BLACKSMITHING.

Having built a first-class Blacksmith shop on Federal street, Easton, opposite the stables of Mr. Solomon Pippin, and stocked it with all the necessary tools, I am prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing in the best manner and at reasonable rates.

HORSE SHOEING.

I have just secured the services of a first-class city horse-shoer, and using none but my own hand-made work, will guarantee all work done in this line, as I intend to make it the special feature of my business.

I would like to see all my old friends and customers, and have no doubt they will be satisfied with any work which they may favor me with. Asking a call, I am the public's obedient servant,

Broad Creek Neck was well represented at the Fair last week.

A few of our citizens dressed themselves in their best Sunday-go-to meeting suits last week to hear the Rev. Little's prohibition speech, but were rather cast down when they were told that 'the case had been postponed,' probably until after the election of Cleveland.

Capt. Joseph Larrimore lost his three year old son last Sunday.

Our gunners will have fine sport shooting rabbits this fall, as they are quite numerous.

Next Tuesday will be the first day of Jarrell & Nichols' Millinery Opening. They have concluded to continue the opening until Saturday in order to give the teachers of the county an opportunity to attend.

The American Fruit Evaporator now on exhibition and for sale by the Shannahan & Wrightson Hardware Company is one of the best inventions of the age. It will pay the fruit grower handsomely to own one. Go at once and see it.

A fact established, that the most complete assortment of Sportsmen's Goods, Powder, Shot, Shells, Wads, everything needed in that line can always be found at the old Hardware store of T. C. Nicols. His stock is full, complete, and prices as low as can be obtained.

Economy—If you want a Plow to thoroughly do your work go at once and behold the large line handled by the Shannahan & Wrightson Hardware Company, among which are the Economist and New South Bend, together with other leading chilled plows. Go also and see the Daniel sulky—one of the best before the public.

Don't wait for any other wagon but take the far famed Webster wagon, the best, the safest, and the cheapest first-class wagon on the market. The fact that more of them have been sold this season than ever before is the best proof of their superiority over any other wagon. Go and examine the last car load received by the Shannahan & Wrightson Hardware Company.

The entries of trotting, running and pacing horses at the Cecil County Fair are one hundred and thirty-one (131). On Thursday, October 4th, the famous balloonists, Professors Hunt and Price, will give a balloon ascension, and at the height of 5,000 feet will jump from their balloon. On Friday, October 5th, an Athletic Contest will be given by the Warren Athletic Club, of Wilmington, Del., the Schuylkill Navy, of Philadelphia, and the New York Athletic Club.

Several of the young men of Odessa, Del., becoming alarmed at the frequent visits of Warwick young men to that place, have formed a club and will hereafter keep all young men not residing in the town away from it. There is a scarcity of girls in that town and this action has been caused by the heartless conduct of young men from neighboring towns, who, without regard to the native young men, have carried off a number of the belles of that town.—Elkton Democrat.

What every woman wants is a magazine that gives the latest fashion news, first-class fiction, and fine engravings. This is exactly what can be said for 'Peterson'; any lady has only to glance over the October number to see that it is a real treasury of feminine needs It is replete with beautiful steel and wood engravings, capital stories, good poetry, and useful articles on miscellaneous subjects. It gives, as usual, a double-size steel fashion-plate, beautifully colored, numerous designs for dress and toilet articles, and has, besides, plenty of reliable information as to what will be worn later in the season. There is no doubt that 'Peterson's' popularity steadily increases; and it ought to do so, for it comes out each month as fresh and blooming as a first number could, in spite of the fact that it has been doing this for nearly fifty years. This is the time for ladies to begin to get up clubs. 'Peterson's' inducements to club-getters are always tempting; but the premiums announced for next year are finer and more numerous than ever. Send for a specimen copy. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Delaware College has twenty-four students.

Attend the entertainment at Music Hall tonight. It is for a worthy cause.

Be sure and go to Music Hall tonight and help aid the Knights of Pythias in the good work they have undertaken.

The Dover Glass Works are advertised to be sold at Sheriff's sale to satisfy a claim of $5,000 against the company.

Four hundred car loads of peaches, containing 240,000 baskets, have been shipped from Wyoming station this season.

The Wren Comedy Company play Sweethearts and Outwitted, at Music Hall tonight for the benefit of the Yellow Fever sufferers. Everybody should attend.

Remember the entertainment at Music Hall tonight, is for the benefit of the suffering citizens of Jacksonville, who are appealing to the whole country for help.

County Commissioner Elijah D. Reid, a successful farmer and merchant, died on Sunday afternoon of last week at Princess Anne, of lockjaw. Mr. Reid recently had his thumb broken while handling a horse.

