

The Grand Vizier had gained some successes before he died. He passed the Danube at Ismail, and forced Gen. Michaelson to retire from Wallachia to Foksan and Binnick. The new administration is entirely composed of persons devoted to the Janissaries; we know not what disposition it will shew towards foreign powers. Yet some think the revolution will have no influence upon our foreign politics, because the insurgents censured the adherents of the Russian system.

The latest letters from Constantinople confirm the accounts of the desposition of Selim, but correct most of the details given in the first reports. Hitherto Mustapha has kept his promise of preserving the life of Selim. The prince is still alive, residing in the Old Seraglio.

June 28.
PACIFIC.
To the note given at Warsaw on the part of Austria on the third of April, the answer transmitted on the part of France signified that his majesty the emperor Napoleon willingly accepted the friendly intervention of Austria for the restoration of peace, so necessary to all nations. His majesty, however, expressed his fears that that power which had hitherto founded its greatness on the disputes of the continent, would find new pretences to promote disunion in the Congress which it was proposed to establish. France however, who it was well known had been forced into the war against its will, would not neglect any means which offered a hope for preventing the effusion of human blood, &c.

LONDON, July 17.
The Island of Sicily is now invested by the French, and will inevitably be added to her other conquests in that quarter. The Rochefort squadron is ready for sea; and watching an opportunity to escape.

INVASION REVIVED.
Letters from the coast state, that already very active preparations appear to be making on the heights near Bologna, for the re-establishment of an immense camp. A great number of new huts have lately been erected, all of which are painted white exhibiting to the distant spectator, a very formidable appearance. The vessels composing the grand flotilla intended for the invasion of this country are represented by no means to be in a state of decay.

Jerome Bonaparte is we hear, to be Sovereign of Hanover, and part of the Prussian possessions in Westphalia, and probably part of Hesse, with the title of Grand Duke of Hanover.

The king of Prussia is to regain all his territories as far as the Elbe; the Grand Duke of Berg is to have Hesse, as far as Hanau; and the greatest part of Westphalia, is to be added to Holland.

The Diet of Hungary has granted to the emperor a considerable peace establishment, which, in the event of war, is immediately to be raised to 150,000 men.

The Jamaica homeward bound fleet, has arrived.

Mr. Purviance has arrived from America, with the Treaty unratified. He was detained at Palmouth five days, on board the Wasp, in consequence of the indisposition of the crew, five of whom had died on the voyage.

AFFAIRS IN EGYPT.
We have official accounts from Egypt, which are by no means so gloomy as those previously received. The loss at Rosetta, instead of 1400, was only 750; and the troops at Alexandria, were in no danger of wanting provisions, having a constant supply of the best kinds.

Peace between Russia and France.
STATESMAN OFFICE,
July 15, 2 o'clock.

We have this moment received Paris papers to 5th inst. and Hamburg and Altona papers to the same date. The latter brings the important news of the Preliminaries of peace being actually signed between Russia and France. The cordiality and seeming friendship in which the two Emperors are represented as living together in the same town, make us apprehensive the interests of this country have not been much consulted in this Treaty.

STEITIN, July 2.
(At night)—THE PRELIMINARIES OF PEACE BETWEEN FRANCE AND RUSSIA ARE SIGNED.

"The two Emperors have had an interview, and reside in the same town, with their respective guards."

"This important news was received here this morning, and was brought by one of marshal Brune's Aids-de-camp. The letter does not mention the town where the interview took place, but there is every reason to believe it was at Tilsit. (Abcille du Nord, July 7.)"

TILSIT, June 25.

The conference of the two emperors of Russia and France took place yesterday, at one o'clock in the afternoon, on a raft in the Niemen, on which general Laroche, commander of the artillery of the guards had caused one pavilion to be erected for their imperial majesties, and another for their attendants. His majesty the emperor Napoleon attended by the grand duke of Berg, prince of Neuchatel, marshal Bessieres, grand marshal of the palace, Duroc, and Caulaincourt, master of the horse, proceeded to the banks of the Niemen and went on board the vessel which was to take him to the raft. At the same time the emperor Alexander, with the grand duke Constantine, general Bennigsen, general Owaroff, prince Labanoff, and his first adjutant-general Count Lieben, put off from the opposite banks.

The two vessels reached the raft at the same time; the two emperors embraced each other on leaving the vessels, and entered the pavilion prepared for them. This conference lasted about two hours; and when it was closed the attendants of the two emperors were admitted. The emperor Alexander paid many handsome compliments to the French officers who attended Napoleon, and the latter conversed a long time with the grand duke Constantine, and with general Bennigsen. Both emperors returned afterwards to their vessels.

