WASHINGTON-CITY, March 7.

Our readers will perceive, by our journal of congressional proceedings, that the great national question at issue with Great-Britain has at length seriously engaged the attention of the house of representatives.

On Wednesday, the house resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the state of the union, when Mr. Gregg's resolution for a non-importation of British goods was taken into consideration. As we shall give this debate, at as early a period as possible, and very much in detail, we shall at present briefly notice its character.

It was opened by Mr. Gregg, the mover of the resolution, who took a rapid view of the outrages, insults and oppressions of Britain, which appeared to him to be parts of a system deliberately planned, and which would probably be perseveringly adhered to, unless the government of the United States should make a decided and spirited stand against them. A non-importation of her goods, a measure altogether pacific, appeared to him the best instrument of recalling her to a sense of her true interest.

Mr. J. Clay followed. He allowed, in their fullest extent, the outrages and injustice of Britain; but he feared that the contemplated measure, so far from inflicting any serious injury on her, would react more injuriously on ourselves, and that it could not for any length of time be adhered to. He declared himself in favor of measures, which though apparently less energetic, would by forming a part of a permanent and practicable system, prove more efficacious.

Mr. Crowninshield took the same ground with Mr. Gregg. He said the outraged honor and violated interests of the country demanded efficient measures, not of a warlike character, but such as would convince Britain that much as we valued her friendship, we would no longer submit to the degradations accumulated upon us. He was for peace. He believed the present measure eminently calculated to maintain it. Not that he was afraid of war from the effects it would produce. For in war we should be more than a match for Britain. We should make more captures, her provinces would fall, and the debts of her subjects would be at our mercy.

Mr. J. Randolph rose in reply about 2 o'clock, and continued on the floor till 5 o'clock. He pronounced the resolution a war measure, pushed forward by a spirit of mercantile avarice, calculated in its effects at once to expose the United States in her most vulnerable point, on the ocean; to aid the gigantic strides of Bonaparte by making France mistress of the ocean; to translate her from the ground on which it became her to stand, and to carry her into maritime contests; and to endanger her liberties and the constitution.

On Thursday the debate was again resumed at noon, by Mr. N. Williams, who spoke in favor of the resolution.

He was followed by Mr. Masters on the opposite side.

Mr. Smilie spoke next in favor of the resolution; when the debate was closed for the day by Mr. J. Randolph, about four o'clock.

NINTH CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Wednesday, March 5.

The speaker laid before the house a letter received from the secretary of the navy, in obedience to a resolution of the house, requiring a statement of the nature and extent of services rendered by the Danish consul to the captive crew of the frigate Philadelphia.

The letter incloses a communication from captain Bainbridge, highly evincive of the generosity and benevolence of Mr. Nissen.

These communications were referred to a select committee of three members.

Mr. John C. Smith, from the committee of claims, made a report on the petition of Moses White and Charlotte Hazen, unfavorable to the prayer thereof, in which the house immediately concurred without a division, and gave leave to the petitioners to withdraw their petition.

Mr. Crowninshield, from the committee of commerce and manufactures, made an unfavorable report on the petition of the merchants of Plymouth, &c. which was referred to a committee of the whole house, and made the order for Friday.

Mr. Nicholson presented a petition from the members of the board of commissioners of the county of Washington, in the district of Columbia, representing that great inconveniencies had arisen from that part of the act incorporating the city of Washington which exempts city property from taxation for county purposes, and representing sundry other circumstances which, in their opinion, required legislative interposition.

Referred to a select committee of five members.

Mr. Conrad, from the committee of public accounts, made a report on the petition of Josias W. King, praying the allowance of interest due on monies alledged to have been withheld from him by the clerk of the house. The committee report, that, on enquiry it appears that the balance not paid to J. W. King at the time due, was in consequence of a deficiency in the appropriation, and concludes with the opinion that the memorialist has no claim on the clerk of the house, as prayed for by him, and that the prayer of the memorialist ought not to be granted.

Referred to a committee of the whole on Monday next.

Mr. Gregg, from the committee to whom was referred a memorial from the Chesapeake and Delaware canal company, praying for the pecuniary assistance of congress in the accomplishment of the great work they have undertaken, made a detailed report concluding with the expression of their opinion that it is not expedient at this time to grant any assistance to the company.

Referred to a committee of the whole house on Monday.

Mr. Dawson presented a petition from a number of citizens of Washington county, Columbia, praying that the president may be authorised to permit an enclosure of the unoccupied public ground in the city of Washington on the condition of its cultivation and improvement.

Referred to a committee appointed on the petition of the board of commissioners.

Mr. Thompson moved that the house should enter upon the consideration of the amendments made in committee of the whole on the bill authorising the erection of a bridge across the Potomac.

Mr. Gregg moved its postponement till Saturday next.

Mr. Smilie supported, and Mr. Thompson, opposed this motion, which prevailed---ayes 54---noes 45.

The house then, on the motion of Mr. Gregg, resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the state of the union---ayes 72.

Mr. John C. Smith in the chair.

Mr. Gregg moved that the committee should take into consideration a resolution offered by him, on the 29th of January,

FOR A NON-IMPORTATION OF BRITISH GOODS.

The committee having agreed to take up the resolution, and it having been read from the chair—

Mr. J. Clay enquired whether it would not be in order to call up a resolution offered by him on the same subject.

The chairman said it was not in order, after the committee had determined to consider the resolution just read.

