Samuel Ward, residing about three miles from Seaford, was found in the woods near his residence early Thursday morning with his throat cut. Ward was an eccentric character, only staying at his home occasionally a few days at a time and spending the balance of the time with his neighbors. He was a carpenter, but has recently worked at his trade very little. Foul play is suspected by some and an investigation will be held.

W. T. Williams, a citizen of this State, who lives near Burrsville, Caroline county, Md., was killed by the cars June 22. The Century Magazine.

The July Century has for a frontispiece a portrait of Pasteur and his granddaughter by the celebrated French painter, Bonnat. This picture is painted in connection with a timely article on 'Disease Germs, and How to Combat Them.'

The opening illustrated article is in Mr. Edward L. Wilson's series connected with the International Sunday School Lessons, and is entitled 'Sinai and the Wilderness.' This article is profusely illustrated with pictures of the scenes of Bible events.

Appropriate to the Gettysburg Reunion are the poems by a Northern and a Southern soldier; Colonel Higginson and Will H. Thompson. 'A Note of Peace,' gives a carefully prepared account of the reunions of the 'Blue and the Gray.'

A supplementary paper in the War Series deals with the career of the Confederate ram 'Albemarle' and the courageous exploits of her commander, Captain Cooke, and those of her opponents, Commander Flusser, Admiral Roe, and Lieutenant Cushing, the chief interest being attached to an unpublished narrative by Cushing, describing his heroic action in the blowing up of the ram by means of a torpedo.

The two great illustrated serials of The Century, the Life of Lincoln, and Kennan's Siberian Papers, are continued in this number. Mr. Kennan describes the Steppes of the Irtish. Those who suppose that Siberia is a land of ice and desolation will be surprised at his description of the flowery country through which the route of the expedition lay.

Appropriation for Chincoteague Bay.

Senator Wilson, of Maryland, Thursday morning appeared before the Senate commerce committee and persuaded the committee to strike out its amendment to the river and harbor bill which proposed to reduce the appropriation for Chincoteague bay from $50,000 to $25,000. Through the efforts of Representative Gibson, as a member of the river and harbor committee, the House fixed the amount for Chincoteague bay at $50,000. When the bill reached the Senate committee that amount was reduced one-half. Wednesday, when this item was reached in the Senate, a motion was made to pass it over temporarily. This morning Senator Wilson explained to the members of the committee the commercial importance of improving Chincoteague bay, and urged that the original sum as recommended by the House be allowed. He made such a good impression upon the members of the committee that they adopted his suggestion, and at the proper time a motion will be made in the Senate to fix the appropriation at $50,000.

St. Nicholas for July, 1888.

The distinctively Fourth of July story is 'Ringing in the Fourth,' by Huldah Morgan, a thorough 'boy's story,' illustrated by the frontispiece and other strong drawings by W. H. Drake. 'Two Little Confederates,' Thomas Nelson Page's serial, increases in interest, and the same may be said of 'Drill,' by John Preston True. Julia Magruder completes her child-sketches from George Eliot, by the second part of 'Tom and Maggie Tulliver.' 'Rodney's Ride' is a stirring Revolutionary ballad, by Elbridge S. Brooks, with illustrations by R. B. Birch. In 'Dogs of Noted Americans,' Gertrude Van R. Wickham gives charming sketches of the dogs owned by John Burroughs, T. B. Aldrich, and Frank R. Stockton—the portrait of Mr. Stockton's dog being drawn by the hand of his owner. Willis J. Abbot is able to add to Mr. Julian Ralph's story of 'A Pig that Nearly Caused a War,' a story of 'A Pig that Really Caused a War,'—(the War of 1812.)

Robson; Keeper of Wampum, Walter Hubbard; Prophet, D. Gamby.

Godey's for July.

A splendid number of this old favorite magazine. Frances A. Shaw's Half Hour with Goethe gives just what every lady wants to know about the great German poet and philosopher. 'A Social Dagger' is a sparkling story with a 'point' to it, as a dagger ought to have. There will be more of it. 'Maud Ethridge's Compromise' is full of good lessons. So is 'When the Ship Comes In' which has also a pleasant seasoning of history. Such practical suggestions as we find in 'Aunt Jane's Fortune-Telling' will be esteemed by every sensible girl. 'In a Looking Glass' turns out to be a very different story from what the title suggests. 'A Bachelor's Mistake' reminds us that leap-year is not yet over. Great is the variety of Fashion hints and helpful suggestions for the ladies. The illustrations are capital. Only $2.00 a year for all this. Address 1224 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Closing of the Public Schools.

