And for sale at the Baltimore Book-store, by SAMUEL BUTLER, A NEW WORK, ENTITLED

Geographical Compilation.

Being an accurate description of all the Empires, Kingdoms, Republics and States of the known world, arranged in a catechetical form, compiled from the best American, English and French authors.

By D. L. C. TEACHER OF GEOGRAPHY. This work is executed on a plan entirely new in America; Topography (or the description of the provinces and towns that compose a nation or country) constitutes one of the most essential parts of it, contrary to the custom which has prevailed in almost all the books of Geography that have appeared in the United States.

In this work, is presented to the public an entertaining account of the Chinese Empire, a new description of France according to the recent division into departments compared with that into provinces, as likewise of Belgium, Savoy, Piedmont and the other countries that have been incorporated into the French empire; a detailed and accurate account of the various states of Switzerland, Italy and Germany according to the latest treaties of peace, viz: of Campo Formio, Rastatt, Lunéville, Amiens and Presburg; an account of Poland according to the division of 1793; a satisfactory account of the British Isles; a long and accurate account of the United States in general, and of each state and territory in particular, likewise of their districts, counties, cities, towns and villages, &c. Lastly, a lengthy description of the Spanish possessions in America according to the last regulation of the Cabinet of Madrid; likewise a description of the ancient tribes of Israel, of Judea or Palestine under the Romans, of ancient Greece, and the divisions of ancient Italy, Gaul, Spain, Britain, Illyricum, Thrace, Asia Minor and Syria, with several other new articles which will certainly be highly interesting.

This work is printed on a handsome type, on elegant paper, neatly bound and lettered in two volumes, 12 mo. Price 2 dollars and 50 cents.

The compilation has been approved, and subscribed to by the President of the United States, by the Secretary of State, by Saint Mary's College in Baltimore, in which institution, as likewise in the Ladies' Seminars, of Mrs. La Combe and of Mrs. Bacon in Baltimore, of Mrs. Rivard and Mrs. Greenleaf, in Philadelphia, and of Miss De St. Mein in Burlington, New Jersey. It has been adopted, by the directors of the College of Union at Skenectady in the state of New York, and by the College at Georgetown. It has also been subscribed to by the greatest part of the most respectable citizens of Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and the state of New Jersey. This makes the author entertain the flattering prospect of seeing his labors rewarded by the suffrage of an enlightened and liberal public, who doubtless will encourage a work which has already been sanctioned by so many able personages and for which no trouble has been spared to render it at the same time instructive and agreeable.

Messrs. John Conrad & Co. Of PHILADELPHIA. Are about to publish in two volumes, crown octavo, Memoirs of Anacreon, Translated from the original Greek of Critias of Athens, by CHARLES SEDLEY, Esq. including the Odes of Anacreon, from the version of THOMAS MOORE, Esq.

Critias of Athens pays a tribute to the legitimate gallantry of Anacreon: Toss give to Greece her treasure, Sage Anacreon, sage in loving; Fondly weaving lays of pleasure, For the maids who blush'd approving. Moore's Anac. p. 298.

THE version of the Odes of Anacreon, with which the literary world has recently been favored, has revived the pleasure which the melody of the lyrist once excited on the plains of Greece, and extended the reputation of his translator to every country where classical learning is venerated, and the genuine effusions of the poet find a congenial glow. To the genius and industry of THOMAS MOORE, Esq. we are indebted for one of the best translations that English literature possesses, and the liveliest exhibition of Grecian poetry that English literature can boast. The author of the present work is aware that he speaks at a time unpropitious to the fame of Moore. He knows that the indignation of some, and the mortification of others, have been strongly excited by a volume published by him since his visit to this country. But his remarks contained in his "Epistles; Odes, &c." To his brilliant genius, as a poet, and his ability as a translator, repeated editions and reiterated applause bear ample testimony; and, by adopting his version of Anacreon, the author at once renounces the feelings of personal friendship, and pays that tribute of respect, which is so justly due to his unrivalled excellence.

