EXTRACTS

From the documents respecting the application of Hamet Caramalli, ex-bashaw of Tripoli.

From William Eaton, to the secretary of the Navy of the United States.

Syracuse, July 6, 1805.

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose herewith, copies of my communications to the commodore since I left Egypt; by the next occasion shall give the correspondence. I cannot but think our pacification has been too much precipitated; was it contemplated that so formidable a squadron should be sent into this sea, to negociate without shewing itself before the enemy's port? Such is the fact! if it had only appeared off the place, I have no doubt the effect would have been a peace without money? if it had gone into vigorous co-operation, Joseph Bashaw must have resigned at discretion, or saved himself by flight; he was calculating more on this than on defence; but we have peace!

The whole expence of my expedition in in cash, amounts to thirty-ninethousand one hundred and eighty dollars, fifty-eight cents, payment of troops included; as soon as I can effect a full settlement, my accounts will be transmitted; it will be necessary to negociate bills on your department, in order to enable me to do this, to the amount of seventeen thousand eighty-two dollars fifty-eight cents.

I learn that our consul at Gibraltar, Mr. Gavino, intends resigning. George Dyson, esq. who was appointed navy agent here by commodore Preble, and who has discharged the duties of that office with activity and trust, I am persuaded, would be glad to transfer his concerns to Gibraltar, if the consulate there might be conferred on him. It is believed no man would acquit himself in that trust more to the satisfaction of government; perhaps none has better deserved it; commodore Preble, would I think, say as much.

I have the honor to be, &c.

WILLIAM EATON,

From Tobias Lear, to the secretary of the navy of the United States.

On board the United States frigate Constitution, Syracuse harbor, July 5, 1805.

SIR,

Since I had the honor of addressing you under date of the 3d of November, I have thought it my duty to remain in the vicinity of Tripoli, that I might be at hand for entering into a negociation with the bashaw, whenever he should give evidence of his disposition to do so on proper terms; and I accordingly took up my residence in Malta; being well assured that nothing would occur to make my presence necessary at Algiers during the winter and knowing that the Dey was perfectly satisfied as to the cause of my extended absence from his dominions.

On the 28th of December I received a letter from Don Gerardo Joseph De Tauza, the Spanish consul at Tripoli, stating, that on the 17th of December he had a private audience with the bashaw of Tripoli on the business of his nation, which being over, the bashaw introduced the subject of this war with the United States, and expressed his willingness to conclude it, if the Americans were disposed to come forward on proper grounds. The Spanish consul answered that he presumed they would have no objections to finish the war upon honorable terms. There, he says, the subject was dropped; and he took the libety of making this communication to me, having heard that I was in Malta; adding as his own opinion, that if I would come over to Tripoli, in a flag of truce, he had no doubt but a peace might soon be concluded on honorable and satisfactory terms. As I had reason to believe that this communication was made to me with the knowledge, if not by the express desire of the Bashaw, I felt in no haste to reply to it, as I was persuaded that, if he then discovered a desire to terminate the business, he would be more anxious to do so when the season for active operations should approach. On the 28th of March, commodore Barron sent a small vessel to Tripoli with clothing, &c. for our captive countrymen, and by that occasion I acknowledged the receipt of the Spanish consul's letter; and observed to him, that as we had last year made several overtures to the bashaw for peace, which had been rejected, he might be assured that we should never make the first advance again on that subject. But that notwithstanding our force in this sea was very considerable, and would, at the proper season, act with decided vigor; yet we should be ready to receive and consider any propositions which might come from the bashaw before that season arrived; provided such propositions were compatible with the dignity and rising character of our nation, and tending to an honorable and permanent peace.

On the 21st of April, I received by the return of the same vessel from Tripoli, another letter from the Spanish consul, saying, that he had communicated to the bashaw the contents of my letter of the 28th of March, who had directed him to inform me, that to shew his disposition to end the war he would make a proposition, viz. That the United States should pay him 200.000 dollars for peace and ransom, and deliver up to him gratis, all his subjects in their power, and make full restitution of the property taken from them. The Spanish consul added, that he considered the propositions of the bashaw rather intended to form the basis for opening a negociation, than made with an expectation of being granted. At the same time he mentioned the mode of communication which might be pursued, if I should think proper to come off Tripoli with a view of opening a negociation. These propositions were so completely inadmissible that after communicating them to commodore Barron, I thought no more of them, fully expecting further advances either through the same or some other channel; as it evidently appeared to be the wish of the bashaw to open a negociation.

Between the time last mentioned, and the 18th May, there were intimations made in various ways of the disposition of the bashaw to treat; but none in a direct or official manner. On that day commodore Barron wrote me the letter No. 1, to which on the 19th, I returned the answer No. 2, and on the 22d, he informed he had relinquished the command of the squadron to captain Rodgers. On the 24th I embarked on board the United States States frigate Essex, capt. James Barron, to proceed to Tripoli. On the 26th in the morning, we saw the town of Tripoli distant about ten miles, and at the same time the United States frigate Con-