The public schools of this county completed their examinations and closed last week. The scholars are now happy and free to go huckleberrying any day in the week, and the teachers are gone, or preparing to go, on their annual trip to recruit their strength.

MISS SADIE NICOLS' SCHOOL.

This is a private school for small children, and is in a most flourishing condition. Small children can be drilled in this school much better than they can be in the overcrowded primary school. Miss Nicols' school closed Friday week.

THE EASTON PRIMARY SCHOOL.

This school closed on Friday. The Principal is Mr. T. S. Pattison; Assistants, Mrs. Hambleton, Miss Satterfield and Miss Robinson. The school is full to overflowing, and a new and larger school building, and more teachers in the school are much needed. A new school house for the primary school of Easton cannot be built too soon.

THE BOZMAN INSTITUTE.

This is an excellent private school for boys and girls, taught by Mrs. Burroughs, assisted by Miss Howard. It closed on Thursday. This school is growing in size and [illegible] favor, and we hope the report that [illegible] is to be discontinued is incorrect. The closing exercises of this Schools were very interesting.

THE EASTON HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement of the Easton High School took place last Friday morning The exercises were in the Easton Opera House, which was packed full of our citizens, who feel a deep interest in the prosperity of the school.

Professor E. D. Murdaugh, the Principal, opened the exercises with an address on the importance of better school accommodations in Easton. In this matter the Professor is right, the old Academy was good enough for half a century back, but it is wholly unfit for the wants of a large graded school like the Easton High School.

The Professor's address was followed by music—Opening Chorus, Hail Festal Day by the school.

Master Clayland Mullikin, one of the graduates, then delivered the Salutatory; a very fine original composition, on "Success in Life," delivered without manuscript in a very graceful style.

Then followed "Days of Spring," a duet, by Miss Anderson and Miss Sauer.

Master R. Herbert Martin, another of the graduates, then delivered a very carefully prepared address, on "The Past, Present and Future."

The school then rendered the "Echo Song," after which came the Valedictory, by Miss Belle Trippe, Subject, "Problem of Life; We solve it for ourselves." The address was admirably prepared and beautifully delivered.

All the addresses of the graduates elicited rounds of applause, and each was the recipient of beautiful bouquets of flowers, The stage was also handsomely dressed with flowers.

Mr. Charles S. Carrington, one of Easton's rising young lawyers, then delivered an address to the graduates. The address was chaste and beautiful, replete with sage advice, and delivered in a very impressive manner.

Professor A. Chaplain, County School Examiner, and whose whole soul is in his school work, and who is not excelled by any Examiner in the State, then made a brief but appropriate address, and delivered the diplomas to the graduates.

The music was under the direction of Miss Welby, the first assistant teacher of the school. She was assisted on the piano by Miss Hunt.

The curtain was here let down for a change of program, and while it was down Master Thomas Councell rendered an instrumental overture from Chopin.

Part second opened with a charming scene in calisthenics by the 5th and 6th grades, pupils of Miss E. J. Staplefort. They showed great proficiency in the drill, and gave the large audience present a rare treat.

There were then "Quotations" by the junior and senior grades, followed by dumb-bell exercises by Miss Welby's pupils, which was novel and delightful.

Then followed "Quotations" by the 5th and 6th grades, a very interesting feature of the day, proving that the pupils had been well and intelligently drilled by their teachers.

The exercises concluded with a Tambourine drill by twelve young ladies in costumes suitable to the occasion, all of whom looked very lovely.

The Commencement of the Easton High School of the Class of '88 is an event that will be long and p'easantly remembered by those who witnessed or participated in the exercises. Professor Murdaugh has certainly not much further to go, to bring the School up to the high standard demanded by Examiner Chaplain. What is now needed is, that the parents of the pupils shall sustain the teachers in their high endeavors

W. C. T. U

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at its last meeting, took a hand in politics. They appointed Major Wm. E. Stewart to explain the Democratic platform and Democratic principles; Col. J. C. Mullikin to explain the Republican platform; and Mr. Walter H. Thompson to explain the principles of the Prohibitionists. The gentlemen selected were well chosen to explain their respective party platforms. The Major gave the W. C. T. U. a rattling democratic speech from the Jeffersonian standpoint, and proved that, in the way of legislation, the Temperance cause owes to the Democratic party all it has gained in this State for the last thirty years.

