

made by the enemy to abandon the neighborhood of the Elbe, from which they are removing every thing valuable.

Letters from on board general Crauford's expedition dated Feb. 18, in lat. 39. S. long. 51. W. have been received. The general opinion was, that Lima was to be the first object of attack.

PARIS, April 29. The Official Journal contains the decree adopted in the meeting of the senate, on the 7th, pursuant to the emperor's message for calling out 80,000 conscripts of the year 1806. It also contains an address by the senate to his majesty on his message; to which is subjoined an Imperial decree, dated from the head quarters at Finkensteyn, on the 18th instant, directing the mode of levying the conscription in the different departments.

The date of this decree shows that no event of importance had occurred before that time. This is further evident from a letter received last Sunday from the advanced posts of the army, in which the writer says:—"For a month past we have been face to face with the enemy, and yet have remained in perfect inactivity. The army is in good health. Our soldiers suffered for a time from the dysentery, which repose and wholesome food has now completely removed. Our brave men are daily returning from the hospitals. Our battalions increase in numbers, and as soon as the roads are practicable, nothing will be able to impede the flight of our victorious eagles. Contagious fevers prevail among the Russian troops. These diseases are occasioned by their remarkable neglect of cleanliness. They have missed their object. They smiled at the disasters of the Prussians, not imagining that we should soon come upon them. But since they have found us opposed to them, they have become convinced of the impossibility of sending any assistance to Michelson, the Russian commander in Wallachia, and the energy which the Turks display is likely to afford them some employment in that quarter." The 5 per cents, are 72 and 75; the bank stock at 125.

London, May 3.

The letters from Germany contain little news. In one of them, however, dated the Banks of the Danube, April 21, it is stated that the Russians had attempted a descent on the Island of Cania, but that they were driven back with considerable loss. Mention is also made of a misunderstanding said to have arisen among the principal officers of the English fleet in the Archipelago, and in particular between admiral Duckworth and the rear admiral Sir Sidney Smith and Louis. The two latter, it is said, have formally accused the commander in chief to their government, charging him with having dishonored the British name before Constantinople, and by his inconsiderate conduct provoked a rupture with the Porte. High words have also passed between the admiral and the British ambassador Arbuthnot.

PRESBURG, April 1. Letters from Semlin explain the cause of the massacre of the Turks in Belgrade.— "While toleration," says one of these letters, "is extended on every side, and the emperor Napoleon disposes wherever he goes equal rights to all modes of worship, the fury of making proselytes has seized the Servians." The fearful event that has lately taken place at Belgrade was occasioned by their in- ationism. They wished to propagate their religion among the Turks by fire and sword, and imagined they should perform a meritorious action by massacring all the Mussulmen who remained faithful to their creed, and refused to adopt the Greek religion. Seven hundred persons of both sexes have consented to be baptized, to save their lives. In the midst of these sanguinary scenes, the Servians have proclaimed their chief, Czerai George, prince of servia. He continues his military prepara- tions, has provisioned Belgrade and Schabatz, and has lately sent several regiments of volun- teers to Galatza, where a numerous corps of Servians is collecting.

"There is circulated throughout European Turkey the copy of a discourse of a Meuzin, (one of those who from the monuments of the mosque call the people to prayers,) in which he calls upon all Mussulmen to rouse them- selves at length from the lethargy in which they are plunged, and shake off the yoke which the Russians (those unbelievers, the incor- rectible enemies of the Turkish name, have imposed upon the Ottoman empire. Courage and resolution, and absolute confidence in God and a perfect union with the French, are the only means (says the Meuzin) to attain this end."

Dramatic Intelligence.

The Drama under rehearsal at the Rich- mond Theatre, first reported to be a Force, is now said to be one of the new species of Melo Drama.

The arrival of Mr. Wilkinson, a performer of long standing, has excited much curiosi- ty—the managers are sure of full houses for some time to come.

The engagement of Mr. Martin, from the Theatre at Baltimore, appears to have been made upon a supposition that the taste of the Richmond audience was for Low Comedy—from the reception of this actor, it appears that there was some mistake in this affair.

A London paper, on the subject of the affair at Constantinople, remarks:—"The French have published only part of the correspondence; much that was material they have suppressed; that which they have not suppressed, they have not doubt garbled and mutilated, a practice so usual with them that it would be infinitely more astonishing to find them abstaining from than adopting it. We will not, therefore, upon French authority, be- lieve that after the vigorous and determined language held by our admiral, he retired and repassed the Dardanelles without attempting or doing any thing."

KINGTON, (Jam.) May 1. A schooner, name unknown, taken pos- session of by the Renard sloop of war, off St. Jago de Cuba, on the 28th ult. arrived at Port Royal on Wednesday evening. The Renard fell in with and chased her during the night, when on coming up with her she found not a soul on board.

