BY THIS DAY's MAILS.

BOSTON, September 19.

It was stated in yesterday's Centinel, that advices were received in town by a captain Doane, who had lately arrived from England, "That forty sail of American vessels had been recently condemned in England." This article having excited considerable attention, we were induced to call on captain Doane, and have been informed by him, that the above statement was extremely incorrect:—He merely states to us, that previous to his leaving England, which was on the 2d of August, it was reported to him, that since April last, there had been upwards of forty sail of American vessels sent into the different ports of England—that several of them had been condemned: but that the principal part had either been released, and again sailed, or were detained on various pretensions.

At this particular moment, it behoves the printers of newspapers to be extremely circumspect in what they admit on a subject of such importance as the above, wherein the feelings and interests of the largest and most respectable class of our fellow-citizens, are so deeply concerned.

PHILADELPHIA, September 21.

FIRE!

This morning, about day-light, a fire was discovered in the spacious building, owned and occupied by Mr. Edward Pennington, as a sugar refinery in Brewer's-alley above Vine-street. The flames had gained such an ascendancy, previous to the alarm, as to defy every effort to subdue them. This extensive building and adjoining apartments, together with all the utensils and a large stock of materials were entirely consumed. The loss thus in one hour sustained by a single individual, is said to amount to between 15 and 20,000 dollars. It is not satisfactorily understood how the fire originated.

We are concerned to add that apossibility of preserving this valuable property, was frustrated by the want of a supply of Schuylkill water. To whom does the blame of this gross neglect attach?

Mr. Pennington's loss (says the Journal) is estimated at 80,000 dollars. We have not learned how the fire originated.

NATCHEZ, August 16.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Natchitoches, to the editors, dated June 4.

"On the 11th ultimo, his illustrious highness the bishop of Montrey arrived at this place; he travelled in a coach drawn by six mules, and had the top of a chariot suspended upon poles like a litter, and carried by two mules along, in which he occasionally rode; he had an escort of sixty cavalry, a party of pioneers that went before, and was followed by a large number of persons, mostly inhabitants of Nagadoches and St. Antonio. He had sixty mules particularly allotted for his carriages which were changed frequently, and nearly as many packed with his baggage; he travelled eighteen or twenty leagues a day; he wore the mitre and purple robe, appears about 45, is rather short and fat, of easy manners, facetious and agreeable in conversation, speaks nothing but Spanish and Latin, but reads French, and he suprised us all by the liberality of his sentiments or expressions. He is an European, was late confessor to the king and queen of Spain, and is said to be a near relation of the Prince of Peace; he has been about 5 years in America, has jurisdiction over five provinces, with an income of fifty housand dollars a year; he staid with us our days; we paid him all the attention our situation would admit; he appeared pleased; returned every civility politely, and left his benediction with us.—There has been a variety of conjectures relative to the objects of his visit to this place; some have supposed it more of a political than an ecclesiastical nature, and it was generally thought he would make as good a general as a bishop; he carried with him a theodolite for taking the latitude of places and mathematical instruments, as well as the instruments of his order; he was requested to take the latitude of Natchitoches, which he said he would do with pleasure, but he had lost some screws out of the instrument that rendered it useless; he said he found Nagadoches in 41 deg. 15 m. or thereabouts, which is somewhat south of this place."

RICHMOND, Sept. 21.

Extract from a letter, dated "Pittsylvania county, Sept. 7.

"The very great drought lately, has much shortened the prospect of our crops of corn and tobacco in this part of the country, and has been also attended with a consequence hitherto unknown by the oldest inhabitants.

"Almost all the fish in Staunton river, of every kind, have died; thousands and tens of thousands were found on the shoals, sand bars, and banks of the river, as far up and down as any information has been obtained. From the intolerable stench, occasioned by their putrifaction, a contagion on the river must certainly have followed; but happily there came a heavy fall of rain, which raised a considerable swell in the river, that carried the offending substance down.

"There is scarcely a fish now to be seen in the river (alive)—and such as are seen are of the flat pearch kind. As well as I recollect, from the 20th to the 25th of Aug. was the period most fatal. Some alledge that the excessive heat of the season and the lowness of the water, which has been generally muddy, have occasioned this phenomenon; others ascribe it to different causes. But what seems strange is, that the fish, neither in Otter river nor Pig river, have been the least affected."

GEORGETOWN, (P.) Sept. 21.

Yesterday the United States frigate President capt. James Barron, from the Mediterranean, arrived at the Navy Yard, city of Washington.

WASHINGTON, September 23.

We have received the official account of the proceedings of the court of enquiry in the case of captain Bainbridge, which shall appear at length in our next paper. The following is the result of the enquiry:

"The court having deliberated on the evidence deduced from the testimony of the witnesses, heard in this case, are decidedly of opinion that captain WILLIAM BAINBTIDGE acted with fortitude and conduct in the loss of his ship, the United States frigate Philadelphia, on the 31st October, 1803, and that no degree of censure should attach itself to him from that event."

On Saturday the citizens of Washington gave captain Bainbridge an elegant DINNER, in testimony of the sense they entertain of his merits, and of their sympathy in his sufferings. The warm welcome, so universally given our gallant countrymen, will be to them the highest evidence of national gratitude and affection.