The Hillsborough baseball club met the Oxford team on the Easton fair grounds, Thursday. The contest took place within the circle of the race course. There was much interest in the game. The Hillsborough players won by a score of 8 to 3.

Adam R. Magraw and J. M. Bowen, prominent farmers of Cecil county, were presented on the evidence of Thos. C. Bond, president of the county commissioners, for obstructing the public highway by brush and clippings from hedge fences. These are the first presentments made for this offense, which is in violation of the county road laws.

The men who catch oysters with tongs in the lower part of the county bordering on the Manokin river, are complaining very earnestly of the scarcity of oysters in that river. They say that, with a boy to assist him, one man can barely make $2 50 per day. The oysters have been all caught from the bottom by the use of scrapers.—Marylander.

A violent wind and rain storm visited Denton and vicinity Monday afternoon of last week. It took a narrow path from north to south, uprooted trees and leveled cornfields from the extreme northern part of Caroline to Choptank river. At Kenton, Del., the walls of a brick schoolhouse were crushed in and a church unroofed. In Tuckahoe Neck valuable peach orchards on the farms of John R. Griffin and W. E. Saulsbury were considerably damaged.

people bought their Clothing at the first place they came to, but experience has taught them the necessity of purchasing only of a Reliable House, such as the Bell Clothing House, Pratt street, adjoining Hanover street, Baltimore. Here everything is superior in quality and low in price. The same care is given to a low-priced article as to the best; and an exchange is made or money refunded if not satisfactory. Their reputation is the growth of years, and will always be maintained at its present high standard.

Godey's Lady's Book for October.

The autumn number of Godey is more attractive than usual. The frontispiece, 'I See You,' is a beautiful subject, well executed; a colored and folded fashion sheet, various pages of useful and ornamental articles of attire, and a colored work page, with many black work designs, completes the illustrations. The reading matter comprises numerous stories and poems, with instructions in needlework, housekeeping and varied fashion notes. Among the stories, 'A Social Dagger,' by Olivia Lovell Wilson, increases in interest; 'Out of the Battle,' by Carlo Leimen, a new contributor, is well written; 'The Hallow-e'en Sensation at Guv'nor Dearing's,' is especially appropriate to the season; 'The Representative from Raccoon' draws to a close, the interest continuing unabated; 'A Canadian Girl's Romance,' by Marian C. L. Reeves; 'A Love Game,' by Emily Lennox; 'An Antique Vase,' and numerous other short stories and poems, all good, complete the number. Price $2.00 per year. The Croly Publishing Company, 1224 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Benefit of Yellow Fever Sufferers at Jacksonville

The Oliver W. Wren Comedy Company, under the auspices of Star of the East Lodge, No. 106, Knights of Pythias, of Easton, will give one of their superior entertainments in Music Hall this (Tuesday) evening. This comedy is assuredly one of the finest that has ever visited the peninsula, and comes highly endorsed. Gilbert's charming comedy, 'Sweethearts,' and a laughable afterpiece, will be presented. The proceeds will be sent to the relief of the yellow fever sufferers at Jacksonville, Fla. All who can should aid this praiseworthy movement. Tickets on sale at Hayward & Bro's. Secure seats at once.

Republicans, Can You Controvert These Propositions?

Soap is protected $10 in every $100 worth manufactured. For producing $100 worth of soap the laborer gets $3.

For making $100 worth of linseed oil the laborer gets $5, and there is $85 worth of protection in $100 worth of oil.

The labor cost of $100 worth of envelopes is $11, but envelopes are protected $20 in every $100 worth manufactured.

Paper bags are protected $26 in every $100 worth produced, and for making $100 worth the laborer gets only $15.

In making $100 worth of nails, $22 is spent in labor, but the manufacturer of nails is protected $33 on every $100 worth produced.

In making $100 worth of pig iron from ore manufacturers pay $25 for labor, but they get a tariff protection of $45 on every $100 worth of iron they make.

Salt is protected $22 in every $100 worth [illegible] and the labor cost of every $100 worth is $25.

Wool is protected $41 in every $100 worth produced, and the labor involved in its production is not over $5 in every $100.

People who labor in steel mills get $5 for the labor of making $100 worth of Bessemer steel, and yet there is a tariff protection of $46 on every $100 worth of Bessemer steel.

The protective tariff tax on tin is $24 in every $100 worth produced, and not a cent of it goes to anybody in this country for wages, as we do not make tin plate at all.

These are correct figures and true statements; plainly stated in a plain way, so as to be easily understood of the people. What do they mean?