June 26.
Last night, immediately after the conference was over, prince Labanoff arrived at the French head-quarters. A convention was concluded, that one half of the town of Tilsit is to be considered as neutral. His majesty the emperor Alexander, his retinue and guards are to take up quarters in the neutral part of the town.

The emperor of Russia intends, we understand, to dine this day with the French emperor; and it is supposed that the king of Prussia will be of the party.

Extract of a letter, dated

"LONDON, July, 15.
"The Complainer, from this port, and Philadelphia, from Liverpool, for your port in a week. The Spanish privateers are capturing American vessels; we have accounts of four captures in the last 4 days. Insurance has rose to 5 guineas. Mr. Purviance has arrived with the treaty, and many people are afraid that war will be the result of it. Stocks keep up in expectation of a general peace, but I think the latter very improbable, as France will insist on England's giving up here acquisitions in the West-Indies and South America."

A. BURR.

The Southern mail has again arrived, without intelligence from Richmond. Impatient as our readers may be, they are not more anxious to read the opinion of chief justice Marshall, than are some politicians desirous for an opportunity of attacking that great man. The democratic papers have been frequently charged with a disposition to prejudice those individuals, who may be obnoxious to their party, when the accused have been arraigned for trial. Such was the practice of too many in the case of Burr. He has been acquitted, legally, on the indictment for Treason. Not satisfied with the decision, obtained through the fair operation of the laws, which by all good citizens, ought to be acquiesced in as sacred, the "National Intelligencer" has already thrown out a hint, which, if taken, will issue in an attempt to write down the high character and fame of the Chief Justice. Certain individuals of consequence, in the present day, are not a little anxious to see the fair fame of that exalted character blasted; but the assault must be commenced in deep and hidden cunning. They may attempt to excite popular clamor against the judge, as having been partial in this case; but they are watched; their reasons for disposing of Marshall are well known.

The following is from the last "Intelligencer":

"The trial of Aaron Burr for treason, as stated in our last has been arrested by the decision of the court. Of the soundness of this decision it is premature to speak, as it is not given to the public, and may possibly present views of the subject which we have not suggested themselves to any other mind besides that of the chief justice. At such an arrestation of the ordinary course of justice, the unlearned world are, it is true, lost in astonishment. It is, however, but fair to wait for the reasons on which the opinion was founded. But it is not premature to express our regret that the full disclosure of a plot, which there is every reason to believe was of the most gigantic and alarming character has been thus smothered at the very threshold. Is the immense volume of testimony accumulated at Richmond, and which will never hereafter, perhaps, be elsewhere collected, to be closed forever? Of one hundred and thirty five witnesses, but fifteen have been examined; and of these fifteen, but a few have said anything of the direct agency of Burr. The moment he was pursued into the states of Ohio and Kentucky, and the territories, the disclosure is arrested—by whom? by A. Burr and his counsel—and the arrestation, although strenuously opposed by the counsel for the United States, is sanctioned by the court. The question forcibly presents itself—are the nation to have the door shut against that mass of testimony, which is expected of Wilkinson and the other witnesses summoned? Are they still to grope in the dark on points of vast importance which deeply implicate persons and things, and which have keenly excited the sensibility of the whole country. Is suspicion still to keep possession of the judgment seat, and usurp the authority alone due to truth? These are considerations which we will venture to predict, will most powerfully influence the public mind. The people will inquire to whom they are indebted for the suppression of facts so anxiously desired by them. They will naturally inquire why they were suppressed by Mr. Burr, unless he dreaded their disclosure; they will inquire what reasons an innocent man could have for suppressing the truth."

Important from Canada.

In a Quebec paper of August 13, we observe a proclamation laying an embargo on all "vessels wholly or partly laden with warlike stores of any denomination. The embargo is to continue until January." Another proclamation ordains that the legislative assembly of Lower Canada be convened on the 25th of September, to act upon matter concerning the state and defence of the province.

A gentleman from Quebec informs, that the British are busy in clearing the plains before that city; that they have collected there most of the cannon and military stores; and that the troops have lately received their pay to encourage them. Two Vermonters are among the persons confined at Quebec, for endeavoring to entice soldiers to desert. N. Y. paper

"A Friend to Justice," and "Petronius" are received.

Died on Saturday night last, at his lodgings in the Indian Queen Hotel, in this City, John Price, Esq. of the house of Mess. T. Junno & J. Price, of Charleston, South Carolina, most deservedly lamented.
