Whereas, Michael Primbook, (MY husband) and a man of color, hath lately departed this life, suddenly, and as appeared by a jury of inquest, held on his body, by subpoena; and whereas, the said Michael deposited his accounts, and the little money he had gained by his industry, for his own support and mine, in the hands of some gentleman of this city. This is therefore humbly to supplicate such gentleman, to give notice thereof at the office of Samuel Sterrett, esq. to Mr. John Stewart, with whom I now reside, in order that I, his wife and his infant child, may have our rights decreed to us according to justice, and the law; meaning to apply for letters of administration on his little all; thus pray
RACHEL PRIMBOOK,
Widow of said Michael.
A short time before Michael's death, he was asked who kept his money, and he said, N. B. Said Michael, formerly lived with Mr. Yates, and has since, for his known honesty, been occasionally employed by many of the most respectable merchants, on the different wharves, as well in stowing away, as watching their property thereon, by night, when occasion required.
