THE LIFE OF
GEN. WASHINGTON,
By JOHN MARSHALL, Chief Justice of the United States.
Complete in 5 vols. 8vo, with an elegant Portrait, and a variety of Maps; is now ready for subscribers, and for sale, by GEORGE HILL.
The following remarks from a late London publication, attest the high opinion entertained of this authentic and interesting work:
"The public will learn with interest that the literary monument which has long been projected to the memory of the most illustrious character of modern times, is at length completed. No apology can be requisite for erecting such a monument to him, who was the first in war, the first in peace, and the first in the hearts of his fellow citizens: to him who was the founder of a great and prosperous empire, and whose moderation and pure patriotism challenge the imitation of all statesmen. This performance of Judge Marshall has already been distinguished by the most honorable and unequivocal testimonies; it has been hailed as an acquisition to standard literature; and it has been considered as deserving, in point of execution, a place by the side of Robertson's Charles the Fifth, and as unrivalled in the authenticity of its materials, by any work in the entire compass of history and biography."

GRAND ARMY.
Forty-ninth bulletin.
"WARSAW, Jan. 6." Breslau has surrendered. The capitulation has not yet been received at head-quarters; neither has the inventory of the magazines of subsistence, or of the clothing and artillery, yet come to hand. They are, however, known to be very considerable.
Prince Jerome must have made his entry into the place. He is going to besiege Brieg, Schweidnitz and Kosel.

General Victor commander of the 10th corps of the army, has marched to besiege Colberg and Dautric, and to take these places during the remainder of the winter.
M. De Zastrow, aid-de-camp to the king of Prussia, a wise and moderate man, who had signed the armistice which his master did not ratify, was, however, on his arrival at Konigsburg, appointed minister for foreign affairs.

Our cavalry is not far from Konigsburg.
The Russian army is continuing its movement towards Grodno. We learn that in the last engagements it had a great number of generals killed and wounded.—It evinces great discontent against the emperor of Russia and the court. The soldiers say, that if their army had been judged strong enough to fight with advantage against the French, the emperor, his guards, the garrison of St. Petersburg, and the generals of his court, would have been conducted to it last year; that if on the contrary, the events of Austerlitz and those of Jena, made it be thought that the Russians could not obtain success against the French army, they ought not to have been engaged in an unequal struggle. They also say the emperor Alexander has compromised our glory. We had always been vanquishers; we had established and shared the opinion that we were invincible. Things are greatly altered. For these two years past we have been led about from the frontiers of Poland to Austria from the Dniester to the Vistula, and made to fall every where in the snare of the enemy. It is difficult not to perceive that all this is ill managed."

Gen. Michelson is still in Moldavia.— There is no news of his having marched against the Turkish army, which occupies Bucharest and Wallachia. The seats of that war are hitherto confined to the invading of Czoczim and Bender. Great movements are taking place throughout all Turkey to repel so unjust an aggression.
Gen. Baron Vincent is arrived from Vienna at Warsaw, with letters from the emperor of Austria for the emperor Napoleon.
There had been a great fall of Snow and it had frozen for three days. The use of sledges had given great rapidity to the communications but the thaw has just begun again. The Polish army that such a winter is unexampled in this country.—The temperature is in reality milder than it generally is at Paris at this season.

FIFTIETH BULLETIN.
WARSAW, January 13.
Among the troops found at Ostrolenka were several sick Russians, whom the enemy had been unable to take off. Independent of the loss of the Russian army in killed and wounded, it has suffered still greater losses by the illness which increases in it from day to day.
On the 8th of Jan. the garrison of Bres-law, consisting of 5300 men, defied before prince Jerome. The town has sustained considerable damage. From the first moment it was invested, the Prussian governor caused three suburbs to be burned. The fortress was regularly besieged; we were already battering it in breach when it surrendered. The Prussian and Wurtemberg troops distinguished themselves by their intelligence and bravery. Prince Jerome is now investing and besieging at the same time all the other fortresses in Silesia. It is probable that they will not long hold out.
The corps of 10,000 men, whom the prince of Pless had formed of the garrisons of the fortresses, were cut to pieces in the engagements of the 29th and 30th of December.

Gen. Montbrun, with the Wurtemberg cavalry, went to meet the prince of Pless, near Ohlau, which he took possession of on the 28th in the evening. On the following morning, at 5 o'clock, the prince of Pless ordered him to be attacked. General Montbrun, taking advantage of the unfavorable position occupied by the enemy's infantry, made a movement to the left, turned him, killed a number of men, made 70 prisoners, took four pieces of cannon, and as many horses.
The principal forces, however, of the prince of Pless lay behind the Neis, where he assembled them after the engagement of Sreelmin. He left Schugab, and marching day and night, advanced as far as the night encampment of the Wurtemberg brigade, which were drawn up in the rear of Hube, under Breslaw. At eight in the morning he attacked with 6000 men in the village of Griesten, occupied by two battalions of infantry, and by the Litange light horse, under the command of the adjutant commandant Duvoyrier; but he met with so vigorous resistance, that he was forced to make a speedy retreat. Generals Montbrun and Minacci received orders immediately on their return from Ohlau, to cut off the enemy's retreat. But the prince of Pless made haste to disperse his troops, and made them return by detachments into the fortresses, abandoning in his flight, a part of his artillery, a great deal of baggage, and several horses.
He had a number of men killed in this affair, and left us 800 prisoners.
His majesty has given orders to testify his satisfaction to the Bavarian and Wurtemberg troops.

Letters received from Bucharest give some details concerning the preparations for war making by Barayret and the Pacha of Widdin. On the 20th of December the advanced guard of the Turkish army, consisting of 16,000 men, were on the frontiers of Wallachia and Moldavia. The prince Doloroucki was also there with his troops; they were thus in the presence of each other. In passing Bucharest, the Turkish officers appeared to be very much au-
