

FEDERAL GAZETTE

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12.

The ship Fair American, captain Davis, of Baltimore, arrived in England the 3d June after a passage of 27 days.

Extract of a letter, dated Boston, August 3. I read a few days since, a letter from Admiral Berkeley, dated Halifax, July 1, to the British consul here. It appears very clear by this, that the affair of your capes cannot and will not be traced to higher authority than the admiral. He writes this letter, he says in consequence of the many mistakements he had seen in our papers. He says the men demanded were deserters, openly enlisted at Norfolk, by the lieutenant of the Chesapeake knowing them to be such, who paraded Norfolk with them, after being demanded by an English officer; when they publicly enlisted. He adds that these same men were demanded by the English consul at Norfolk, and again by the English minister without effect. So much for Berkeley's story, who must begin to feel a little alarmed, or he would scarcely have taken the trouble to give any explanation.

AMERICAN CONSULATE, St. Jago de Cuba.

Died, on the 9th instant Mr. Edward Welsh, late of Charleston. His clothes, papers and effects, are deposited in the office of this consulate.

MAURICE ROGERS.

July 10th, 1807. The printers in the different states will please publish the foregoing for the information of his relatives and friends.

A letter from Halifax, dated July 14, (received at Boston) says that on the receipt of the intelligence of the affair of the Chesapeake, admiral Berkeley, recalled the leave of absence granted to an officer to visit the United States, and added, "That he had no doubt of an immediate rupture between the two countries." We do not place much stress on this opinion of the Halifax admiral, as we have but an indifferent idea of his sagacity or political knowledge. We do not believe the British government will encounter a new war with their best customers, to screen even admiral Berkeley from deserved punishment. [Boston Centinel.]

Extract of a letter from New-York, dated August 7, 1807.

"Our city is free of yellow fever, but an epidemic called the influenza, is so common that more than 5000 are now afflicted with it."

New-York, 24th mo. 6th, 1807.

RESPECTED FRIEND, In compliance with thy request, I hasten to give a short account of the sickness so prevalent at present in this city.

Some instances of it occurred as early as the middle of last month; and it has continued to increase so rapidly that it is now judged nearly one half of our citizens are affected with it.

It appears to be a species of influenza, attacking with most of the usual symptoms of that complaint, particularly with pain in the head, breast, back and limbs; cough and soreness of the throat and stomach; lassitude, restlessness and prostration of strength; frequently a nausea, and constipated state of the bowels, preceded or accompanied with chills, thirst, an increased pulse, and fever. It may not be wholly foreign or improper to remark, that a species of ophthalmia, or inflammation of the eyes, which attacked very suddenly, and frequently produced an immediate suffusion, preceded, and still continues to prevail.

This affection of the eyes, though it has been somewhat general and severe, has mostly yielded to the usual remedies. Whether the present epidemic disease is to be considered as a harbinger, or a modification of some other, must be left for future observation and experience to determine. This much, however, may I think, be said, that since its prevalence, few other disorders of much importance or severity have appeared.

Notwithstanding the general prevalence of this epidemic it is not often attended with very severe or dangerous symptoms, but mostly yields to medical treatment. Indeed, a large proportion are not confined to their beds or rooms, and do not apply for medical assistance.

The general plan of treatment that I have pursued, and which I would recommend, is,

- 1st. To promote a gentle perspiration by bathing the feet in warm water, & by drinking freely of warm liquids, such as infusions of sage, thoroughwort (commonly called boneset) or snake-root.
2. To allay the soreness and cough by frequent draughts of infusions of wheat bran, red clover bark, flaxseed, or liquorice. When the above symptoms are severe, spermaceti and honey may be used with the addition of elixir pargoric, or other opiates, particularly at bed time.
3. If there be much nausea, the stomach may be rinsed with lukewarm draughts of water, carduus, or camomile tea; or, if these prove insufficient to cleanse the stomach, a little of epieuanha, or antimonial wine, may be added.
4. To open the bowels by some cooling, purging medicines or clysters.
5. In robust and plethoric constitutions, when the pain is severe, the pulse full, and pneumatic symptoms threaten to attend, blood letting may be practised, with the other usual remedies in such cases.

I am, &c. SHADRACH RICKETSON.

An Infallible Cure for the Tooth Ache.

I know that various opinions exist concerning my advertising the price of curing the Tooth Ache—some say I am joking with the public, others say if I had really discovered a cure for that tormenting malady I ought for the sake of humanity, to make it public, and support the fact by all necessary and convincing evidence: I have taken the advice, and therefore 1st. Declare that I have given my newly discovered Essence of Sulphur, I think to near one hundred different persons who were afflicted with the pain arising from hollow or decayed teeth, and I do not know of one instance where it has failed in producing a cure, nor do I believe it ever will, if used according to my directions; for I am persuaded from a knowledge of its nature and effects, that this Essence has power to remove the pain of hollow or decayed teeth, to as great a certainty as water has power to extinguish fire. 2d. I do know that it has no tendency to destroy the enamel of the Teeth, or injure the gums, but on the contrary believe it will prevent the rot in the gums, and preserve the teeth from decay. 3d. It may be taken inwardly with safety; I have swallowed it often, and will at any time drink it, to remove the scruples of the timidous. 4th. If ever the above mentioned Essence should fail in producing the desired effect, & the tooth or teeth for which it was taken to cure, should at any future period be extracted, all money received by me for such cures shall be returned and double the sum if required. FRANCIS GUY. Baltimore county, August 10, 1807.

