Protectress and Dumfries, from London; but the accounts they furnish are not so late as those received here by the United States; the latest London date being February the 27th. The few articles which we deem new we have selected; and they appear to be those on which the Norfolk editor makes the following remarks: [American.]

"The peace of the continent does not appear so firmly established as hath been supposed.

"Prussia and the other northern powers of Germany, are about to receive the rewards of their perfidious policy. They must submit to the mandates of Bonaparte, or prepare for resistance by force. With what success they will be able to resist, may be readily supposed. Bonaparte will not relinquish his plan of shutting the German ports and the Baltic against Britain; Prussia and Denmark cannot assent without relinquishing their independence, and bringing inevitable ruin upon the commerce of their subjects."

LONDON, February 27.

Bonaparte still prosecutes, with unremitting ardor, the plans he has formed for the exclusion of British manufactures from the continent, and which were not suspended even during the late peace.

By negociation, by intrigue, by promises and by threats, he endeavors to bring other powers to adopt his views; that all the ports of the continent, from the extremity of Italy to the Baltic, may be shut against our commerce. It is understood, that some sharp remonstrances on this subject have been made, but hitherto without effect, to the court of Berlin. Denmark has been assailed in the same way, and neither temptations nor threats, we understand, have been spared to induce her to shut the Sound against us---a measure that would be as ruinous to the commerce of the Danes, as it would be injurious to the British trade. [Star.]

The arrival of the Hamburg mail puts us in possession of interesting intelligence.

The court of Berlin does not appear easy in its present position. On the 14th inst. orders were issued to the Prussian troops to hold themselves in readiness to march. His MAJESTY's field equipage was at the same time ordered to be prepared. These demonstrations can scarcely be the effect of idle apprehension. Prussia, we are persuaded, would not deviate from her regular line of policy, which is that of peace, or, at the least, neutrality, except she were driven out of it. When the sovereign of Prussia assumes an hostile attitude under the present circumstances of Europe, we may be convinced that it is the result of imperious necessity.

For what, indeed, can Prussia have to contend, and particularly with France, except for two principles: it is impossible but the court of Berlin must be awake to the dangers of that system of degradation and inferiority, to which the obvious course of Bonaparte's policy would reduce the principal states of Europe. If Prussia will consent to place herself in the same rank with Austria, Bavaria and Wirtemberg, she may enjoy peace; but if she has the spirit to struggle for the high rank she has obtained, she cannot assert it without coming into collision with France. How can there be a doubt, indeed, of the hostility of the latter power, when we learn that she is about to assemble an army of two hundred thousand men on the Maine? There are neither Austrians, Russians, British nor Swedes to combat in this quarter. Against whom, then, can these formidable preparations be directed, but Hesse and Saxony, in the first instance, and Prussia ultimately?

ALTONA, February 1.8

They write from Vienna, that the Austrian army will still remain for 6 months on the war footing.

BERLIN, February 15.

The order of the day, issued yesterday does not only renew the injunctions to the troops to hold themselves in readiness to march, but the regiment of gens d'armes have also received orders to get their extra complement of men, and to hasten the delivery of their recruits. His majesty's field equipage is again getting in readiness.

MUNICH, Feb. 8.

Within these few days, every thing has assumed the appearance as if our army were again to take the field. All the furloughs which had been given had been recalled, and all the troops collected in the depots have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march. It is hoped, however, that the circumstances which may have given rise to these measures, will be speedily adjusted. The marshals Berthier and Bernadotte are arrived here.

150 Dollars Reward!!

A ROBBERY!

THE Cabin of the Easton Packet, the Anna-Maria, lying at the lower end of Cheapside-wharf, was entered some time last night by some villain or villains, and the clothes of the Subscriber stolen therefrom, consisting of a great coat of drab cloth, lined with green baize; a close-bodied superfine blue cloth coat, with lappels, which, on inspection, will be found to be pieced at the bottom on both sides, buttons white, plated and conical; a new vest, of Bennett's cord, with black, green & yellow stripes running up and down, with covered buttons; pantaloons of very fine blue cassimer, with feet. In the pocket of the latter was a small red Morocco Pocket-Book, containing a letter addressed to "Robert H. Goldsborough, Esq. Myrtle Grove, Talbot county," covering 689 dollars. There were likewise in said pocket-book about 200 dollars in bank-notes, and a note of hand from Bennet Bracker to the Subscriber, for 130 dollars; and other papers, not at present recollected, but consisting principally of proved accounts and small promissory notes. Whoever will restore to the Subscriber the said pocket-book, with its contents, and the clothes, shall have One Hundred Dollars reward, or in proportion for the amount procured; and Fifty more for bringing the culprit to justice.

SAMUEL THOMAS.

April 28. d3t

DARING ROBBERY!

Ten Dollars Reward.

ON Sunday evening last, between the hours of five and six o'clock, one or more villains entered the house of Mr. Gilbert Bigger, watchmaker, in Market-street, and took from a back room on the first floor, a trunk containing sundry articles of wearing apparel, the property of the subscriber. Among the articles were, shirts, (marked with the name "E. Sandell," at length) cravats, small clothes, and a number of other cloathing. Also, a pocket-book, with some papers. Two persons were seen crossing Market-street, from the house of Mr. Bigger, about the time above mentioned; one of them stout and tall; the other of a middling stature; and were, doubtless, the villains that committed the theft. The above reward will be paid for the apprehension of both or either of the guilty persons; or, for the return of the clothes and trunk. E. SANDELL.

Worthy Attention!

I WILL sell on accommodating terms, to the purchaser, that very valuable Farm and elegant Country Seat, called EPSON, on which I now reside, consisting of five hundred acres of first quality Lime-stone Land, within eight miles of the city of Baltimore, and half a mile from the York turnpike road, being part of the same tract of land, and adjoining to the Hampton estate of general Ridgely, which is known and acknowledged to be among the very best lands in Baltimore county. It is conveniently divided for cultivation, with a sufficiency of timber and wood, and a bounding in springs of excellent water. The buildings are more than sufficient for the accommodation of a farmer, and well worthy the notice of any gentleman, who would wish to invest capital in a pleasing country establishment, so very near the rapidly increasing city of Baltimore. The other improvements will on investigation, be found suitable, particularly the fruit, of which I have a most valuable selection, and the greatest variety. Further details are needless, as persons inclined to purchase, will apply to
