

Late from Europe

The editor of the Federal Gazette has received, by the Abena, 59 days from Liverpool, London papers to the twenty sixth Feb. inclusive. For this distinguished favor we are indebted to a respectable gentleman, who received the latest papers by this arrival.

Thus we are enabled to confirm the important intelligence received at Boston, and to add accounts one day later.

These papers no longer permit us to doubt that the fate of arms has been severely against the French army. Instead of being left "snug in winter quarters," they are in danger of being entirely cut to pieces. The loss, in killed or wounded, of many of their highest and most experienced officers; and the low state of Napoleon's health, added to the great loss in the late defeat, form an aggregate of distress which it is not improbable will be more than French fortitude can withstand.

It is stated that a considerable Austrian army is in motion—And although this account is not official, yet we consider it highly probable that Austria, hearing of the brilliant blow already struck in the north, will embrace the opportunity of re-echoing from the south of Poland the knell of the invaders. If the Germanic spirit yet glimmers in the socket—if the combined Russian and Prussian armies are successful in the north, and the Turks, Galicians and Hungarians unite in the south—will not the pride of Austria urge her to one noble exertion, which may raise a flame sufficient to annihilate the "Grand Army"?

We delight not in blood and devastation. We lament sincerely the dreadful necessity of destroying so many human beings. But what can ever stay the bare arm of France, but the catastrophe which we here anticipate? How much blood would extinguish her flaming rage for war? Alas! not the last drop in the last vein existing. Napoleon appears to march on from the impulse of no honorable ambition. Prostrate states, kingdoms and empires are no objects to excite his pity; and if all the world should lie down at his feet, still this Extra Alexander would weep that he had no more to conquer.

If then no sacrifice can satisfy his soul; if no distress can excite his compassion; if the Christian world will not regret it when they hear, that the "Ivanic veins were opened, and he has left this world to peace."

Some selections follow, from our London papers.

Dispatches from Lord Hutchinson, received by government yesterday morning, confirm the intelligence we have already communicated of the combined army having defeated the divisions of the French army under generals Bernadotte and Ney. These dispatches which were brought by Mr. Jackson, brother of our late ambassador to the Prussian court, agree in substance with the official report from the Abella du Nord of the 13th instant, which we yesterday laid before our readers. It is possible that the amount of the killed and wounded in this action may be exaggerated, in the Prussian account; but there is little doubt of its approaching very near to the truth. Generals Dupont and Lescaure were taken prisoners, and several pieces of cannon, and the whole of Bernadotte's baggage, were also the prize of the victors.

We also understand that at the moment of writing the dispatches which brought this intelligence, the French were retreating in all directions to Thorn, and the Allies in eager pursuit. The French general Thuringe, had deserted to the Russian headquarters, and had declared, that if his being made prisoner were notified at the advanced posts of the French army, several other French officers of consequence would follow his example. Bernadotte and Murat were both reported to be ill at Warsaw.

The French are greatly distressed for want of provisions, and it was believed were bent on recrossing the Vistula, being covered in their retreat by the left wing, commanded by marshals Ney and Bernadotte.

General Blucher, who our readers will recollect, made the gallant retreat to, and desperate resistance in Lubeck, and who is esteemed one of the best officers in the Prussian service, is exchanged for general Victor. And it is an extraordinary circumstance, and which may be relied upon, that the regiment of cuirassiers belonging to him, which were detained prisoners by the French at Potsdam, have made their escape man by man, and now form a part of the king of Prussia's body guard at Konigsberg.

Generals Kamenskoy and Buxhoden are certainly recalled, and Bennigsen is in the chief command of the Russian army. Prince Bagration is to act as second to Bennigsen.

Treaty with Prussia. Mr. Jackson also brought with him the conditions of the treaty of peace between the courts of London and Berlin, which are so much to the satisfaction of both, and in such forwardness, that the formality of ratification is alone wanting to its being confirmed.

Although in the present state of affairs, this instrument may be considered by some as a mere formality, inasmuch as the essentials to peace, even to the extent of warlike co-operation, exist in point of fact between both countries; yet let it be remembered that in this critical moment, when Prussia has lost almost every thing except her honor, it is the strongest and most satisfactory pledge that can be given by that state, that no negotiation, hostile or separate from the interests of this country, will, under any circumstance, be entered upon by it with Bonaparte.

The French and Swedes. The Swedish ambassador at the court of London also received dispatches yesterday, stating that twenty eight French armed vessels had been captured in an unsuccessful attempt to land a body of troops, in order to take possession of a Swedish fort in the Baltic; they were so vigorously attacked by a squadron of Swedish gun boats, that all the vessels were taken, and also a great portion of the troops which were not able to effect their escape in boats.

Private accounts from the continent state, that an order, signed by Bonaparte at Warsaw, has been received by Bourienne, at Hamburg, directing the immediate disposal of the confiscated English property at that place, some of which is to be sent to France, some to the army in Poland, and the remainder to be sold upon the spot.

The report of Turkey having declared war against Russia was not believed at Memei, when the last accounts left that city.

The first lieutenants of the Arethusa, Anson, Latona, and Fisgard frigates, who were at the surrender of Curacao, are to be promoted to the rank of commanders.

Admirals Rowley and Holloway have struck their respective flags at Smerness and Deal, and are arrived in town, on their way to Portsmouth, to sit as members of the court martial on Sir Home Popham.

FROM LLOYD'S LIST.

GRAVESEND, February 25. The Otis Crocker, from London for New York, is put into Dover Pier, in great distress.

