NORFOLK, May 24.

Snow Wentworth, Whitesides, 10 days from Barracoa. Captain Whitesides sailed from Cape-Francois on the 27th of April, in the schr. Clarissa, Townsend, of and for Philadelphia; on the evening of the next day, in the Caicos passage, was captured by two French schooner privateers and a felucca, and carried into Barracoa, after plundering him of all his wearing apparel. On the 6th of May, a French felucca privateer came into Barracoa, who had been engaged with two Baltimore schooners; mounted one long twelve-pounder, and had forty men, out of whom she had 7 killed, and 18 wounded; her bow and quarters stove in; her hull, rigging and sails greatly injured. The privateersmen declare, that in consequence of this action, they will put to death every American they meet coming from St. Domingo. Left at Barracoa, schooner Reynard, Chester, from this port, discharging; ——, M'Laughlin, of and from Charleston, bound to Jamaica, was taken by a French privateer, detained two days, given up and allowed damages, and was to sail in a day or two; John Hathaway, to sail for Jamaica in a day or two.

A private letter from a gentleman in London, to his friend in Philadelphia, mentions, that the Board of Health of the city of London, had lately agreed in a belief that the yellow-fever was not a contiguous disease, and of course that it could not be imported from one country into another.

We are authorised to state, that Thomas Worrell, esq. has accepted the appointment of associate judge of the second judicial district of Maryland, having resigned the appointment of clerk of Kent county court:

[The following memorial accompanied and has a reference to that of Samuel G. Ogden, published in yesterday's Gazette.]

To the honorable the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled,

THE MEMORIAL

Of WILLIAM S. SMITH, late Surveyor of the port of New-York,

RESPECTFULLY REPRESENTS,

That your memorialist is accused as having been a party to the offences, with which Samuel G Ogden is charged, as mentioned in the preceding memorial, to which for circumstances of general Miranda's arrival in this country, his visit to the city of Washington, his communications with executive officers of the government of the United States and his correspondence with your memorialist while there, your memorialist prays leave to refer and to confirm the facts stated in the said memorial. Your memorialist further respectfully represents, that his acquaintance with general Miranda has been of very long standing That general Miranda arrived in this city from England, in the month of November last, and informed your memorialist that he came with an intention to visit his native country, and hoped to find in the United States the resources necessary to carry his plans into effect.

Your memorialist recommended, as it was a question of great national importance, that general Miranda should first communicate those plans to the president of the U. States and secretary of state; and if their permission was obtained your memorialist would agree to accompany him in their execution.

That the subsequent communications were made to the administration, as stated in the preceding memorial; but no actual leave having been granted, your memorialist being a public officer declined accompanying general Miranda, but was fully convinced that his views met the approbation of the administration.

That under these impressions your memorialist was induced to give every facility in his power towards the execution of these plans, which he considered under the sanction of the president of the United States and secretary of state.