The design of this work was conceived during the transient visit which Mr. Moore paid to this city, in the summer of 1804. A biographical sketch of the life of Anacreon, formed upon the ingenious plan of the Abbé Barthélemy, appeared to the author to be an undertaking which offered a fertile source of amusement, and the prosecution of it was embraced with that ardor which is incident to the schemes of a youthful enthusiast. It was communicated to Mr. Moore during one of those festive nights, which he has remembered in a manner not less honorable to himself than grateful to his friends. His approbation was expressed in a manner which was prompt, warm, and flattering. But the author did not advert to the impropriety of forsaking that "deep well," which Mr. Lord Coke has dug for his "good sons," to wander amid the alluring bowers of ancient Greece, though genius there had delighted to hold her seat, and imagination there had whispered her sweetest inspirations. Such considerations, however, did intrude, when the fever of literary emulation had subsided, and reason resumed her way. The work was a long time abandoned, and perhaps never would have been submitted to public inspection, had not the partiality of a few friends flattered the not incredulous author into an opinion, that a continuation would be not wholly unworthy of public perusal.

The author will make no apology for the offences he has committed against the regularity of Chronology. If laborious commentators can gravely and ingeniously dispute whether Sappho danced to the voluptuous cadence of the lyre of Anacreon, or whether an entire century intervened between the periods of their births, he surely may be pardoned, who suffers Anacreon to write an epitaph upon Plato, or criticise the PERICLES of Aristotle. Some of these anachronisms were intentional, in order to afford suitable topics for the conversation of a scholar, and others were the consequence of carelessness.

The work is a fiction, intended to represent ancient manners, and, by making the Odes of Anacreon more familiar, to render, if possible, the popularity of a friend more extensive. To these motives, if the critics add, as it is supposed it must be conceded, some little admixture of personal vanity, they have said the cause which produced these Memoirs, and they may make such use of the declaration as justice and liberality may suggest. That the volumes were written during occasional intervals of business or study, may operate upon the clemency of some readers; and that they were almost concluded before the time which the law terms the years of obscuration, might be added as a stronger claim upon the favor of the candid, did not the author fear the retort of some sarcastic critic, that the fact appeared upon the showing of his record. But the just severity of criticism admits of no plea in extenuation of negligence or imperfection. It is necessary to the integrity of literature, that every writer be judged with strictness and impartiality, and that his judges be neither awed by the imposing noise of a dedication, nor seduced by the smooth flatteries of a preface. The present writer respectfully presents himself at the seat of this tribunal, with no arrogant pretensions to distinction; he offers his labours with very humble expectations, as the innocent, and perhaps not entirely useless amusement of a youthful mind, which preferred literary exertion to listless or frivolous inactivity, when compelled to intermit its attentions to professional occupation. It was pleasant to cheer the gloom of a solitary chamber, by revisiting, with the exclusive eye of imagination, the climes that are distant, and to recount the days that have rolled by; to survey the enamelled plains where the voice of true patriotism was heard, and where Apollo taught the rudiments of his art; to stray on the banks of the Ilyssus and listen to the lyre of Anacreon, or hang over the Leucadian mount and drop a tear to the memory of the Lesbian maid. By such arts, the slow fleet of time move unperceived, and we only awake from the pleasing vision when some sad realities afflict the phantoms of fancy from the enchanted bower, and "too feelingly remind us of what we are." Such are the pleasures of the reclusé, at the solemn noon of life, and they are not undelightful!

When the lamps expire yield to rest, And solitude returns, I silent shun The noisy mansions, and, attentive, mark the palmy groves, Resounding once with Plato's voice, arise, Amid whose umbrage green her silver head Th' unfading olive sits; here the vine-clad hills Lay forth their purple stores, and sunny sales In prospect wait their level laps expand, And whose beauties glitter Athens towers, The Ulysian scenes where clear Ilyssus rolls His sage-inspiring flood, whose winding marge The thick-set laurel shades, and rosy morn Pours all her splendours on th' empurpled scene. The impressive voice of experience will soon testify how far the credulity of ambition can be realized by the sanction of truth. The aspiring hope with which literary eminence has always elevated the author, has strewn many a flower over a path of difficulties and dangers, and led him in the reveries of fancy, to a palace of delights, where, as he has surveyed the precipice that surrounds it, he has ventured to exclaim with the enraptured artist, Ed il ane to som Pittore. Philadelphia, November 25th, 1806.

This work will be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers shall be obtained, and shall be published in 2 neat crown octavo volumes, ornamented with likenesses of Anacreon and Moore. Price, to subscribers, two dollars fifty cents per volume. Subscriptions received at the stores of M. & J. Conrad & Co. and Samuel Jeffers, Market-street.

A part of the Memoirs of Anacreon, with an introductory letter addressed to a literary friend, was published in the Port Folio for the present year. These pages may convey a more accurate idea of the nature and plan of the work than can here be attempted.—Vid. p. 247, &c. 1806. April 20. law 4t
