Trial of Col. Burr.

From the Enquirer.

Wednesday, June 3.

The same judges present as yesterday.

The names of the grand jury being called over, they retired to their chamber.

A few minutes after, the attorney for the United States entered, and observed, that he had a proposition to submit to the court, which he wished the grand jury to hear.
He requested, therefore, that they might be called in.

Counsel for Mr. Burr. We have no objection.

The chief justice directed the marshal to call the jury into court.

Some minutes intervened before they appeared. In the mean time, Mr. Hay informed the court, that he only wished to know from the grand jury at what time it would be most convenient for them to attend the court, if they were adjourned to some distant day, should such an adjournment equally suit the arrangements of the opposite counsel: that he had just made a calculation, with his friend the marshal, which satisfied him that gen. Wilkinson had not, perhaps, sufficient time to reach this city. The distance from New-Orleans on the map, was about 1370 miles. If he came by land, he must travel on horseback; but judging him by himself, he could not probably ride more than 30 miles per day.
By these data he would require about 45 days (besides a fragment of a few miles) to travel from New-Orleans to this city. This calculation would bring him to the 14th or 15th of this month. He was therefore willing, if it suited the wishes of the opposite counsel, to have the grand jury adjourned for about ten days. That gen. Wilkinson's situation called upon the court to make this arrangement; he need not expatiate upon the importance of his official duties, nor the perilous situation of that part of the country, where the head of the army ought always to be present; that gen. Wilkinson should be detained here as short a time as possible; and that it would be particularly inconvenient for him to stay here till the meeting of an intermediate court for the present trial; that it was, therefore, the interest of the United States to have the trial concluded during the present term; and that he had no doubt the very same considerations would not only lead every member of the grand jury cheerfully to submit to any private inconvenience which they might sustain, but punctually to return at the time appointed by the court.

The chief justice observed, that there would be no difficulty on the part of the court.

Mr. Wickham owned, that this communication somewhat surprised him, as Mr. Hay had but a few days before announced to the court from a letter from the secretary of war, that gen. W. would be here between the 28th and 30th of May.

Mr. Hay observed, that the letter from gen. Dearborn admitted of an easy explanation; that according to Mr. Minnick's affidavit, the express could not have reached New-Orleans before the 3d or 4th of May; and that this exceeded the time which general D. had allowed. His opinion was founded on the circumstance of the messen-ger's leaving Washington on a certain day, and of course his reaching New-Orleans on a certain day; that Mr. Minnickson's affidavit had shown this calculation to be not altogether correct; that Mr. M. had therefore given him some information which gen.
D. could not have possessed. Mr. H. was sorry he could not inform the court how gen.
W. travelled, and of course how to make any calculations about the time of his arrival.

The chief justice said, that before the grand jury came he could not but express his regret at the great inconvenience which they were likely to sustain; but he believed that less of it would arise from the course pointed out by the U. S. attorney, than from any other. The court would continue to sit as usual; its ordinary business would go on; and no further steps would be taken in the prosecution until the return of the grand jury: The court would observe, that it seemed desirable in every point of view, that this business should be closed during the present term; that a number of witnesses were now present, all of whom would not probably attend at any other term; and that it would be more convenient for the court itself to wait a fortnight longer after its usual period of adjournment, than to hold an intermediate court for this purpose.

Mr. Wickham had no doubt himself that if general Wilkinson had intended to have come at all, he would have been here before this time; certainly the government had not failed in its duty in taking every necessary measure to have him here: if the grand jury was adjourned to some distant day the great difficulty would be to collect them all again at the end of the time appointed; and that if general Wilkinson was to come at all, he may be expected here every day; and that of course it was better to adjourn the grand jury only from day to day.

Mr. Hay stated, that a large allowance ought to be made for the distance and uncertainty of the journey; and that he should remind the court of a corresponding fact.
Mr. Perkins who escorted colonel Burr, left Fort Stoddert about the 23d or 24th of March, but he himself did not reach this city before the 33d or 36th day. Now, Mr. P. certainly travelled with greater advantage than general Wilkinson would; as he pressed or purchased horses to expedite his journey. Admitted then, Mr. P. used due diligence, (and he has been even charged with too much); how can general Wilkinson be certainly expected?—Gentlemen ought not to be so confident in their hopes. Gen. W. will be here as sure as he is a living man. Nothing but death will prevent him.

The chief justice observed, that a large calculation ought certainly to be made, as the distance was very considerable, and it was very uncertain, when general W. set out, or how he travels.

