Furnishing Establishments that has ever been in the city. They are both practical workmen, having been proviously engaged for several years in separate establishments where they believe they have public taste. Their former stocks of Goods have been merged into that of Mr. Harley's making the largest assortment of Goods in their line that can be found in the city which they deem unnecessary to enumerate as their assortment is so complete of Cloths, Cassimeres, Vestings, and other minor articles common to such establishments, that it would be difficult to make it more so, yet they are constantly receiving new Goods as the requirements of their trade may seem to demand. They beter themselves that none can fail to be pleased either in the style, quality or price of the Goods as well as in the beauty and elegancy of the Garments, as no pains will be spared
