they are daily (and many of them hourly) brought into requisition and made practical use of by their master-of-fact owner. The dishes used on his dinner-table, besides being varied and curious, have the added interest of having at some period of their history graced the board of some famous personage. His table-linen, candelabra, clocks, rugs and chairs, his very knives and forks, once belonged to some noted persons.

"He declares his umbrella, however, to be his greatest treasure. It is his inseparable companion, and accompanies him wherever he goes. The handle of this umbrella is made from a piece of the Charter Oak, in which is set a small triangular piece of stone, chipped from Plymouth Rock; the stick is made from a branch of the old elm tree at Cambridge, under which Washington assumed command of the Colonial armies; the brass cap on the lower end of the stick is made from the trimmings of a sword scabbard once used by Gen. Grant; the green covering originally served as the lining of a coat, worn on state occasions by the suave and courtly Aaron Burr; the ribs, springs and other metal trappings were manufactured from a small steel cannon captured by the Americans from the Hessians at the battle of Brandywine. Eight oblong pieces of brass have been inserted in as many sides of the octagonal handle. These were made from buttons cut from the military coats of eight generals famous in the Revolutionary war.

The proud owner of this unique umbrella does not believe in keeping his treasures under lock and key, but makes free use of his interesting possessions. He is very careful, however, not to lend his cherished article on screen, and as yet has never left it behind him in a street car or elsewhere. Recognizing the possibility of such a catastrophe, however, he has caused a small tag to be sewed on the inside, which bears the legend:

A liberal reward will be paid to finder for the return of this umbrella.

"The collector values his miniature parachute at $300, although nothing but absolute bankruptcy could ever induce him to part with the historical gamp."—[Exchange.