FEDERAL GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in the suite of col. Hammond, to his friend in Augusta, (Georgia.)

KASKASKIAS, Eastern side of the Mississipi, Indiana territory, July 15, 1805.

On Saturday last I arrived at this place in company with col. Hammond, after one of the most fatigueing journeys perhaps ever performed through a country which might be said to be settled with Christians.

The vicissitudes which we have met with are almost innumerable. We have now come as well as I can be informed by my journal and other information about 850 miles, and were 46 days out to this place. There are very few parts of the western country I admire, the land is either mountainous or low and flat, the high land is healthy and there is excellent water, but the manner in which it lies makes it difficult to cultivate. The low land is extremely fertile; all kinds of grain grow luxuriantly; the water however is intolerably bad. The only tract of country which seems desirable to settle in, is Cumberland tract, Galatin, from which I last wrote you. There are vast numbers of prairies in this territory, they are level plains of from 2 to 12 miles square, scarce a twig or switch to be cut off of them; grass grows to a great height; early of a morning, just as the sun dawns from the eastern hills it gives the prairies a beautiful appearance, and there being nothing but green grass, a diversity of flowers, with now and then a little clump of oaks—the prospect is always picturesque—always beautiful or grand. This country is badly watered—hence people are deterred from settling in the interior, & an act of congress preventing slavery, prevents emigrants, particularly those of opulence; it seems more than probable, that it will be years before there will be refinement of manners, or that the arts and sciences will flourish here.—But a man who travels should leave all his prejudices behind him, and not write his friend any thing but what is correct. I must do these French the justice to say, that I believe they are much more honest and peaceable than the Americans, who are settled here, and who are mostly idle and dissipated. Indeed the Americans of this place seem to look upon a stranger as one whom they shall never see again, and think themselves privileged to pluck him. This place (Kaskas.) was settled two years before Philadelphia, and the first bell ever imported in America, I have seen hanging in the Roman church—Although this place is now so desolate, it was once settled by a number of French of the first character and fortune. To see the low standing chimnies and large buildings tumbling into ruin, makes me feel considerable regret, and must fill any person of sensibility with awe.—The only tribe of Indians here, are the Kaskaskias, they are about one hundred in number—and live in huts in the suburbs. I have just returned from seeing them, where I set a squaw to make me a pair of mockasins. They can produce about forty or fifty warriors—are small Indians, and seem to be in a miserable situation. On Tuesday last, colonel Hammond, set out for St. Louis, leaving Mrs. Hammond at colonel Edgar's—Our waggons and horses are about four miles out of town, at a place we got to rest the negroes and recruit the horses.

Gen. Wilkinson passed through here a few days before our arrival and arrived at St. Louis on the 4th inst. The troops, citizens, and several hundred Indians, were drawn out and stationed at the foot of a high bridge where the general had to pass, to salute him on his arrival with direction, from the commanding officer not to fire a salute till he had crossed the bridge. But just as the general and his escort had got on the top of a bridge 30 or 40 feet high, they commened a fire, which together with the yells of the Indians, threw the general, corps and the officers, &c. escorting him into a general confusion; several had like to have been tossed off the bridge, but it is with pleasure I learned no accident of consequence had happened.

Loaf sugar 75 cts. per lb.
Brown do. 1 dol. per lb.
Tea and coffee none.

It was with difficulty the citizens could procure a few of these articles at St. Louis, for the entertainment given general Wilkinson, on his arrival; they had to give one dollar a pound for a barrel of brown sugar, which was all that was to be had in that city. I have not tasted tea or coffee for many weeks past.

Just as I was closing this letter, I received accounts from colonel Hammond, at St. Louis, he informs us, he has rented a house, and intends being with us here to morrow. I omitted mentioning to you, that we are a next neighbor of Mr. Bell, formerly of your city, he is much dissatisfied with this territory, and will leave this early in October next, for Georgia; the old gentleman is much respected here.

Arrived, ship Fame, Hart, 28 days from New-Orleans—logwood and gin—William Taylor. Left there, brig ——, Smith, of Baltimore, from St. Domingo, just arrived. The ship Thomas, Wilson, of New-York sailed in company. Off Havana, spoke ship Pilgrim, from Campeachy for Philadelphia. Saw a ship and brig bound up, at anchor at the mouth of the river. Very few vessels at New-Orleans.—Markets brisk.

Among the numerous victims who have fallen before the power of all subduing death, we recollect none, whose dissolution is more generally and deservedly lamented, than that of Mr. WILLIAM COALE, of the late firm (of Smith & Coale, of this city,) who died, after an illness of four days, at Point-Petre, in Guadaloupe, on the 3d instant. Whether we consider him as a son, a brother, or a man, we find him entitled to high praise and sincere respect. His memory will be long cherished by those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and his irreparable loss to his bereaved family can never be erased from their minds: Yet will they not grieve, as those without hope; but recollecting his strict principles of morality and religion, and the innocent and amiable tenor of his life, look forward, with a mournful pleasure, to their reunion to him in that blessed world, where the pains of separation shall not be felt, or sorrow of any description invade the soul.