El Raposa brig of 12 guns, Lieut. Camp- bell, arrived the same evening at Port Royal, with the following vessels captured and de- tained by her:

American schr. Variable, with provisions, retaken on the 8th ult. off Cape-Francois.

Swedish schr. Forsookit, from Jeremie to St. Bartholomews, detained on the 28th ult. off the city of St. Domingo.

American brig Hope, from Cape-Fran- cois, with sugar, detained off the Tortugas on the 24th ult.

To the Editor of the Federal Gazette. Sir—It is pleasing for the peaceable citizen of this highly favoured country, that he is placed at a happy distance from the blood- stained fields of Europe, where the roar of cannon, and the consequent distress form so powerful an obstacle to the tranquil meditations of a christian spirit.

Amidst the din of war, which convulses the other quarters of the globe, America, with a steady pace, rises to the proud eminence of wealth and happiness. But there appears to my view yet one thing wanting in the catalogue of our pursuits—high cultivation of the liberal arts. While our system of government is superior to all competition; in this day, when the spirited enterprise of our successful mercantile fel- low-citizens draws such immense wealth to the individual and the national treasures; and while our ships glide gaily o'er the most distant seas, America is almost un- known in the school of arts; the brightest geniuses amongst her sons are compelled to seek a foreign patronage, and to lodge the choicest fruits of their exalted talents in un- known and strange climes.

Do not misunderstand me, sir; I am not about to join in the ungracious attempt to stigmatize my dear Columbia, as hostile to the arts. I will not call her sons Vandals, nor denounce this territory as a cold Siberia, where the best plants sicken and die. No; I value the intelligence of her citizens at a higher rate, and I esteem her climate and her soil, as of a kinder nature. Yet permit me, sir, to say, that our progress in refine- ment is not so great as the unparalleled ad- vances which we have made to luxury and to wealth.

I have witnessed, with no small confu- sion and regret, the unsuccessful attempt of a respectable Artist, to attract even a small share of that patronage and admiration which his talents eminently merit. The Paintings of Mr. GROOBRIDGE, in vain were they exhibited to public and for private examination, while the sensibility of this gentleman was wounded by neglect, & his works valued only for their frames, or ad- mired as six penny Pictures. Mr. G. has the mournful consolation to witness the handsome compliment paid him by a litera- ry friend* (in the last "Observer") and the mortification of being compelled to with- draw his Paintings.

* From the last Observer.—"A Real connois- sers in the art of painting will say, that Mr. Groobridge views nature with an artist's eye; that he is familiar with good schools; that he has a great deal of facility; and that to produce paintings really fine, he needs only to meet with persons sufficiently generous and discerning, to indemnify him for the time and expence the necessary stud- ies would cost him."

From the Borders of the Elbe, April 27. The seige of Colberg, raised by the division made by the Swedes from Stralsund, is now pushed with greater vigor than before. The Russian courier, who has brought sev- eral tails to Memel, taken from the Otoman troops, says that the Turks lost 4000 men in the last battle, when these trophies were taken, and that the Russians were with in 40 miles of Constantinnople.

Memel, April 14. His imperial majesty attends to the labors of the cabinet with uninterrupted assiduity. Notwithstanding the fatigue of his journey was very great, owing to the badness of the roads and the weather, on the morning after his arrival, his majesty was up at 5, and sat down to write; this is his daily custom.

M. de Hardenberg is the only minister who accompanied the two sovereigns to Georgerberg. This esteemed cabinet minister received a private visit from the emperor, who staid with him two hours and a half.

A Russian courier arrived here on the 11th; he was the bearer of eleven tails (or Turkish standards) taken from the Turks in an engagement, in which the Russians gained the victory.

The reinforcement which is arrived with the Grand Duke Constantine, consists of thirty-two battalions, twenty-seven squad- rons, and ninety two pieces of heavy ord- nance. It is to be followed immediately by thirteen battalions; a corps de reserve of 60 or 70,000 men is also on its march. The voluntary contributions for carrying on the war already amounted, according to the last accounts, to forty-two millions six hundred thousand roubles, and the lists from the distant provinces were not then come in.

Bonaparte has removed his head-quarters still further back, to Rosenberg, two leagues from Marienwerder.

Hamburg, April 18. This day or to-morrow we expect marshal Bruue to arrive here from Katsberg; and 8000 Dutch troops are on their way hither from Pomerania. The French, uncertain of their success, have prudently thrown two bridges over the Elbe and Artzeburg. Their fear of a British expedition is unabated, and as great as ever; and, in fact, there never was a more favorable opportunity for a British force appearing on the continent than the present one, which, if not profited by, will perhaps never offer again.

Intelligence of a great decisive battle in Prussia is expected here every hour; the greatest preparations, it is understood, are making for it, and the forces which will meet in this terrible conflict, will, it is said, amount to not much less than six hundred thousand men.

The French are stealing away all the ar- tillery belonging to the poor city of Ham- burg; they have also fetched away ten wag- gon loads of cannon balls.
