

Prospectus of A New WEEKLY PAPER, ENTITLED, THE PEOPLE'S MONITOR,

To be published at Annapolis, Maryland. By MICHAEL PINKIND.

THE title which the Editor thus assumes for his projected publication, may perhaps induce an imputation of vanity and presumption, of which, indeed, he is far from being possessed. By those, however, whose favor he is most anxious to engage, in the outset of a doubtful and difficult career, he will not be misunderstood. They well know, that for the support of such a paper as he proposes to issue, he must look to the wise and the learned, and hold out a convenient receptacle for the fruits of their experience and knowledge.

But, however humble his personal pretensions may be to the capacity of fulfilling the extent of engagement into which this title would seem to commit him, he will not hesitate to declare, that he intends, on all proper occasions, to exercise the privilege of a citizen Editor, by expressing, in the best and most forcible manner he is capable, his own opinions of public men and measures. The Editor, feeling, with the deepest regret, the deficiency of his early instruction, has, in the intervals of mechanical toil, heretofore labored to improve every moment to catch a glimpse of the great light of knowledge, and endeavored, with the most anxious care, to form an acquaintance with the history and political institutions of his country. Such degree of knowledge as he has been able to attain, has at least, he trusts, been sufficient to inspire him with a love of virtue and his country, and a sincere admiration of that system of republican government which has been planned and transmitted to us by the illustrious patriots of the Revolution. To guard and preserve the temple of liberty, which they erected, from the rude hand of open violence, and to screen its altars from the profanation of the ambitious, requires the constant and watchful care of every citizen of the Goddess. The Editor, in no affected strain, avows an enthusiasm in the cause of the liberties of the people, and is desirous to devote himself to their service in any honorable way in which he might hope to be useful. To conduct a vehicle, by which shall be conveyed to them, the earliest intimation of their rights, and the earliest intimation of any encroachments upon them, will be to him a proud employment, and a most grateful task. Prone as man is to ambition, and to a desire of self-aggrandizement, a constant and unremitting watchfulness is necessary, on the part of the people, towards those in whose hands are placed the power and strength of the nation for the general protection and promotion of the common welfare. To guard against every encroachment, and to detect every violation of duty, the Press is justly and universally esteemed the most powerful and efficient engine. The influence of political newspapers, in giving a tone to the popular sentiment, has almost established it as a maxim, that public opinion is in a state of total subjection to the press. Hence the fierce fanaticism of the press derives its chief sanction, and hence the necessity that the press should adhere in all its publications to truth, and to the dispersion of those principles alone which are morally and politically correct.

Newspapers, avowedly established for the purpose of disseminating party principles and systems, become the pest and a scourge of society. They are the kindling of faction and corruption, and the pernicious engines of the mind of man. What salutary aim can the mind derive from publications, whose aim is, in spite of the common sense and common experience of all, to impress it with the conviction that all heresies in another? whose sole object is an equally indiscriminate exaltation of favorites, and depression of those who dare to dissent from their doctrines? whose authors traitorously desert the cause of the people, of truth and of good government, for the ignoble purposes of strengthening certain partisans in power? The nicely balanced parts of a republic, resting on the voice of the people as its basis, cannot long endure a dangerous establishment. The political existence of a people, which depends upon a firm, true, upon wisdom, and which cannot withstand the workings of so destructive an agent.

Tolerance. The people at large engaged in the various avocations of life, have neither the leisure nor the means of obtaining a minute knowledge of public affairs. Those amongst them, who, more fortunate than the rest, have it in their power to acquire correct information, do not, perhaps, find their interest to disseminate it amongst their fellow-citizens. Thus, instead of a just and correct view of things, the people too frequently are either wholly uninformed, or, if they have received any information, on political subjects, they have been derived from those herds of misrepresentation which every where infest the country, and from the unprincipled calumnies of party writers. To correct the people from the abominable shackles of party spirit, and to afford them an unimpaired medium, through which they may view the real state of things, and be enabled to judge fairly of the conduct of their rulers, the proposed establishment has been contemplated.

The editor offers to his fellow-citizens, a weekly paper, adapted to their leisure and their purses, which he will conduct with the best exertion of his humble talents, and with the most zealous care and attention. The earliest statement shall be made of the measures and conduct of our public functionaries, in the state government as well as in the government of the union, upon every case which may be supposed to materially concern the rights or interests of the people. The proceedings of the state legislature and of congress together with the most important and interesting debates, shall be regularly given as they occur. All momentous foreign intelligence, when it becomes disentangled from contradiction, and appears sufficiently authenticated, shall be inserted in a concise manner. For the instruction and amusement of the reader, will be introduced all such tracts, essays and sketches on every subject of useful and ornamental science, as the genius of correspondents, or the industrious research of the editor, may furnish. On points of honorable controversy, from which pleasure or improvement may be derived, between men of sense and decorum, he will always delight to be the organ of their arguments and opinions; but he most explicitly declares his determination not to defile his pages by the admission of any thing like scurrility or personal abuse, and uniformly to refuse a place to the malignant effusions of defamatory scribblers.

