were rising. For the truth of this extraordinary event we have searched all our Paris and London journals. The former are as silent on it, as on all other political topics; and while some of the latter are pledging their reputation for the truth of the narrative, BELL's "Messenger" of the 20th March, pronounces it to be a fabrication. All that both agree in, is, that a Levee was held on the day mentioned.

☞ While the preparations appear thus to indicate an immediate war; the language of the rulers of both nations is apparently pacific. BONAPARTE imprecates divine vengeance upon the heads of those who shall be the cause of a rupture; and the British ministry declare, that their object, in the armament, is to hasten the conclusion of subjects in discussion;—and that their preparations were counter to those making in the ports of France and Holland; and which, if found only destined to garrison their colonies, would occasion an immediate cessation of hostile measures. The friends of the English minister urge, that "where every thing is at stake we must be prepared for every thing," They declare, that

"Peace is his daar delight—not Fluery's more—
"But touch him, and no minister so sore;"

How hard the touch has been, we are still ignorant—the only ostensible stroke being the expedition fitting out in Holland and France.

It is certain negociations of great importance have long been in discussion between Great-Britain and France. These are mentioned to relate to the evacuation of Egypt and Malta; and the "occlusion" of our citizens from the port of New-Orleans. We have not heard any other cause assigned for the delay in the evacuation of Egypt, than the difficulties which naturally arise in its prosecution. By treaty it was to be surrendered to the Ottoman Porte. Malta, as we before stated, was, by the treaty of Amiens, to be surrendered to the knights of Jerusalem, when the grand master of that order should be ready to receive and able to defend it. No grand master, as we have heard, has yet demanded possession—Of course, that being a previous condition, Great-Britain claims a right to retain possession until it is accomplished. In the last subject we are interested. "With respect to the American depot at New-Orleans," says an English politician, "the question is briefly this: The Spaniards, whilst in possession of Louisiana, allowed the Americans, by treaty, the use of the town of New-Orleans, as a commercial depot, with a provision, however, that they might resume this grant upon assigning any equivalent station. Previous to delivering the province of Louisiana to the French, to whom it was ceded in the late peace, the Spanish governor has resumed the grant of the depot, and shut it against the Americans, without assigning them any other equivalent station. It is supposed that our government has undertaken to mediate between the three powers of France, Spain and America, and that this forms one of the subjects of discussion alluded to in the message." All these may be the children of wild conjecture; or they may be founded on authentic information. If the latter, the hostile parade making may have some tendency to expedite the termination; and force France to relinquish some of the projects of her unbounded ambition. One thing, at least, appears evident, that G. Britain thinks with her laureat—

"Peace only sheds perennial joys on those "Who guard with dauntless arms the blessings peace bestows."

We shall conclude this day's review of the intelligence, by observing, that the stocks (the Mercury in the political thermometers) were rising at the last dates.—On the 7th March, the 3 per cent. consuls were at 71, on the 10th they fell to 62, and on the 19th rose to 65.

The account published yesterday respecting the three Eboe negroes brought to this port by captain Moignard, being in some particulars incorrect, we have obtained the following from the captain himself:

"About the first day of April last, in the morning, the barque Harper captain Towns, of Kennebunk, discovered an open boat in which were three negroes armed with cutlasses. He attempted to take them; but recollecting that they might possibly be brigands, he bore away back upon the sloop Patriot, John L. B. Moignard master, from Tobago. The negroes then proceeded towards the vessels, and captain Moignard picked them up. They were at that time, according to his dead reckoning, at the distance of at least 40 or 50 miles from the shore—Dominica and Guadaloupe being the nearest land."

FEDERAL GAZETTE.

MONDAY, May 9.

Such of our country readers as are in the mercantile line (and most of them are) who have not already set off hither, need no longer delay their journey under the apprehension of arriving before our merchants are prepared to receive them. Nearly all the spring arrivals are now in, and the warehouses of the importer are filled with as various and choice an assortment of European and Asiatic goods, as they have perhaps ever met with. To be satisfied of this they need only to take the trouble of perusing the advertisement columns of this and a few preceding papers. It is not in our power yet to inform them by any intelligence later than what is already before them, whether hostilities have recommenced in the old world or not.

THE RIVER ST. LAWRENCE.

Nature has formed America, particularly with respect to rivers, on a much larger scale than the other quarters of the globe. Among its most noble rivers is that of St. Lawrence. This river beginning at lake Ontario, and extending to the ocean, is seven hundred and forty-three miles in length. At its mouth it is ninety miles wide. At Cape Cat, which is one hundred and forty miles from its mouth, the St. Lawrence is thirty miles wide. At Quebec, which is four hundred miles from its mouth, it is five miles wide. Up to this distance from the ocean, the river is navigable by ships of the line. At and near Kingston, which is situated at the source of the St. Lawrence, that is, seven hundred and forty-three miles from the ocean, the river is said to be from two and a half to six miles wide. The channel of this river, it is reported, is better now than it was when the river was first discovered by civilized people. During the spring-floods, the waters from Lake Ontario rush down with such rapidity and irresistible force as to remove the beds of gravel and even large stones in the St. Lawrence; whereby its channel is gradually cleared, extended and deepened.

When the lands on either side of this vastly extensive river shall be cultivated, immense will be the quantities of produce which it will waft to the ocean.

To the Public.

THE subscriber has taken a situation near the Observatory, for the sole purpose of presenting to public inspection, his patent Horizontal Wind-Mill, for sawing and grinding, or any other purpose required. As many impositions have been and are offered under the sanction of patents in old inventions newly revived, that have had a fair trial and proved useless, on a large scale, although very promising in a model, the subscriber prefers putting his to the test, as it is the first ever put in practice. This mill, now erecting, will be 30 feet high, the main wheel 18 feet diameter, which will be sufficient to show its power and utility.

JOHN A. MORTEN.

P. S. There will be a boat employed from Mr. M'Elderry's wharf, for the purpose of accommodating those wishing to cross, by paying 12½ cents for a ticket, which will be received as such at the bar of the wind-mill tavern.
