

Proposals
For Publishing by subscription, a Moral, Instructive, Entertaining, Periodical Work, Entitled

The Monthly Magazine

To contain 50 octavo pages, letter-press—well executed, on fine paper—with a copper-plate engraving to each volume. But if the paragon obtained be adequate to the expense, an engraving will be given with each number, which will add greatly to the beauty of the work without entangling the price. Consequently, it is expected, that the Ladies and Gentlemen of this city will be liberal in attaching their names to the subscription list, in order to enable the publishers to issue the Monthly Magazine in a style commensurate with its object, and the wish of the proprietor.

It has been usual for persons soliciting patronage for undertakings of the nature of the present, to deal extensively in promises, the neglect of which has cast a stigma on their successors not easily removed. This is what the proprietor would carefully avoid. He will take leave, just to state, that as the majority, perhaps all, of those who may see this proposal, understand the nature of the work, he esteems it unnecessary to particularize the manner in which it will be conducted, further than that it will be on the plan of the most approved periodical miscellanies in Europe; that will contain Sketches of interesting Biography, detached pieces of History, Extraordinary Productions of Nature and Art, Anecdotes, historical and humorous, in short every thing worthy of note; that at the end of each number will be given, a summary of the news of the past month; that a department will be reserved for the use of the "Muses," and that not only the assiduity of the editor, but the gratuitous and friendly assistance of several gentlemen of literary eminence, will be employed, to render it completely such a publication as the object supposes.

The price to subscribers, 50 cents each number, payable on delivery.

Subscriptions received at all the Book-Stores in the town and on the Point, at the several Paper Offices, and at the Blank Book, Book-Binders, and Stationery Store, No. 11, South street, of Callender and Willis.