Col. Mullikin eulogized the Republican platform, but did not tell the W. C. T. U. that it says, that it will inflict on the country all the dire evils of free and cheap whisky rather than surrender one iota of the protective system gained by the war.

Mr. Thompson seemed to think he was not sure where he stood in the triangular discussion, and did not say as much for the Prohibition platform as was expected of him. He will do better next time.

If the W. C. T. U. will only continue politics at their meetings they may make them very interesting if they don't provoke a fight.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Lina Robinson and her sister, Mrs. Dr. Smith, arrived in Easton from Wytheville, Va., Saturday morning.

Miss Daisy Welby left Easton yesterday morning for Philadelphia, where she will remain some three weeks, and will then join some friends and go to Boston.

Bozman News.

Our public schools have closed and teachers and pupils are now enjoying their long looked for holiday. The principal, Mr. W. D. J. Morris, and assistant, Miss Lida Caulk, will take charge of their schools again next September. They have both given entire satisfaction as teachers, and the wish of both parents and children is that they may have a pleasant vacation and return to them next September sunburnt and hearty. The following is the average of the pupils of Bozman school:

Fourth Grade—Emma Fairbank, 86-⅓; Katie Sutton, 82-⅓; Nina Sutton, 85-⅓; Robt. McQuay, 86⅔; Wm. Lednum, 75-⅓; Sam'l McQuay, 87⅓; Albert Bridges, 70-⅓.

First Grade—Willie Jones, 81⅓; Anna Cooper, 71⅓; Calvin Barkman, 40.

"Children's Day" caused our citizens and many visitors to attend church last Sunday week. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers, evergreens and mottoes. The songs, dialogues and declamations were highly entertaining.

There seems to be as much fuss over the appointments of the crew to places on the police sloop as there was at the Chicago convention. Several persons from Broad Creek Neck expected places, and each have their friends, but as all could not be appointed, of course there has been disappointment; and now some of the disappointed applicants have threatened to defeat Cleveland next November.

Some of the oystermen of Bay Hundred have also threatened to defeat Cleveland, because the boats employed in running shells for the State's planting ground have dumped the shells in piles, instead of scattering them over the oyster beds. The boats can make quicker trips by dumping, and all they want is their pay.

Now we hope these matters will be satisfactorily arranged before November, because we have been anticipating a trip to Washington on the 4th of next March to see Mr. Cleveland inaugurated.

Mr. Charles Hughes and wife, of Minneapolis, Minn., who have been visiting relatives in St. Michaels and Bozman, left here last Tuesday. They will visit Baltimore and New York before going home.

Mr. Nicholas Valliant, the popular salesman from McDanieltown, visited his mother at Bozman last Sunday.

Organization of a Democratic Club at Trappe.

The following gentlemen were elected as delegates to the National League Convention, which meets in Baltimore, July 4th—William Collins, Wm. M. Hardcastle, Wm. S. Merrick, A. H. Barnett, Thos. A. Lloyd. Alternates: James. B. Parrott, Col. A. B. Hardcastle, Isaac Bryan, Robert T. Kirby, Howard Harmon.

A committee on Constitution and By-Laws was appointed to report at some future meeting. On motion the club adjourned, subject to the call of the President.

The Post Office on the Fourth.

The postoffice will be open as follows tomorrow: From 6 to 8 A. M; from 1 to 3 P. M; and from 5½ to 7½ P. M.

A dispatch from Evansville, Indiana, to the New York Sun says: 'The sense of disappointment among republicans of this city over Harrison's nomination cannot be concealed, and many are so impudent and outspoken as to declare their determination to remain away from the polls. This indignation, while not general, is nevertheless sufficiently positive to arouse some alarm among local leaders. The most prominent defections so far are two republican newspapers in this city—the Indiana Post (German) and the Daily Bulletin. The Post is a representative organ of the German people, and will antagonize Harrison on account of his temperance views. The Bulletin is the county organ of the republicans, and in an indignant leader this afternoon declares that Harrison's nomination was wholly unexpected and fell like a wet blanket upon republicans of Southern Indiana. It then says "the probabilities are that he will be beaten in his own State by 10,000 votes.' These defections are supplemented by many individual ones, some on account of the candidate and others on account of the unyielding tariff plank of the platform. At this writing Harrison could not carry sixty per cent. of the republican strength of his district. Some of these wounds can be healed, but many of them will be manifest at the November polls.'