That the tariff on soap might be reduced $16 on every $100 worth made, and that amount saved to the consumers without touching the wages of operatives in soap factories; linseed oil $80 on the $100; envelopes $9 on the $100; nails $11 on the $100; iron $20 on the $100; steel $41 on the $100. All these reductions could be made and these sums saved to consumers, and enough tariff protection would be left to maintain the present prices of American labor, because these sums are the tariff taxes charged on these fabrics over and above the labor cost of producing them;—that is, $188 could be saved every time $700 worth of these seven articles are used by the people, and the workingmen in the factories that make them get the same wages they do now.

And while a tariff tax equal to the labor cost of producing these articles is maintained, there can be no free trade in such articles.

Now, in the Mills bill, all these articles, necessaries of life or indispensable in business, are protected far above the labor cost of producing them in the United States, except tin, salt and wool, which are made free. Under the Mills tariff bill, American manufacturers might pay double the wages they do to their operatives, and still be protected, while to the consumers (and every operative in one factory is a consumer of the products of other factories), there would be a saving of, say $68 in each $700 expended.

Tin, salt and wool are put on the free list in the Mills bill. Why?

Wool is made free to enable our woolen industries to double their home product, to give increased wages to labor, increased profits to capital and 20 per cent. cheaper woolens to consumers.

Tin is made free because we have no labor engaged in its manufacture, and because a tax upon it is a needless tax upon the common necessaries of every workingman of the land.

Salt is made free because it is used in every family, rich and poor, and because tariff taxes on it have bred an extortionate monopoly trust that robs every table in the entire country.

The Democratic party, through its tariff legislation, as embodied in the Mills bill, holds that the wages of American labor should be fairly protected by our tariff laws, and that all tariff taxes beyond the protection of wages of workingmen, are simply protection to monopolies which employ free trade cheap labor and give American labor high taxes and low wages.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for October.

The Institution which has done so much to foster art in America, 'The National Academy of Design,' has its history well told by A. S. Southworth, in the opening article of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for October. It is illustrated with views of the building and portraits of its Presidents—A. B. Durand, D. P. Huntington, H. P. Grey, J. Q. A. Ward—and Secretary T. Addison Richards. Ladies will read with pleasure 'The Gowns of the Butterflies,' full of suggestions and hints to study combinations of color and texture from Dame Nature. 'Early Navigation of the Ohio,' by Mary M. Meline, will be read with interest in connection with the recent centennial of the State named after the beautiful river, and the illustrations carry one back to the early days. In these days, when Shakespeare and Bacon are so strangely mixed up by the skillful literary art of an accomplished man, it will be gratifying to have brought together 'What is known about Shakespeare,' and this is done in a very readable article; and whether he wrote the plays that have always borne his name, here, at least, are facts relating to them which all admit. Louis C. Elson, the bright and competent writer on musical topics, discourses of 'Hector Berlioz and his Music, and the illustrations heighten the interest of his narrative. 'The Indigenous Animals of the Andes' treat of that Llama family which gave Peru beasts of burden and fleeces for the garments of Incas and common people. A lady tells of a visit to far-off 'Tangier,' the town that England once held, and which would even now be an important hold beside Gibraltar. 'Three Days on the Summit of Mont Blanc' gives a picture of what our martyrs for science, even in these days of modern improvements, are compelled to endure. The stories and adventures in the number are all attractive and well illustrated, and some, like 'Venezuela and Great Britain,' by Almont Barnes, of no little value.

Lippincott's Monthly Magazine.

The October number of Lippincott's Magazine is a special E. P. Roe number, the first half of which is taken up with articles in one way or another commemorative of the dead novelist. First comes a summer idyl called 'Queen of Spades,' which shows that thorough knowledge of the best features of our country life, that kindly sympathy with people of various grades and descriptions, that have marked all similar works by E. P. Roe. But his best apotheosis is his autobiography contained in this number, and entitled 'A Native Author called Roe.' The title is taken from one of Matthew Arnold's essays on America, in which the critic glances thus slightingly at the novelist: Roe's paper is dignified, modest, and extremely interesting. John Habberton starts a new serial, 'At Last: Six Days in the Life of an Ex-Teacher,' which shows that the vein of humorous insight into the minds and ways of children which he evidenced in 'Helen's Babies' has not yet been exhausted. 'With Gauge & Swallow, Judge Tourgee's series of short stories, is continued with a clever narrative called 'How I Became the Widow's Attorney.' Howard Seely has a dramatic episode of life in Paris, entitled 'Two Casts of a Die,' one of the best things which this promising young writer has yet produced. 'Brown Bread and Baked Beans: a Good-Humored Study of Boston,' by F. N. Zabriskie, is an excellent bit of descriptive and humorous writing. Fanny Davenport contributes 'Some Childish Memories, in which Booth and Barrett figure, as well as her father and mother. The answers to the One Hundred Questions are continued, and the departments all keep up their interest.

