On Thursday night the wind began to blow with great violence from N. E. and continued with unabated fury all day yesterday. The tide rose to an unusual height, overflowing cellars along the river. The gale was severe at Staten Island. The U.
S. ketch Etna parted both cables at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and was beating to and fro till 7 o'clock, when Mr. Daniel Van Duzer got on board from the ferry at the risk of his life, and carried her safe into North-east harbor up the Kills, where he run her aground in a safe place. Mr.
Van Duzer by this act will no doubt be handsomely rewarded by government for saving one of the finest vessels in our navy.
The same day the brig George of New-Orleans, parted her cables and went ashore at Van Duzer's dock—not much damaged; & the schr. Maria went on shore near the public stores, considerably injured.

LATE AND IMPORTANT.
Capt. Thompson, of the ship Delaware, in the remarkable passage of 35 days from Amsterdam, informs, that just before he sailed, the news of a declaration of war on the part of Denmark against Great-Britain, had reached Amsterdam. In consequence of which, the Danish ships that had just sailed from Amsterdam, put back, and others stopped loading.

The editors of the New-York Gazette have received from Capt. Thompson, Amsterdam papers to the 26th August. From a cursory perusal of these papers, we observe that All British property has been confiscated at Copenhagen and Altona. The king of Denmark had left Copenhagen, and gone to Colding, in Jutland.
The Crown Prince had returned to Kiel, to organise the army.
That the British cruisers had taken several of the Danish vessels in the Greenland trade.
Mr. Jackson, the English envoy, left Kiel on the 8th of August, to proceed on board the English fleet in the Danish seas, for the purpose of communicating to admiral Gambier the result of his embassy; but he was detained by contrary winds till the 11th, by which means the Danes gained three days to make preparations for defence.
That the Danish ambassador had received orders from count Bernstorff, of the 19th of August, to stop the sailing of all Danish vessels from Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Maas-luis, Helvoet and Brielle.

An article from Naples of the 29th of July says, "A French squadron of three frigates and 2 brigs, have taken near Sicily, two English frigates; and it was reported, that the above squadron had sailed for the Levant."

That the marriage of Jerome Bonaparte was to take place at Paris, on the 22d of August, to Princess Catharine of Wirtemberg. He left Paris on the 19th, to meet her at Meaux, ten miles from Paris.

On the 18th of Aug. Bonaparte, (whom the Paris papers style the mighty Emperor) delivered a speech to the Senate at Paris, from which we select the following passages.
"The h use of Brandenburg, which was the first to conspire against our independence does its present existence to our friendship for the mighty emperor of the North. A French prince shall reign on the Elbe. All nations rejoice that the influence of England on the continent has been forever annihilated. I wish for a maritime peace: No desire of revenge will ever influence my determination in that respect. Nor can I indulge such a sentiment towards a nation which is the sport of parties who tear her in pieces, and mislead her concerning her true interests and those of her neighbors."

PHILADELPHIA, October 3.
Arrived, schr. Sally, Murphy P. lat Petre via Antigua, 16; coffee and sugar.

From a late London paper.
COURT OF ADMIRALTY.
Bonaparte's Blockading Decree.

An interesting question was on Wednesday decided by sir Wm. Scott, which arose out of the decree of Bonaparte, for placing this country in a state of blockade, and thus aiming an effectual blow at the commerce of neutral nations with this country. Under the decree of the blockade issued by Bonaparte, an American ship, the Sanson, had been captured by a French cruiser, and was afterwards recaptured by a British ship of war. In consequence of the recapture, a demand of salvage was made, which was resisted by the American, on the ground that the decree of blockade was not to be carried into effect against Americans, and that the vessel would have been restored to the owners by the French tribunal.

On this question sir Wm. Scott was clearly of opinion, that the owners having received real benefit by the recapture, were clearly bound to pay salvage. The decree of France placing this country in a state of blockade, had excited the astonishment of all Europe, particularly when the nature of that decree was compared with the means of its enforcement. It said that England ar-rogated to itself many maritime rights which were inconsistent with the freedom of the sea; and therefore, that every neutral who persisted in carrying on trade with England became her accomplice, and the just object of the hostility of France. The decree itself was declared to form a solemn and fundamental law of the empire, till such time as England chose to relax her claims, and recognize certain terms more compatible with the rights of other nations. The meaning of the word blockade in this decree must necessarily be the same as when applied to the blockading of a single port or harbour, and therefore the decree must clearly understood as extending to prevent all intercourse of the subjects of neutral states with this country; while, from the publicity and solemnity of the decree itself, it was fair to conclude that it would be acted upon.
The subjects of France must have necessarily considered it in this light, and must have been led to look upon all such neutral vessels as lawful prize; and all the authorities of that country were put in motion to give it effect. Such being the state of things, it was impossible not to say, that prima facie great service had been done to the American owners by the recapture.
There was nothing in the decree to distinguish the Americans from other nations, or except them from its effects. There did not appear any sort of treaty which at all modified the decree, with regard to the Americans. The French minister of marine, in his correspondence on the subject with general Armstrong, the American minister at Paris had indeed expressed it as his opinion, that the decree did not induce any alteration in the trade of neutrals. But this was not official; it was a mere opinion and introduced with "Je pense." I think so and so. His opinion was therefore only to be considered as mere sounds, signifying nothing, and was entitled to little or no attention.

General Armstrong, indeed wrote to Mr.
Lyman, the American consul in this country, that he had not heard of any capture by the French of any Americans trading with this country. My Lyman had also said, that he had heard that an American vessel with wool, from Spain to England, after being captured by the French, had been restored; but he had fairly added that he could not vouch for the particulars.

Upon the whole, there appeared nothing to distinguish this case from that of the Danish vessels, where it had been already decided, that the recaptors were entitled to salvage. It would be very hard were this country made to sustain all the disadvantages arising from the decree of the French government, and at the same time prevented from enjoying those advantages which were not of its own seeking, but which arose from its superior naval power.

Sir William Scott therefore pronounced a decree, granting salvage to the recaptors.