Personally appeared Francis Guy, before me the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace for the county aforesaid, and made oath on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that the facts stated above relative to the tooth ache, is just and true to the best of his knowledge and belief. Sworn before JOHN AISQUITT. Baltimore, 7th August, 1807.

Certificate of Samuel Vincent, Esq. Justice of the Peace. Some time in the Spring of the present year, I was very much troubled with the tooth ache. I had thoughts of having it drawn; I by chance happened in conversation with Mr. Guy, to whom I related my intention. He advised me to avoid extracting the tooth, as he presumed he had a specific, and requested me to make a trial; when he mentioned this to me, I recollected that I was told by some person that he had cured him of the tooth ache; I determined to give it a trial, and made use of his solution, perhaps three or four times, and have not had any return of it. About three months since a colored girl of mine was also afflicted with the same pain—I sent her to Mr. Guy, who also furnished her with, I presume, the same solution, and after three or four washings, the pain was removed, and no complaint since. SAMUEL VINCENT. Certificate of the Rev. Alexander M'Caime. I hereby certify that I was afflicted with the tooth ache from about the first of last March to the beginning of June; at which period I was on my way to the Dentist, when I met with a friend, who understanding where I was going, advised me to go to Mr. Guy, and he would cure me. With much persuasion I agreed to make the trial not believing, however, that I derive much advantage (if any) from it. But to my great surprise and satisfaction, I was perfectly cured, by applying his tooth water only twice, since which I have been as free of the tooth ache as I have been at any period of my life. ALEXANDER M'CAINE. Fell's-Point, August 7th, 1807.

Baltimore, August 7th, 1807. Certificate of Eli Hewit. This is to certify, that about four months past, I had a severe tooth ache, for three nights and days without intermission, and by washing my mouth with what Mr. Guy calls his Essence of Sulphur, I obtained immediate relief, and have experienced no return of pain from that time to the present. ELI HEWIT, Market street.

We the subscribers, having, in both our families, experienced the beneficial effects of Mr. Francis Guy's Essence of Sulphur, as a cure for the tooth ache, feel bound to declare, (judging from what we have witnessed) that we believe it possesses every virtue which the inventor ascribes to it, and that it is a sovereign remedy for this tormenting complaint. NILES & FRAILY, Editors of the Evening Post. Baltimore, August 10, 1807.

The respectable names above render it quite unnecessary to incur the expense of publishing more certificates. The price of cure, one dollar and fifty cents unless the circumstances of the applicant should induce the proprietor to make a deduction. F. G. 212, Market-street, nearly opposite the Indian Queen August 12. 2aw4t

Attention! Artillerists

Prospectus of a work entitled THE AMERICAN ARTILLERIST'S COMPANION.

To be printed by subscription, and offered to the patronage of the Federal Government, the people of the United States and the Artillerists of the Army, Navy and Militia. By LEWIS TOUSSARD.

This work was commenced in the year '96, at the desire of General George Washington, then president of the United States.—The delay has been favorable to the work, as during a visit to France, from the inquiries he made, and the communication he received from officers of the best experience and information, the author was enabled to make corrections and considerable additions. The materials are extracted from the best Swedish, German, English, French, Italian, and other authors, who have written on that science. It contains: All that is relative to the disposition, construction and service of different batteries, to ordinance in general, the invention, proportion, casting & of boring Guns; construction and proportion of their different carriages and appendages; use and service of Mortars and Howitzers; method and experiments on the same. Principles of Gunnery; Tables on the ranges of shot and cannon shot; projection of shells; methods and experiments on the same; also general maxims on the manner of serving different batteries; history & use of Field Artillery, with the improvements which have been made in that service by the belligerent powers, chiefly by the invention of the fling, more properly denominated, Horse Artillery; observations on point blank shot, and the method of pointing guns in the field; experiments and maxims on the same and application to their training. Exercise of battering and garrison cannon; of guns mounted on rampart, travelling and sea-coast carriages. Exercise of mortars and howitzers; of field and horse artillery, as practised in the revolutionary war by the American, and at present by the French and English Artillerists. All these exercises are rendered clear by the words of command & their explanation; plates for the same. Exercise of cannon on board a ship of war. Saps. The several bridges and pontoons used in war. Tables of construction for battering cannon, mortars, howitzers, and field pieces; and for all kinds of carriages and other artillery waggons. A treatise on gun powder and its invention, entering into details on the substances it is composed of, the different methods of its fabrication, desiccation, graining, proving, and storing in magazines, with observations and experiments on the same. On the casting of brass guns & the formation of moulds in sand, &c. On the manner and instruments used in proving guns, &c. A description of Gover's patent gun carriage for the navy, its application to garrison use, and advantages over common carriages; and many other interesting subjects which it would be too long to enumerate. The whole terminated with a table of matters composed so as to serve as an artillery vocabulary.

The work will be illustrated by upwards of thirty-six plates, handsomely executed, with the explanations to the same, which will leave no ambiguity to the reader. The work is now in the press, and will be published in five numbers of from 120 to 150 pages each, with as much dispatch as attention to the correctness of typography and engraving will permit; each number being accompanied with six or seven plates.

Subscriptions to the above, received by CONRAD, LUCAS & CO. No. 138, Market-street. August 8. e09t