The Campaign in Indiana.

The State of Indiana is fast becoming a seething political cauldron. It is asserted that already the democrats have 2,500 local speakers in the field, the republicans 1,500, or an average for the two parties of forty-four speakers to each county. These orators are not [illegible] but are kept constantly moving. Political clubs have been formed in almost every precinct in the State, and political banners are floating in all directions. Mass-meetings during the day and torch-light processions at night is the order in every county. The women have caught the political infection, and, as a consequence, female democratic and republican clubs are being formed in various sections of the State. In addition to the local orators, it is proposed during the latter weeks of the canvass to import distinguished speakers from other States. It is safe to say that the people of Indiana will be saturated with politics, and will gladly welcome election day as putting an end to this flood of stump oratory.

Whether Mr. Thurman be elected Vice President or not, he cannot but be gratified by the enthusiastic reception accorded him during his trip to New York. It is not at all probable that all the shouting thousands who have greeted him at every important railway station on his journey were Democrats or that all will vote for him. The people of the United States, regardless of party affiliations, have come to entertain a profound respect for Judge Thurman, because of his clean, untarnished record and his rugged honesty. They have turned out to honor the man rather than the partisan, and the spontaneous reception which has been accorded him indicates that the American people are not so intensely partisan that they cannot recognize real merit even in one with whom they may dissagree on political questions. The ovation to Mr. Thurman is more than a partisan demonstration. It is a tribute of admiration and affection to a citizen respected by everybody.—Philadelphia Times.

Senator Sherman's bill, reported by the Finance Committee, for the confusion and punishment of Trusts, may serve for the confusion of Mr. Blaine, who holds that the Federal Government has nothing to do with them, but it will serve no wholesome end. Instead of taking down the tariff barrier which shields the majority of these combines and enabling the consumers to protect themselves, it provides for bringing a bill in chancery against them and going into a lawsuit lasting any number of years, requiring proof of a multitude of facts, which will in all probability not be provable at all, and consequently with doubtful results in the end. If this is all the relief that the Finance Committee of the Senate can suggest, they have, as Mr. Cleveland said in his letter of acceptance, offered a stone where the public had asked for bread.

IN GOLD AND SILVER.

AMBER cigar holders are wound with stripe of silver.

FOR half-mourning are pansies of lusterless black enamel with a diamond center.

THERE is no end to the silver articles that have for their only ornamentation wavy, fluted forms.

SPRAYS of white lilacs with a tiny diamond sparkling in each flower are among the prettiest of the flower brooches.

BONBON trays shaped like a shallow bowl of oxidized silver with cut flowers of deep red enamel are popular styles.

FAC-SIMILES of old coins, made slightly concave, and with long twisted handles surmounted by a tiny figure, are intended for bonbon spoons.

LINKED sleeve buttons are seen resembling coupled coffee beans, only one will be silver the other copper tint, a third gold, a fourth oxidized silver.

TORTOISE-SHELL and diamonds are combined in brooches. The shell is cut in perforated interlacing forms and a small diamond is buried in the prominent intersections.

PERSIAN enamel is coming into general use. Samples of its use are in brooches, the mounting of pocketbooks and portfolios, and ornamenting fruit services of silver gilt.

FOR tableware the prettiest articles are silver and cut glass in combination. A claret jug, for example, will be of cut glass with handle, handle and base of repousse silver.

One of the favorite tricks resorted to by the Republican managers appears to be the identification of the Democratic candidates with the interests of England, supported by such testimony as an alleged extract from the Times, declaring that 'the only time England can use an Irishman is when he emigrates to America and votes for free trade.' It would be interesting to know when this statement appeared in our columns, though we suppose we are not likely to receive much information on this point from those who have taken the trouble to instruct the voters of the United States about our opinions. For our own part, we have been of the opinion that some use had been found in the British Empire for such Irishmen as the Duke of Wellington, Lord Lawrence, Lord Dufferin, Lord Wolseley, Sir Frederick Roberts, and a good many others, without exporting them to America to be the apostles of free trade, nor can we see that the free-trade policy in the United States, whether it be good or bad from the English point of view, has been so eminently advanced by the votes of emigrant Irishmen that any man should take the least trouble to promote it.—London Times, August 29.