The Diana, Holbrook, for Baltimore, is returned to Liverpool having been run foul of off the Isle of Man.

The Bristol Packet, from Liverpool, to Philadelphia, has been taken by a Spanish privateer, retaken by the Nile cutter and sent into Falout.

The Isabella, Crane, from Philadelphia, for Amsterdam, is detained and sent into Fowey.

Extract from the Official Report to the Royal Government, of the lieutenants and commanding officers of the general staff, Messrs. Von Bode, dated ELBING, Jan. 29, 1807.

"The intended junction between marshal Bernadotte and marshal Ney, the former of whom marched in the night between the 24th and 25th from Elbing, has been interrupted on the retreat of the latter near M. hringen, in consequence of the expedition and unexpected arrival of the combined Russian and Prussian corps. In the enemy's retreat, near Mohringen, Liebstadt and Saalfeldt, four thousand of them were taken prisoners, ten pieces of cannon and two stands of colors, as well as the whole baggage of marshal Bernadotte. The brave lieutenant-general Von Anreppe, however, of the Russian corps, has been killed by a musket-ball.

"Marshal Bernadotte has been driven back, by the persevering advance of our forces, into the forests of Strasburg, twenty leagues from Elbing; and marshal Ney to Pzansnic, in New East Prussia. The former is completely surrounded; but the latter has joined prince Murat, and the combined army will shortly give them battle. The Russian army is commanded by the general in chief Von Bennigsen, and consists of ten divisions, or of upwards of two hundred thousand men, which will be joined in a fortnight by Hetsman Platon, with twenty pieces of riding artillery, and thirty thousand Cossacks.

Position of the ten divisions of the army.

"1. Gen. Von Essen, with forty thousand men, stands near Broch & Wissocki, in Mackomiecki, New East Prussia.

"2. Major-general Sedmoratzev, with twenty thousand men, near Johansburg, Cloys and Nick-laiken, between the lakes. The remaining seven divisions, which are fronted by two vanguards and a corps of cavalry, have their left wing extended towards Neidenberg and Passenheim, with their right wing towards Lglan.

"Gen. L'Estocq is posted from Saalfeldt to Reisenberg and Marienwerder.

"According to some reports, for the veracity of which we cannot, however, altogether vouch, a large corps of Cossacks and Calmucks is shortly to come from Pillan, thro' the district of Dantzic, to act against the insurgents."

Capt. Fountain, of the Ann Pennock, (arrived at New York left at Barbados, the big Ann, Vinson, for Baltimore.

A postscript to the Royal Gazette, (Kingston, Jam.) of the 14th says.

By the Eagle Guineaman, arrived here from Trinidad, we learn that a vessel had arrived there on the 27th ult. with accounts of Canana, on the Spanish Main, having been taken by general Crawford.

From France.—Captain Adams, who has arrived at Boston, left Bordeaux city about the 1st of February. The reports there, were, that the French had been very roughly handled by the Russians; it was said 50 officers had been killed. Conscripts were often seen in Bordeaux. They do not appear covetous of glory. Business was dull. Four frigates were lying for sea. The Washington, of Philadelphia, the crew of the French frigate Valerucite on board, had been taken by a British frigate; but was afterwards forced into a French port in a gale of wind. Some neutral vessels had been seized for an alleged breach of the November decree.

Extract of a letter from New-Orleans, to a gentleman in this city.

"Lieutenant Spence, of the navy, has been arrested on suspicion of being concerned with colonel Burf in the Mexican expedition. A report has been long in circulation, that he was to command Burr's marine force. I believe his being on furlough, and in the western country (alone) have given rise to this suspicion. His department is not that of a man concerned in any nefarious undertaking—On hearing he was implicated, he boldly came forward and demanded an investigation into his actions."

Communication. One of our city ordinances enjoins, that all Dogs kept within this city shall wear a collar about their necks at all times, with the owner's name thereon, on penalty of two dollars, to be paid by the owner or harborer of any dog without such collar. And it also appears to be the especial duty of the constables to attend to the execution of this ordinance, of which, it is apparent to every citizen of Baltimore, they have, during some time past, been very neglectful. It is now understood, however, that at this time of alarm respecting mad dogs in our streets, and at all times hereafter, this ordinance will be rigidly carried into effect.

LEGISLATURE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, April 8.

Yesterday morning the house resolved itself into a committee of the whole upon the report of the committee of inquiry into the governor's conduct, and the resolution, viz. Resolved, That Thomas M'Kean, governor of this Commonwealth, be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors.

The resolution was opposed by Messrs. Biddle, Ingham, C. Smith and Binney, and supported by Messrs. Leib and Laocock. The committee rose at eight o'clock last evening and had leave to sit again this morning. After some further discussion to-day, when the question was about to be taken, Boileau, having expressed his opinion in favor of the resolution, moved that the committee rise for the purpose of referring the subject to the attention of the next legislature. This motion was lost, and on taking the question upon the resolution, the roll was called, and 44 voted in favor of the resolution and 40 against it. The committee then rose and reported their agreement to the resolution, when Boileau renewed his motion to refer it to the next legislature. A motion was then made to postpone the question until to-morrow, which was agreed to.

It seems that in the house of representatives there is a decided majority in favour of impeaching the governor; and a majority in both houses in favor of abolishing at once the whole system of laws under which we live. This object is to be insidiously accomplished under the plausible pretence of forbidding the reading of foreign decisions and precedents in our courts.

We sincerely rejoice that the session has approached so near to a close, and no law has yet been passed, against learning to read, nor is it rendered an indictable offence to be able to write.
