BALTIMORE COLLEGE.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Baltimore College, held in the College Apartment, on Monday, May 4th, 1807,

It was resolved, That a committee of eight be appointed to solicit contributions for procuring of the following persons, viz.—

- Mr. M'Eldey, Mr. Peter Levering, Mr. Alexander M'Kim, Mr. James Bloys, Doctor Coulter, Mr. John M'Kim, jun. Mr. James A. Buchanan, Mr. Edward Johnson.

JAMES INGLES, Sec. pro tem.

While the munificence of the citizens of Baltimore in behalf of literature and science has been diffused through different parts of the union, it is hoped and expected that an institution peculiarly adapted to the instruction of their own youth, will not receive a less liberal testimony of their bountiful regard.

Though a proper prospectus of the institution would at present be deemed premature, yet on impartial inquiry, it is presumed it will appear justified in this call on the liberal patrons and friends of general education in this city.

Some of the most respectable collegiate systems on this continent, have commenced under auspices in every respect less favorable, and have extended their usefulness to thousands of the community.

Such institutions cannot be established without public aid: suitable accommodations and apparatus are indispensable. Should these be obtained, it is hoped that a foundation will be laid for the improvement of a large and respectable portion of the youth of Baltimore in virtue and learning. For these most salutary purposes, the unprejudiced will find, that institutions that leave the private residence of the greater part of the youth, under the sanctified shade of parental inspection, are not the less entitled to public encouragement.

The liberal and impartial principles on which this institution is founded, and on which it is to be conducted, are evident in the following extracts from the charter.

The said college shall be founded and maintained for ever, upon the most liberal plan, for the benefit of youth of every religious denomination, who shall be freely admitted to equal privileges and advantages, of education, and to all the literary honors of the college, according to their merit, without requiring any religious or civil test, or urging their attendance upon any particular plan of religious worship or service other than that they have been educated in, or have the approbation and consent of their parents or guardians to attend. Nor shall any preference be given in the choice of a principal or professor, master or tutor, in the said college, on account of his particular religious profession; but regard shall be paid solely to his moral character, literary abilities and other necessary qualifications to fill the office for which he shall be chosen.

INTERMITTENT-FEVERS.

An Italian physician has published a treatise on the Animal Gelatine as a cure for intermittents. The national institute have delegated a committee to inquire into the effects of this new remedy, and they found that the common glue of the joiners cured intermittents. They tried it in the febrile tertiana duplicata, some also on the quartan, which had not yielded to bark, &c. likewise in the quotidian remittents. Several patients were restored even by the simple jelly of beef. They observed that the glue went over into a febrile continuans, and even in asthenical ones; but this continuans lasted only one or two days. The glue is to be given a short time before the paroxysm. Its principal effect consists in taking away the atony of the stomach and the skin. When this is done, it is advisable to give some doses at several hours of the day. It ought not to be diluted too much with water. When the solution, made from eleven or twelve drams of glue in two ounces of water, coagulates and thickens again, it may easily be made potable, by putting the glass on hot ashes. Others gave the doses every quarter or every half hour, with equally good effect. The patient should not drink much after having taken the medicine, and especially no acid beverage. Two or three hours after he may drink or eat. The glue operates at the same time as a sudorific. The patient ought to remain two days in bed after the fever has ceased, and to avoid the air (especially if it be cold and moist) for four or five days. At Berlin these cures have been reiterated in the Charite, and found of indubitable effect.

* Gluten, prepared in a Papinon digester, fresh bones, beef, &c. would produce the same effect, be equally cheap, and without the nauseous taste of the joiners' glue.