At this moment the grand jury returned into court. Mr. Hay addressed them in the following terms: "Gentlemen of the G. J.
I have already stated to the court and the opposite counsel, that this business should be concluded if possible, during your present session. I have moved the court, that you be called again at the end of ten days or a fortnight. My calculation is that general W. cannot be here before the 14th or 15th of this month. I am sorry to detain you here a single moment; but I flatter myself that you will still continue to display the same praise-worthy patience which has hitherto marked your conduct.—I am therefore, anxious to consult your own convenience as much as possible; and I wish to know at what time it will be most convenient to return to this place, if you are adjourned to a distant day.

Mr. J. Randolph (the foreman). Any time, may it please the court, shall be most convenient to ourselves, that is most convenient to the court and the parties. We should, however, prefer a distant day.

Mr. Burr observed, that there were manifest inconveniences in the measure proposed —he had, for instance, a number of witnesses here, from a distance; would it not be inconvenient for them to be kept here?
Certainly, however, they may be detained.
But why an adjournment to a distant day?
Mr. Wilkinson may be expected here every day. The attorney's estimate of the time is not perhaps correct. Perkins came about the same distance as Mr. W. is to come; but he performed his journey in 31 days. What we want, however, is some data from the government on this subject; such, for instance, as the time when the express left Washington. As to Minnick's affidavit, what great reliance can be placed in it? Did he certainly identify the express? But suppose that this express reached New Orleans about the time mentioned: Mr. W. may come by water; and is to be expected here every day. Mr. B. hoped that this measure would not be adopted, particularly as it was uncertain whether 8 or 10 days hence all the grand jury would meet here again.
Mr. W. may be near to this place at this moment, and he may arrive almost immediately after the jury is adjourned from day to day. According to Mr. Dearborn's letter Mr. W. ought to have been here between the 28th and 30th of May. Allowing, however, 6 days more than he said, Mr. W. may be expected to-morrow.

Mr. Hay observed, that it was of no great importance to him personally or officially to what time the grand jury was adjourned; all that he wished, was that the public business should go on and this prosecution be closed during the present court. Whether gen. W. would be here to-morrow or a fortnight hence, he knew not. He merely made the present proposition for the accommodation of the grand jury. If gentlemen on the other side chose to object to it, and the court would adjourn the jury from day to day, he was satisfied. He had in the early part of April, received a letter from Mr. Rodney, stating that every exertion would be made to have him here. It was not probable that the messenger could have arrived in New-Orleans before the 3d or 4th of May. If Gen. W. travelled by land, he would not come so ex-pediently as Mr. Perkins, because Mr. P. had exhausted the frontier parts of Georgia, of its horses. Such at least was Mr. Minnickin's representation.

Mr. Martin submitted to the court, whether it was not better to adjourn the jury from day to day. Any calculation on such a subject was uncertain; it was uncertain whether Gen. W. would travel by land or by water; but if he came by land he might certainly travel further than the gentleman had allowed, 30 miles a day; nor would he be obliged to use the same horses, as that gentlemen had also supposed. As Gen. W. was a military gentleman, he would not be confined to 30 miles a day, nor might he deny himself the convenience of frequent relays of horses. And suppose that he should arrive here to-morrow, all the other important witnesses are present and the business might be concluded before the time should come to which the grand jury may be adjourned.
He hoped, therefore, that the court would not adjourn to a distant day. As to himself, he said, he did not wish his own situation to enter into the consideration of the grand jury, or the court; that certainly he ought to be on the Eastern Shore on the 1st of June to attend the court; but that notwithstanding this circumstance, he was determined to stay here so long as he could expect to do any service to the gentleman, whom he had come to defend.

Mr. Wickham stated, that if Gen. W. did not even arrive here in two or three days, intelligence at least might be obtained within that time of the period of his arrival.
Every post from the north or south might bring the information. Every person that came by land or water. Under such circumstances ought they to be adjourned for ten days or a fortnight?

Mr. Randolph (the foreman). It is, sir, almost indifferent to the grand jury what steps may be taken. They have made no motion for their prorogation or their discharge. Their great anxiety is to fulfil their duty.

The Chief Justice said, that he was fully impressed with the patience that the grand jury had manifested. Perhaps Monday next would be as convenient to them as any other day, to re-assemble.

Mr. Hay hoped that the grand jury would be punctual in their attendance, as he sincerely wished to have the business closed this term; and a number of witnesses were present who cannot all be expected here again.

Mr. Wickham expressed his opposition to their adjournment; for although the jury had hitherto exhibited so much patience, yet if they retired home, some one might feel himself excused from further attendance.

Chief Justice. Let it then be understood
