disposed to afford a sufficient and adequate protection to every portion of the union.

A melancholy event has taken place. This day consigns to the grave the remains of John Pierce, a fellow-citizen inhumanly and wantonly murdered by the British. Our port is blockaded—our vessels intercepted—our seamen impressed—our commerce interrupted, and our jurisdictional rights most grossly violated. A British squadron is now before our harbor, evincing a disposition to renew its outrages, and to perpetrate addition enormities.

We therefore respectfully request that a naval force may be immediately stationed at this port, and that three or more American frigates may, without delay, be sent for our protection.

DE WITT CLINTON.

By order of the common council.

T. WORTMAN, city clerk.

It is a fact, that last evening, Tunis Wortman, clerk of the mayor's court, went up to the 7th ward, and taking out of his pocket the resolutions which were reported on Saturday evening by a committee, consisting of Rufus King, Ebenezer Stevens, Oliver Wolcott, Wm. W. Woolsey, and William Henderson, and unanimously accepted by the most and respectable collection of people ever assembled in this city, on a like occasion, set fire to them, and burnt them up—thus disgraceing the office of a common hangman, by the behavior of a puppy.

We sre just informed, that the bill for the protection of our ports and harbors, brought in by Mr. Dana, passed the house of representatives, but was negatived in the senate and lost; it had originated with a federalist!

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

Captain Swain, of the ship Wareham, arrived yesterday in 14 days from Belfast, has favored the editors of the Daily Advertiser, with Belfast papers to the 16th ult. containing London dates to the 12th, from which it appears that Mr. Tierney is to be the new governor of the Cape of Good Hope—that the French troops had overrun Naples, and the king and queen embarked in a frigate for Palermo, but, owing to the violence of the wind, were forced to anchor under the batteries, and in consequence became prisoners to the troops of the French emperor.

The French troops still keep up their forces in Germany; rumor states that they are intended to act against Prussia; others again state, that Prussia and France have concluded an alliance, and that a congress is to be held at Berlin, under the mediation of Prussia to negociate a peace between England and France, and that the marquis of Douglas and Mr. Thos. Grenville will be sent as plenipotentiaries from England. But what appears most interesting to the American public, is the annexed paragraph from the London Gazette of the 10th ultimo.

Several conferences have taken place between Mr. Munro, the American ambassador and his majesty's ministers, relative to the matters in dispute between Great-Britain & the United States—and there is every prospect of a speedy and amicable adjustment of all differences. Twenty-five American seamen were discharged on Friday, at Portsmouth, from the Ville de Milan frigate, sir R. Laurie, lately returned from the Halifax station. An order we understand has been received to discharge all American subjects from our ships.

LONDON, March 10.

The accounts respecting the public operations of the French army are various. Some assert that the forcible occupation of Hanover is its object, others are of opinion that it is destined to occupy the neighborhood of the Sound, for the purpose of preventing English ships from passing the strait. The fact is, Buonaparte has let none of the powers of Europe into a knowledge of his views!

Letters of the 12th ult. from Venice and Rome, srate, that the king and queen of Naples embarked at Naples, for Sicily leaving the hereditary prince and his consort, the daughter of the present king of Spain, to watch over the interests of the people threatened by the approach of the French army; but we learn by

The French Journals, which have reached us [Star] to the 2d instant say, that the royal couple never arrived at their place of destination. The frigate which carried them, on its passage to Palermo, was obliged by the violence of the wind, to anchor under the batteries of the coast, and surrender to the French. On the fate of this unfortunate princess, the Moniteur is meanly triumphant and scurriously libellous. It contains the most unprincipled invectives against her whom it stiles a vindictive and blood-thirsty woman; and accuses her of having robbed the bank, and also private individuals. But what can be expected from so degraded a press as that of the French?

Among our extracts from these journals will be found the details of the operations of the French army in the Neapolitan territories. The resistance opposed to the invaders, was as great as could be expected, and as unavailing. All the strong places in the continental dominions of his Sicilian majesty, and Naples itself have been surrendered. The military events therefore, are of little consequence. Naples is conquered. The establishment of a new dynasty, under a French prince, is announced. Joseph Bonaparte, in all probability, is the person destined for the throne, which more than any other in Europe, has for ages been the sport of all caprices of ambition, and has passed thro' almost all the ancient royal families of Europe, from the old Spanish dynasties to the new, from the house of Austria and Bourbon to the race of Bonaparte. This change will not surprise the present time, nor future alterations, posterity.

The French army advanced in three columns, and seems to have met with no resistance, except at the fort of Gaeta, the most advanced defence of the Neapolitan capital, commanded by the Prince of Hesse. On the 12th, Capua was summoned, and on the morning of the 13th, a deputation from the city had an interview with Joseph Bonaparte, when the surrender of Naples, Gaeta, Capua, Pescara, and all the other garrisons, was arranged. On the 15th, the future king was to make his solemn entry into the capital of the Two Sicilies.