Under the pressure of absolute necessity, the Editor, a short time ago, formed the determination to quit his native state, and seek, in Philadelphia, such employment as he could procure for a temporary support. In this regard he has been as successful as he could suit him; but, separated from the scenes and objects of his early attachment, he cannot feel the tranquility of contentment in a situation where he can hope for little more than the means of ordinary support. He is also free to confess that his mind is not void of honest ambition, and that it prompts him to seek a sphere for the exertion of his humble talents somewhat more extended than the mere mechanical department of his profession, to which he has been bred. If, then, he shall receive, in his new design, the patronage and support of his fellow-citizens of the eastern shore of Maryland, and particularly of his own county, he will have cause to feel a manifold attachment to his native state, and be bound to them by the strongest ties of gratitude.

But it may, perhaps, be deemed by some persons necessary, that the Editor should here make a particular confession of his own political faith. Short as has been the course of his observation, it has been sufficient to convince him that true patriotism and a disinterested regard to the interests of the people, are not always to be found where the pretensions to them are most loudly claimed. When he looks abroad to other countries, and views, in a brief retrospect, the changes, the revolutions, and the usurpations which have taken place in the present age; when he sees so frequently thrown about the horrors of tyranny; and then, when he turns his mind inward to his own country, and revolves the history of its parties, its party professions, and its party measures, he hesitates, may he will forever refuse to give his implicit confidence to any set of men who may be in the administration of public affairs. He can only promise to approve and applaud when his judgment discovers to him the interests of the people promoted by their measures; and he must be equally allowed to condemn when he perceives their rights violated, or their welfare neglected. Were the Editor, however, to say that he has never made a choice between the conflicting parties of the times, it would not be true; but, whilst he has given way to a predilection which was the honest suggestion of his scruples and candid opinion, he was still sensible of the inevitable ills to which party contesting tend; and in the spirit of a patriot, he would be ever willing to relinquish the hope of personal preferment, which a servile devotion to a party might induce him to foster, for the more honorable desire to divert the public mind from a path which must terminate in ruin. Let the most enlightened statesmen of the present or past ages be consulted—let the faithful pages of history be resorted to on the question of causes which have produced the downfall of every popular government which has heretofore existed, and they will answer, party spirit and factions!

With this answer, fit the great oracle of human wisdom before his eyes, and with a mind now vitiated by the intemperance of party warfare, the editor wishes to establish a free Press, which shall invite to it the patronage and support of every man in the community, who acts and thinks with independence, and who adopts sentiments and opinions from other and far worthier motives than mere personal aggrandizement. He wishes to call to his aid the talents, the wisdom, the powers, and the exertions of all who love their country; and who, without a humble reference to what may be the party politics of the day, desire to bring into her service the public mind; to bathe; to harmonize the warring triangles of amongst nish discord & jarring angles of whatever of talents; to approve and now have in our public councils; to emancipate merit from the shackles of odious distinction, and to give to our great and beloved country the best services of her best citizens.

Valuable Lands &c. for Sale, On the 19th June next, In compliance with the will of Engelhard Yeiser, Esq. lately deceased, and he sold at public auction, on the premises, at 12 o'clock, on the 19th June next, All that valuable PLANTATION whereon the deceased lately resided, containing about 33 1/2 acres, distant about 4 1/2 miles from the city of Baltimore, and adjoining the lands of Gen. Smith Daniel Bowly, esq. and others. On this land are erected, a comfortable Dwelling-House; a convenient stone Barn, 33 feet in width and 75 feet long; a Still-House, with 2 Stills; and a Spring-House, the lower part of stone, the upper part brick; exclusive of several other tenements, and every other necessary out-house; good Apple and Peach orchards, of excellent fruit; also, good kitchen gardens. About half the land is clear, the other half is young driving wood; a considerable quantity of meadow, a constant stream of water running through it. The upland is kind for all sorts of grain. This property is healthy, handsome, and pleasant situation. Also, at the same time and place will be sold at auction, as aforesaid, All that well-known valuable FARM, late the property of the deceased, called Grace's Quarter; situated in Middle-river Neck, at the conflux of Gunpowder river and Saltpetre creek, by which two waters it is almost surrounded. It contains about 424 acres of arable land and meadow land. For fertility of soil, this place is equalled by few. To point out the number of natural advantages attending it, would far exceed the bounds of an advertisement. There is on it a good comfortable House, almost new, with Kitchen, Negro Quarter, Spring-House, with necessary out-houses, and a large frame Barn (erected in the summer of 1804) with stables, cow-houses, &c. underneath it. Like-wise, two apple-orchards, two peach ditto, of the best of fruit, with cherry and plum-trees, and about 20 remarkably fine pear-trees, from the fruit of which alone considerable sums have been made. In fact, no place in the country can be better situated, either for the grazier or planter, for nearly the whole of the farm can be put into meadow at a small expence. The fishery on this place, in the season, is extremely profitable; and the shores are land with wild fowl of all kinds. It has the advantage of an elegant prospect of the river and adjacent country, and good water. The distance to Baltimore by land is 16 miles, and by water 4 or 5 hours sail. Persons disposed to purchase, are invited to view the above property. Both the said farms will be laid off and divided into smaller farms, to suit purchasers. Plans of the same will in a few days be left at the auction-room of Mr Thomas Chase. CATHARINE YEISER, JOHN BORLAND, NICHOLAS BRICE, } Ex'rs. may 28. eots
