ALEXANDRIA, December 30.
A letter has been received by the president of the United States, from Gen. Wilkinson, giving the following information:
"He had received certain intelligence that Colonel Burr meditated an attack upon New-Orleans with 5000 men, and was to be aided by an expedition from the West-Indies; that in consequence of this information he had determined to proceed to New-Orleans, in order to place it in the best possible state of defence; and that he was then on his way, in advance of his army, who was to follow him."

The foregoing was mentioned by General Smith, who said he had just received it from the president himself.
We have no comment to offer on the foregoing, except that the information is derived from a very respectable source, and is stated from several other quarters.
It is really surprising, that without the least title of evidence, direct or circumstantial, that the democratic prints will insinuate, or rather insist that Colonel Burr is supported by Great Britain, and this against every thing that is probable. Has Great Britain any force in the quarter which is threatened, to co-operate with her? Are the Louisianians under British influence? Are Colonel Burr and his political friends, men on whom Great Britain has at any time placed confidence? Are not they the avowed foes to Great Britain? But what, we ask, could Great Britain promise herself by aiding or countenancing such a plan?

It is the height of folly, if not of wickedness, to endeavor to provoke a quarrel with the only nation that stands between ours and a nation that the maddest democrat knows would turn her arms against us, the moment she had a chance. But for some cause which we cannot imagine, it would seem that we have men among us, that provided they could accomplish the ruin of Great Britain, would willingly become slaves to Napoleon, or exist under his protection, in which we can see no difference. [Norfolk Gazette.]

FEDERAL GAZETTE.
MONDAY, JANUARY 12.

LITERARY NOTICE.
We congratulate the citizens of Baltimore on the appearance of a new work, which promises fair, if we may judge from the two numbers published, to yield both instruction and amusement, for the lovers of Science and Polite Literature. The OBSERVER, conducted by the editor of the COMPANION, appears in a neat octavo form, and is published every Saturday. From a personal knowledge of the editor, and of several worthy associates in the cause, we anticipate no inconsiderable pleasure from this weekly treat.

In the words of a British writer, "every day's experience proves, that a handful of highly intellectual men, by a union of talents, may wield the governments of all civilized nations." This fact, now universally admitted, need not be further urged. It is quite time for the inhabitants of the second commercial city in America, to evince an emulation in the honorable contest for literary superiority. For the honour of Baltimore, and of the American name, we hope to see the Observer prosper, and its Editor richly rewarded, for a twelve-month's toil in a garden as yet but illy cultivated.

From a Correspondent.
AT a period so interesting as the present, we could wish to see the more enlightened part of the ministerialists act wisely, for the common good, without reference to the name of party.

When treason and conspiracy, emboldened by the impunity with which they are permitted to plot, stalk abroad in open day, defying the power of the general government, and threatening the existence of the federal compact, no private citizen, worthy the privileges of an American, can behold, unmoved, and free from apprehension, the clouds which darken the western sky.

As the political salvation of the United States depends immediately on the coalesced strength of all; there is no object to be more steadily pursued, by the true patriots of America, than that of preserving a close and intimate connection of all the different parts. Hence every effort of Washington, and of all the legitimate members of his school, have been directed to this point. And there can be no method more correct than this, by which to test the patriotism and good sense of the present, or subsequent Legislators.

Will we be denounced, by the ruling party, if we attempt to force the Maryland house of delegates through this ordeal? Will not all moderate men, who love the best interests of the state, with a nobler affection than that which binds them to a local name, agree with us while we contend that the welfare of the country is neglected, whilst the public treasure lies unemployed; and that all this is owing to the majority's blind adherence to the tenets of a party, who cannot, or will not, understand our true interests?

It plainly appears that a large sum of the public's money is locked up at Annapolis, which could easily have been so invested as to yield ten per cent. per annum. About the mere loss of this much money, we are not disposed to raise a clamour, as did our worthy opponents, with a less evident cause, in the days of federal preponderancy. The immense advantages to the country, which might—nay, that certainly would, result from a judicious application of the funds, is the object to which we would respectfully direct the attention of the reader. By employing this money in the extension of a permanent, well made road, to meet the great western road, now forming, at Cumberland; thereby connecting more closely the interests of the western & Atlantic states, our representatives would have exhibited proof of their ability to legislate, and have shewn some anxiety for the prosperity of those who employed them. Every enlightened citizen of the Atlantic states will acknowledge that without some adequate cause, the remote districts can feel no permanent attachment to the other parts. It is indispensable then, that we should, with the utmost promptitude, create the links of a great chain, which may bind us inseparably to each other. By the safe and expeditious mode of reaching our markets, which our western brethren would see in the establishment of turnpike roads, we may make it their interest to stand or fall with us; for the ready sale they meet with for their commodities, and the extensive credit given to their traders by our merchants, will, in time, be productive of mutual attachments more than sufficient to counteract the machinations of all the intriguing and disaffected part of the community.

On the contrary, should the immense mid-land wilderness remain unsettled, and almost unknown; should the western people be left to exhaust their strength and dissipate their substance, in combating (to them) insurmountable difficulties, in search of a market; unaided by the older states and neglected by the government; if such a state of things is permitted to exist, what better can we expect—WHAT BETTER WILL WE MERIT—than to be discarded by those hardy inhabitants of the forest, who are thus driven to the terrible necessity of forming other & strange connections.