That your memorialist never had cause to suspect that he was in error, or that the administration had changed their Modus Agendi until he was waited on by the deputy marshal, on the first day of March last, at about eleven o'clock in the morning, when your memorialist was arrested by virtue of a warrant issued by Mathias B. Talmage, esq. judge of the district court for the New-York district, which warrant after reciting that there were strong and violent grounds to suspect that your memorialist had within the jurisdiction of the United States, provided and prepared the means of a military enterprize to be carried on against the dominions of some foreign prince, or state then unknown, with whom the United States were at peace, commanded the persons to whom the said warrant was directed, to arrest your memorialist and to bring him before the said judge. That after your memorialist was taken on the abovementioned warrant, he was told by the officer who had him in custody that he had been ordered not to suffer your memorialist to consult counsel or have communication with any person whatever. That your memorialist was conducted by the said officer to the place where, as your memorialist understood, the district court or the judge of the said court was sitting. But on his arrival there he was informed that the judge or court, was not then ready to receive him. That he was then conducted by the officer who had your memorialist in custody to the office of the clerk of the district court, where he was detained till six o'clock in the evening, when a messenger from the said judge gave information that the court was then ready to receive your memorialist. That thereupon your memorialist was conducted before the said judge, whom he found attended by the district attorney of the United States for the New-York distsict, and some other officers of the court. That upon your memorialist appearing before the said judge, he was informed that he was to be examined touching the offences mentioned in the warrant. That upon your memorialist enquiring whether the judge or court had authority to compel him to submit to the examination they proposed to make, and to enforce answers to questions which might tend to develop important secrets of state—Your memorialist was answered in the affirmative, and informed that he would be compelled to answer all such questions as should be put to him.—That your memorialist then told the judge that it would be unnecessary to put questions, as without them, under those compulsory circumstances, he would detail all he knew respecting general Miranda, and his late expedition from the port of New-York, which your memorialist understood was to be the subject of enquiry. That thereupon your memorialist gave a full and faithful relation, as he had declared he would do; which relation was reduced to writing, and styled the voluntary examination of your memorialist. But your memorialist declares that the said examination was in no other respect voluntary than as it was made by way of narrative, rather than as answers to interrogatories. That the declarations of your memorialist having been signed and sworn to by him, he was at about eleven o'clock at night required to give bail, himself in five thousand dollars as a principal, and two sureties in five thousand dollars each; and himself as a witness in five thousand dollars, and two sureties in twenty-five hundred dollars each, for his appearance at the next circuit court of the United States for the district of New-York. That previously to the sitting of the said court your memorialist was removed by the president of the United States from his office of surveyor of the port of New-York, and his affairs becoming much embarrassed in consequence of that removal, he was arrested in civil process and confined in the jail of the city and county of New-York. That upon the sitting of the court the recognizances of your memorialist and of his sureties were vacated in the production of a certificate from the sheriff of the city and county of New-York, that your memorialist was in his custody; thereupon a bench warrant was issued by the judge of the district court against your memorialist; that the sheriff of the city of N. York having refused to deliver the custody of your memorialist to the marshal on [illegible] the judge of the circuit court then caused a habeas corpus ad testificandum to be issued against your memorialist, although at the time no issue was joined in any case in which your memorialist could testify. That when brought into court on this writ, the marshal was directed to serve his warrant, and he having thereupon returned that he had taken your memorialist, an order was made for his commitment to the custody of the marshal; but whilst the order for this commitment was making out the sheriff took your memorialist out of court and put him in the city prison out of the reach of the marshal.—That on the 8th instant, an indictment was found against your memorialist, charging him in substance with the offences set forth in the abovementioned warrant. That proceedings were thereupon had in the circuit court of the United States for the New-York district, in all respects similar to those stated in the preceding memorial of Samuel G. Ogden, to which your memorialist prays leave to refer.

Your memorialist further respectfully represents, and doth most solemnly declare, that in all he did in respect to the expedition of Miranda, he did believe that he was acting with the approbation of the president of the U. States and of the secretary of state—and so far from thinking that he was subjecting himself to penalties under the laws of the U. States, he thought his conduct would hereafter gain the applause of his fellow-citizens, who he had the best reason to believe would derive the grestest advantages from the enterprize which was carried on with the approbation of their executive government.

Your memorialist submits his conduct to the consideration of your honorable body, and prays such relief as you in your wisdom shall think proper to grant.

W. S. SMITH.

Among the several democratic papers which fall into our hands, the Political Observatory is the only one which now and then furnishes us for selection, a paragraph of sober reasoning and just political remarks. Let the reader point out, if he can, in what the following differs from the uniform sentiment of federalists.

[New-England Republican.]

FROM THE POLITICAL OBSERVATORY.

"Had the French stopped when they once made themselves free—had they kept the original object of the fathers of the revolution in view, the greatest benefits would undoubtedly have resulted therefrom. But instead of this, they have been dazzled and led away by the glory of conquest; have submitted to an intriguing, ambitious foreigner, whose object appears to be universal domination, and who threatens to be the tyrant of the world. It cannot, therefore, be the wish of any genuine American, that he should succeed any further. He is not, like Fayette and Moreau, the votary of liberty. We cannot feel that friendship for him, which we have felt for his predecessors. He has deserted liberty and we ought to desert him—ought not to wish him success. It would perhaps be gratifying to our resentment if he should humble the pride of Great-Britain, that we may be released from the insults of her cruizers. But we should not seek the gratification of our resentment at the expence of our interest. Were Britain destroyed, Bonaparte would become the tyrant of the ocean, as he now is, tyrant of the land. "The properties of the shark would be added to those of the tyger," and nothing would be safe from his destroying fangs.

For the Federal Gazette.

Gentlemen,

I request the privilege of making known through the medium of your useful paper, that a small work entitled "A serious call to a holy life," written by the late William Law, D. D. of England, may be had at the store of John Hagerty, Light-street. This little book is truly invaluable: it exhibits the reasonableness, the happiness, the necessity of a pious heart and benevolent life; & the folly, vanity and danger, of a life of dissipation and vice, in a manner so pleasing, rational and demonstrative, that I am persuaded every man who will give it a serious and attentive perusal, will resolve thenceforth to lead "a holy life." It ought to be in the hands of every professed christian, and may be had at the moderate price of 50 cents.
