COMMUNICATION

Relative to the

PRECINCTS MARKET-HOUSE

LOTTERY.

Friend.—I see you will still be speculating in lotteries, I fear you will be a looser in this speculation.

Answer.—I hope not, I must confess there is some risk, but being engaged in that kind of busines, I wish to encourage the Market-House Lottery, for you know I love good living.

Friend.—But you seem by your advertisement, as if you intended to go on very rapidly, and to draw more than double the quantity in a week, than you heretofore have done.

Answer.—This is what we would wish to do, in order to satisfy the public, and to complete the drawing as soon as possible.

Friend.—Suppose in so doing, the high prize should pop out, what will be the consequence?

Answer.—It is expected that when the public are satisfied, we shall continue to draw in this manner; those disposed to become adventurers will come forward and purchase, that they may have a chance with the rest for the 4 or 8,000 dollars; if they do not, they cannot expect it; besides, it may fall to the lot of the holders of the unsold tickets

Friend.—That would not satisfy the public, for should you draw the high prize, they would conceive the lottery to be unfair.

Answer.—No reasonable person can think so, for my part I sincerely wish the whole of the tickets on hand were sold; for if they were it could not be the case, for the object is to sell the whole; but should there be a large number of tickets unsold, whose fault is it? it cannot be ours; we know persons cannot be compelled to purchase, but if they are not disposed to purchase, no reasonable man can attach any censure to us; If they do, they cannot be serious

Friend.—But are you serious, when you say that after the opening of the wheels on Tuesday the 29th inst. you will raise the price of tickets 50 cents?

Answer.—Yes?

Friend.—What is your reason for so doing?

Answer.—The reason is obvious; the wheel is much more valuable than at the commencement of the drawing; besides we shall draw 5 or 600 tickets a week, and after a short time perhaps more; and should we have a large number yet on hand of course (as you observed before) we run a risk of drawing a number of blanks, which will be a great loss.

Friend.—But as observed before also, you may draw the high prize.

Answer.—We shall have no objection to that; but it should be put out of our power, by purchasing all the tickets; if the tickets are not all sold, and we should be so fortunate as to draw the highest, or the next high prize, it may make up all losses, and whatever any person may say, we shall feel our minds perfectly at ease on that subject.