It is impossible to form even an idea of the changes and arrangements destined to take place among the powers on the continent. The detail of the operations against Naples is wound up with a dreadful denunciation, but whether levelled particularly at Russia or Prussia, or at both, we cannot decide: "The first prince who shall dare to sacrifice the tranquility of the continent to the caprice and guineas of these avaricious and insatiable speculators (meaning Great-Britain, no doubt) shall lose his throne." In the interim the French have occupied almost the whole of Franconia, except Wurtzburg, and the Prussian territory.—They are continually accumulating in force, and, instead of returning to France, are apparently taking measures for prolonging their stay. Augereau, with the French troops under his command after invading Hessia, has taken possession of the Prussian towns of Lipdstad, in Westphalia, & Dethmold, near Paderborn. The army of Lefevre is covering the movements of Augereau, to enable him to maintain his communication with the grand French army, extending along the Black Forest. On the other hand, Russia has not been idle. A fresh army of 180,000 Russians has already been assembled in the neighborhood of the frontier threatened by the peace of Austerlitz, which promised an indemnity in the east to the emperor Francis. Several of the German Journals assert that a congress of the Polish nation is about to be held at Wilna, in consequence of a requisition of the court of Russia. It is also stated as being already determined upon, that the emperor of Russia is to appear in the congress, and declare himself king of Poland.

We need hardly add, that intelligence of such moment should not be credited on slight authority.

The French consuls were, on the 1st instant, at 62 fr. 80c.

The Petersburg Court Gazette, of the 7th February, contains the following important article, under the head Breslau, Jan. 15: "Authentic advices from Vienna, positively contradict the assertion made in different public papers, of the combining of French and Austrian troops, for the purpose of occupying either Servia, Bosnia, Moldavia, or Wallachia. Nor has the emperor of Germany entered into any agreement whatever, that might have hostile designs against any of his neighbors."

The Archduke Charles, who was already minister at war, and possessed all the influence and patronage in the military department, is appointed generalissimo of the whole Austrian army, a charge confided to no other since the death of Prince Eugene.

The report that Prussia intended to garrison Hamburg, Bremen, and Lubec, has been officiaally contradicted.

M. Worronzow, nephew to the Russian ambassador at our court, came over in one of the packets from Hamburg, and is said to be entrusted with dispatches of the utmost importance. A merchant of high respectability in the city arrived also by the same conveyance. He left Berlin on the 26th ult. at which time it was very generally reported, that the French had determined upon hostilities against Prussia, and that a numerous French army was already on its march, the first operations of which would, of course, be directed against Hanover. The same gentleman adds, that serious fears were entertained for the safety of Hamburgh, and the general prospect was rendered the most discouraging, from the opinion very generally entertained, that disaffection prevails among some divisions of the Prussian forces. For the accuracy of these statements we cannot vouch, but they seem in some degree sanctioned, from the circumstance of the Prussian army being continued on the war establishment, and the equipage of the king of Prussia being again ordered to be got ready for the field. The ambassador to the French court, the marquis Lucchesini, has returned to Berlin. Some accounts say "on an important mission;" others, "being recalled by his own court."

FEMALE HUMANE ASSOCIATION CHARITY-SCHOOL.

Jan. 28, 1806.

The trustees met at the school-house—present,

The right rev. bishop Carroll, president;
The rev. Mr. Kurtz,
Mr. William Wilson,
Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth,
Mr. Peter Hoffman.

The president lays before the board the report of the female directors of said school, with sundry documents attested by the matron thereof; from which it appears, that there are at present twenty-nine scholars in said school, receiving their education, cloathing, and some of them their board: that in the course of the last year, thirteen poor female children, after receiving an useful education suited to their condition, were dismissed from said school; eleven thereof were bound to respectable characters, the two remaining were returned to their reputable mothers, who wished to obtain the benefit of their children's labor. The trustees, after maturely considering the same, and being well assured of the zeal and œconomy of the female directors, and in an especial manner of their freedom from giving an undue preference to the children of any particular religious denomination,

Resolved, unanimously, That the said trustees have abundant reason to be satisfied with the management & condition of said school; and as the generous contributions heretofore made to the support thereof have invariably been so well applied, Resolved, further, That the said trustees have just grounds to believe that the benefactors to this charity will not regret a continuance of their annual aid, on which the existence of the institution in a great measure depends.

JAMES CARROLL, Secr'y.

 MRS. HARROD the matron of the school, will wait on the ladies and gentlemen to receive their yearly subscriptions, due the first of the present month.

COMMUNICATION.

Great complaints are making at the vast circulation in this city of one dollar bank notes, issued by the Farmers Bank at Annapolis; it is hoped something will be speedily done to put a stop to this business, or we may bid adieu to the sight of a silver dollar. It is most extraordinary that we should be deluged by such a paltry emission of notes, when it is highly probable there are not five of the inhabitants concerned in the bank from whence they are issued.

We ask our readers to remark the observations of Leib made in the house of representatives on the 7th instant, respecting judge Chase. That such language should escape any member of congress is a disgrace to the country; but that Michael Leib should be able to pronounce the words culprit, and felon with reference to any other person than himself, argues a degree of effrontery of which we should not have thought even him possessed.