Mr. Gregg then rose in support of his resolution, and spoke about one hour.

He was followed by Mr. J. Clay in opposition to it, in a speech of about half an hour.

Mr. Crowninshield replied, in support of the resolution, in a speech of about the same length.

When Mr. J. Randolph closed the debate of the day, in a speech of about 3 hours in length against the resolution---when the committee rose and the house adjourned about 5 o'clock.

FEDERAL GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, MARCH 8.

Extract of a letter from New-York dated March 5, 1806.

The district judge continued yesterday the examination of four persons more who had sold ammunition for the expedition of the Leander. Mr. S. G. Ogden, declares now that her destination is the coast of Caraccas, probably to the port of Coro, but that upon this head the administration must be very well informed by a letter gen. Miranda wrote to Mr. M——n in Washington, nine days before he sailed: this letter says col. Smith was sealed in the presence of Miranda, who delivered it to both him and Mr. Ogden, to put in the post-office in this city, this was duly executed by them, not in the common accustomed manner but for greater safety it was put into the hands of one of the clerks who was at that moment receiving some other letters.

The publication which the editor of the New-York General Advertiser intended to make this day was yesterday exposed at the coffee-house, by which they confirm their publication of Monday last. Mr. Ogden applied immediately to the said editors, not with the intention to contradict the substance of their publication, but to elucidate their mistake as to the person whose answers directly implicated government in this business. The evidence of col. Smith was one which exposed them completely, so that you see the position is the same although the name of the instrument may be a different one.

The general opinion here is that government has been privy to Miranda's plan, and to its execution; and however difficult it may appear, hopes are entertained that this circumstance will be proved by legal evidence [United States' Gazette.]

Extract of a letter from Philadelphia to a gentleman in N. York.

"No doubt you have heard of the death of captain Gale, of Marines, on board one of our frigates, run thro' by capt. Rogers, who is under arrest. Some say, Gale was shot. There is no doubt of his death."

The Providence Gazette asserts, that 2000 tons of navigation, belonging to that port have within two months past, been captured or detained by British, French, or Spanish armed vessels.

From the Charleston Times of Feb. 22.

Captain Ehlers arrived this morning, sailed from Lisbon on the 14th January; but brings no news of importance.

Intelligence of the battles of the three Emperors, in the beginning of December, had been received: both parties laid claim to the victory. When the news first reached Lisbon, the French celebrated the event by feasting, &c. A short time after a packet arived from England, when the accounts were reversed; and the English in turn publicly rejoiced at the triumphs of the allied powers.

A few days before captain Ehlers, sailed, a fleet of 36 sail of English merchantmen from Oporto, under convoy of three men of war, left Lisbon for England, eighteen sail of Swedes left St. Ubes the same day, in order to take protection of the convoy—but the next day all the Swedes returned into port, having seen several sail of armed vessels, which they supposed were French. It was reported at Lisbon, that the English merchantmen were all taken—This again was contradicted; but it was added, that another fleet from the Mediterranean had certainly been captured.

Our correspondent at Washington, under date of the 4th remarks—The non-intercourse resolutions may be a little debated in terrorem, but most assuredly will not pass. A member of the senate informed me this day that it was not probable any special minister would be sent to England, other than Armstrong & Bowdoin; a noble pair—tantas componere lites.

Another letter from Washington mentions, that Armstrong and Bowdoin are nominated to the court of Madrid. This is probably intended to reward Mr. Armstrong for his recent services in the case of the New-Jersey. [United States Gazette.]

EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

After having attempted for three months to frighten Great Britan into hystericks with paper crackers, Congress are now, if report be true, about to send an embassy, under circumstances, which will give emphasis to the expression of the public will. The vessel to carry the Ambassador is to be the HORNET, and the Ambassador A. BURR. It is pity ARM—STRONG is not united, as the talents of an experience court will be PITTED against us. [Repertory.]

By an arrival at Antigua, it is stated that Admiral Lord Beuclerc, with 5 sail of the line, may be momently expected in the West-Indies; so says the St. Kitts paper of the 7th February.

[Norfolk Ledger.]

MR. COLEMAN,

"Give the Devil his due."

In the New-York Evening Post of the 4th March, I find the following paragraph:

"American Mechanism.---With pleasure we invite the public to witness a specimen of the workmanship of Mr. Geibe, organ builder, at his house, Leonard-street, late residence of Mr. Currie. There may now be seen a church organ with pedals, the first ever made in this country, which, for sound and faithful mechanism, and depth, strength, roundness, melody and brilliancy of tone, may challenge an equal in any part of the United States. It is made for a society at Bethlehem, and will be taken down on Thursday; therefore all who have a curiosity to witness its extraordinary powers must call to-day or to-morrow.

Now, being well acquainted with Mr. Geibe's abilities as an organ builder, as well as with his propensity to puff, I take the liberty of stating, that in our city we have in the Lutheran Church, an organ with pedals built by the late Mr. Daneberger---that there is one in the little village of Litiz, near Lancaster, by the same maker—and that Mr. Taws has lately erected one in St. Augustine's Church, Philadelphia, which has the stop diapason and double diapason plaid with the pedals, and is now building one for St. Mary's on a larger scale. Besides these, there is one in Hanover, Penn. and another in York; both of which were built by Daneberger, as well as the celebrated organ which was burnt in the Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, and which was built before Mr. Geibe came to this country.
