Public Sale.

To close the concern of Durant and Wisham, will be sold by public auction, on Tuesday, the 17th of January, at the exchange coffee-house, (if not previously disposed of at private sale,)

THAT Valuable and Improved PROPERTY, situate in Gosport, in the county of Norfolk known by the name of the GOSPORT DISTILLERY. The lot is about 140 feet square, building 108 feet by 37 in the clear, built of brick and wood, and has lately been put in complete repair. The situation is healthy and pleasant; good water may be had quite convenient. It contains one English made still of 1000 gallons, quite new and lately set up, with cap, worm and worm tub complete; one ditto of 1300 gallons, with cap, worm and worm tub in good working order; one doubling still of 450 gallons, with cap, worm and worm tub in good order; one large return tub; one ditto receiving ditto; two stand casks of 524 gallons each; three ditto of 270 gallons each; eight new cisterns of 2400 gallons each, one of which charges the two large stills; twenty-one ditto of 1300 gallons each, in good order; four ditto out of repair; two low wine cisterns of 500 gallons each, in good order; one hand mill for grinding malt; two copper cranes, buckets, funnels, &c sufficient to conduct the business upon an extensive scale; machinery, spouts, pumps and leaders, capable of pumping out either of the cisterns and conveying the working liquor into either or all of the stills. These works are capable of turning out 600 gallons spirit every twenty-four hours, with the labor of only three men.

There is also a mill house, 40 feet by 30, in which there is a mill and a well of never-failing water, with three pumps working by machinery, which conveys the water into any part of the distillery. A creek runs up to the door affording sufficient water for lighters, making the communication with Norfolk easy, and the carriage of molasses, rum, &c. to and from the distillery cheap and facile. There is sufficient space on the lot to erect a dwelling house and a cooper's shop, which business might here be conducted to considerable advantage.

This property is well worth the attention of men of capital, that could always command a supply of molasses. The demand for rum is such that there is no danger of having any quantity on hand; and if sold at the moderate profit of three cents per gallon, the business would yield a clear gain of eighteen dollars per day.

The terms are six, twelve, and eighteen months credit, and payment must be made in good endorsed notes, payable at the office of discount and deposit in Norfolk, with a deed in trust upon the property until the whole is paid. John Gibbs, living at the distillery, will shew it to those inclined to view it. For further particulars apply to us

LEWIS E. DURANT, or
RICHARD WISEHAM.

Distillation.

Notice is hereby given,

THAT I have obtained letters patent of the United States, dated August 2d, for the following particular construction of STILLS:

The still set up has the shape of a cylinder, surmounted with a cone, the basis of which exceeds by a few inches the circumference of the cylinder.

The cylindrical part is the body, the conical part is the cap. At about the fourth part of the summit the cone is cut transversally, which forms the mouth, this is covered or shut by the rest of the cone. On the top of this cover is fixed a small cylindrical vessel, which, during the operation, ought to be constantly supplied with water; which, issuing by small holes at the bottom of this small vessel, spreads all around the surface of the cone, & cools it at the desired temperature. This water is received at the base of the cone by a circular external gutter, from which it escapes by a channel.

To a large oblong aperture cut in the breast, and from the basis of the cone, a flat pipe is adapted, tapering in the form of a common neck, by which the spirit is discharged into the cooler. The cooler is a long flat pipe, horizontally fixed in a trough, which must be continually supplied with fresh water. The dimensions of this cooler are, in length about three times the diameter of the still, in breadth one-eighth, and no more than one inch thick or high.

The depth of the cylindrical part is optional. The spirits raised by the heat, whatsoever way applied, evaporate freely, are instantly condensed by the contact of the cone, and run by the gutter and the discharging pipe into the cooler.

In the distillation of grains, a wooden mover, in the form of a circular rake, keeps the contents in agitation, and prevents their ralling—this mover is fixed to a metallic rod running free through rags, compressed in a little box, terminating the summit of the cone. By this operation, which does not require the strength of a child, they prevent the loss of the spirits which rise while the mouth is kept open in the ordinary way of whiskey stills.

Amongst other advantages of these stills, constructed (beyond contradiction) upon the true principle, the operation of distilling may be entirely performed, every thing equal, at a temperature more than 25 degrees lower than in the common stills.

I will shortly publish an explanation of the principles and advantages of this plan, a comparison with the stills now in use, and an account of experiments* in different kinds of distillation.

In my patent is specified the right of fixing caps upon my principle to old stills, which will give to them all the advantages of the new method, in the exact proportion of the diameter of their mouths to the larger diameter of the body.

L. GEANTY.

* In different operations performed in presence of many respectable citizens of Baltimore, a still of twelve gallons has proved to run faster than any common still of eighty—its contents being only at 180 degrees of Farenheit's thermometer, which is 32 degrees below boiling water.

December 16. eo4t