We appeal to the reflecting portion of our countrymen, to the sober and moderate of whatever party; as to the good sense of the nation; whether any other policy, different from a rapid and steady internal improvement, can be justly denominated wise, patriotic, or of good tendency.

We anticipate the cry of "no danger"—"unfounded apprehensions," &c. but we meet it with the declaration, that government has received information of very great present danger; we know that Mr. ISAAC BRIGGS, surveyor-general of the Mississippi territory, has brought express intelligence, that men in high stations there are most corrupted; we have good reason for saying that Mr. Briggs will not resume his station, and that this resolution is taken from a conviction that he stood in personal danger, and from a conviction that the alarming and unsettled state of affairs rendered his official attendance unnecessary.

Such is the scarcity of forage in this place, says a Norfolk paper of January 5, that a load of Northern Hay, was sold this day, at the enormous price of two dollars and an half per hundred.

Blannerhasset, who plays such a distinguished part in Mr. Burr's plot, is an United Irishman; he is said to have been in Richmond about 6 or 8 years ago, and to have taken the oath of naturalization in that state. He is said to own £. 20,000, more or less, in the English funds. He lives on an Island in the River Ohio, twelve miles below Marietta, and containing about 350 acres, of which Blannerhasset owns about 200. A gentleman acquainted with B. is of opinion, that his resources are not at all commensurate with the expenses of this expedition; and asserts as the general sentiment of that part of the country, that most of the means are derived from the Spanish government. [Richmond Enquirer.]

The public will be pleased to learn that the resolution in favor of making a complimentary present to George W. Mann, for his gallant conduct at Derne, was unanimously passed the general assembly of Maryland. [American.]

On Friday, the 21 instant, the following resolution was read in the house of delegates of this state:

Whereas the general assembly of Maryland, viewing with sensations of the greatest pleasure, the brave and gallant conduct of Charles Gordon, John Trippe and John Davis in the several attacks on the enemy's gun-boats off Tripoli, whereby they secured to themselves immortal glory, and gave a brilliant lustre to the navy of the U. States. And whereas this legislature feel an anxious wish to bear the most honorable testimony to the bravery of those manly defenders of their country; therefore resolved, that the governor and council be, and they are hereby authorized and required to procure three elegant swords and belts, with an appropriate engraving and motto, emblematic of the glorious actions fought off Tripoli, & cause the same to be delivered to the said Charles Gordon, John Trippe and John Davis, in testimony of the high sense of approbation the legislature of this state entertain of their gallant conduct.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of great respectability, dated Frankfort, (Ken.) December 15.

"Burr left this place about five days ago, and went to Lynch's. He told me he should wait to hear as to Wilkinson's success; if hostilities did commence, he should go down and try and take all he could get to follow him, and that if hostilities did not commence, he should go to the southward. I believe there is no doubt but general Adair has gone to Louisiana, and it is said has gone to Wilkinson. There is no doubt but men are engaging for the Burr party. I have seen several persons who have conversed with the men engaged, viz— and at least to have arms if required, and are to descend the river, to get 100 dollars per month and 100 or 150 acres of land."

Quere.—Is the above statement, represented to have been made by Mr. Burr, meant by him as a cover to plans even more hostile to the peace of the union? [Not Intel.]

Boston, January 3, 1807.
Messrs. Russell & Cutler,

The Connecticut Gazette, of the 17th ult. which by chance fell into my hands a few days ago, contains a paragraph respecting the capture of the ship Titus, which is so erroneously stated, that I take the liberty to address the editor of the said paper, thro' the medium of your press, and will give the facts as they took place. Here follows the tenor of the paragraph I allude to:
"Ship Titus, of Philadelphia, from Bordeaux, has been captured in sight of Cape Henlopen, within the jurisdiction of the United States, by a British vessel. The passengers and pilot were put into a boat, and driven ashore in a snow storm."

Without examining into the legality or illegality of the detention of the said ship, I shall say, that when she was brought to the Bermuda sloop, she was at least at a distance of twelve miles from the nearest land, and, if I mistake not, Cape Henlopen was about fifteen miles distant.

The passengers, of which I was one, will all do justice to the humane manner in which they were treated by all the officers of the capturing ship, and particularly by Mr. Dakers, the first lieutenant, and Mr. Jennings, the purser, who offered their births to those of us who should want them. Nothing can exceed their attentions and gentlemanly conduct towards us, especially my remarkable, as we were all French (17 in number.) I am happy to have it in my power thus to acknowledge, for myself and in behalf of my fellow passengers, our grateful remembrance of their treatment to us.
Let us now examine how far the editor of the above Gazette is correct, in stating our being landed. He seems to intimate that we were forced on board of a boat, and pray, what kind of a boat? during a snow storm. This is totally erroneous. It was at our own request, that we were put on board a pilot-boat—not only it was not during a snow storm, but the weather was the most beautiful. It was 18 hours after we had left the ship off Cape Henlopen, that the wind shifted from NW. to NE. and blew most violently. Our subsequent shipwreck forese, and I am confident, from the humanity he displayed towards us, that he would not have exposed us to the sufferings and hardships we have undergone.

Such is the real statement. I owe it to captain Ryan and the officers under his command, to redress this error, and the love I bear to truth and justice would not permit me to remain silent. F. GIRAUD.

The printers who published the above mentioned paragraph, are requested to give room to the foregoing, and in so doing, they will act with impartiality and justice.