Of Course.

From the Binghamton Leader.

Chinese Harrison cannot carry a State where the industrial vote is strong. To insure his certain defeat the labor element will vote almost solid for Cleveland and Thurman.

Position of N. Y. Times.

The powerful support of the 'New York Times,' which is assured to Cleveland and Thurman in the following forceful editorial appearing in that paper, on Tuesday, is one of the most significant and important developments of the great Presidential Campaign now begun. The Times is confessedly one of the ablest Republican papers in the country. After a tribute to the personal worth of the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President, it says:

'But the people of this country will pass judgment upon the republican party, not upon the republican candidates. Were that party any longer worthy of confidence: had it not departed widely and hopelessly from the guidance and principles with which it won its early triumphs; were it actuated by an honest purpose to make the people of the United States more prosperous and happy than its political opponents can make them; were its professions more sincere, its policies wiser, and its leaders purer, the New York Times might not find it a distasteful task to support the candidates, commonplace as they are, who were put in nomination yesterday. But we have no faith in the party or in its leadership or tendencies, and we have only abhorrence for the monstrous policy of confiscating the gains of labor and the profits of trade by extortionate protective taxes, which has become its only vitalizing principle. The maintenance of needless taxes for protection's sake is not and never was a principle of true republicanism. It is the principle that has created and sustained a greedy horde of manufacturers who have bought the republican party and shaped it to their uses. They took possession of its charter and control of its actions in the year 1872, when the party had already begun to rot inwardly, and from that time, beginning with the presidential contest of that year, the intelligent and thinking voters of the country have been less and less in sympathy with republicanism, and the people, as a whole, have been moved by a continuing and everstrengthening impulse to put the party out of power. The impulse first showed itself in the liberal republican revolt of 1872, a strong and sincere movement which resulted disastrously in the Greeley folly. In 1876 the people of the country, as a majority of them no doubt believed and still believe, did cast a majority of their votes against the republican candidate. An extra-constitutional body decided the contest of that election in favor of the republicans by a partisan vote of its own members, and the narrow majority of a single electoral vote. In 1880 the treachery of certain democrats, discontented with the nomination, and the use of great sums of money in Indiana and in this city and State in purchasing votes for the republican ticket, gave the party another four years lease of power. In 1884, in spite of the extraordinary growth of that most noxious weed of American politics, the Blaine dynamite vote, the late but deserved penalty of its corruption and its evil courses was visited upon the republican party; and so far from having any reason to regret its action in that year, the electorate gives signs of increasing satisfaction at the change.

'Meanwhile the republican party, punished but impenitent, clings to the idols the voters have spurned, and again knocks at the door of the Executive Mansion, bearing in its hand the declaration that whisky should be free and clothing taxed, that the present protective taxes are sacred and shall not be reduced—shall be increased, rather, if ways cannot be found in jobbery and extravagance to spend fast enough the accumulating revenue. The Times will not shame its consistent record of more than twenty years by counseling the opening of that door to these unworthy applicants. Before 1868 this journal began its advocacy of the repeal of unnecessary custom taxes imposed for war purposes.

'What! have we fought for freedom in our prime,
At last to dodge and palter with a public crime?'

'Nor does the republican party invite or deserve our aid on other grounds. It has only with extreme reluctance abandoned Blaine as a candidate, and its leading newspaper organs, without rebuke, continue to protest that "Blaineism is republicanism." We find too many reasons to accept the shameful confession as truthful. The men who were Blaine's fuglemen in 1884 have still a potent influence in the direction of the party, and "Blaine and protection" remain the only ideas which awaken any enthusiasm in the republican ranks.

'For the working out of the reforms which The Times believes to be the chief issues of our politics the democratic party, with its present candidates, is the "better instrument," to use Mr. Tilden's expression. Its candidates are incomparably superior to those of the republicans, and the announcement of purposes with which it enters the contest is more satisfactory, and in respect to the dominant issue is firmly right, while the other is hopelessly wrong. As regards civil-service reform, though we have had occasion to criticise the present administration for some of its errors and failures, we have greater confidence in Mr. Cleveland's sincerity and fidelity than in the written professions of a party whose leaders are unable to speak of the reform without a sneer. The Times will give Cleveland and Thurman its hearty support, and will do what lies in its power, and it is not commonly an inactive newspaper in a presidential contest, to make their majority such that there will be no doubt about it the morning after election.'
