The brig John, Baldwin, from Baltimore, and schr. Three-Pollies, Elliot, from Boston, arrived on Wednesday.

We re-publish the following statement from the "more impartial" American, with the greatest cheerfulness, and unselfishness; considering it a duty and a pleasure to aid the cause of truth at all times. Why should Lowry should entertain an opinion, that we were hostile to the 27th regiment? is, we apprehend, altogether inexplicable.

From the American.

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir, a very unjustifiable attack having been made on an officer (not named) of the 27th regiment, in the Federal Gazette of Tuesday evening last, I beg leave, through the medium of your more impartial paper, to state the naked fact, unaccompanied, but by one remark on the publication in question. That the tenor of the communication and the promptness with which it is given to the public, prove too clearly the hostile temper of the Gazette towards the 27th, and would give the public reason to believe that its editor would not be dissatisfied at any feasible occasion of open attack or oblique insinuation on the conduct of its officers or privates. As this transaction is to be made the subject of enquiry by a court martial, there is an additional impropriety in the communication to the Gazette as it may tend to prevent a due impression being made on the public sentiment by the decision of the competent tribunal of my regiment.

STATEMENT.

My orders were that each private should be furnished with ten rounds of blunt cartridges: According to the information I have received, it appears that a Mr. Collins, belonging to captain Miles's company, in pursuance of these orders, had recourse to a quantity of cartridges, left in his hand by a brother, now absent in Georgia; and not conceiving they were charged with ball, inadvertently put them into his cartridge box. The young man has a good character, and I believe incapable of doing an injury to any person. When the cartridges were distributed Mr. Collins said that he was already supplied; the officer, therefore passed him in the line, without any further inquiry—and as the whole quantity required ran short, Collins supplied his rear rank man with a few. The accident took place at the second fire, and upon search being made there were 7 remaining in his cartridge box. It must, therefore, be obvious that the accident did not arise from "an unpardonable negligence" of any of my officers, as prematurely and incorrectly stated in the Gazette.

With the concluding suggestions of the Gazette I heartily concur.

WM. LOWRY,
Lt. Col. Com. 27th Regt.

Oct. 15.

We are informed that the young man alluded to in the foregoing communication has undergone an examination before a court-martial, at which lieutenant James Wilson (who is also a magistrate) presided; and after a minute investigation, was honorably acquitted of all knowledge or design with respect to the balls in the cartridges.

FOR THE FEDERAL GAZETTE.

Mr. Hewes,

As the object of Anon. in submitting to the public his remarks upon the "Communication" in your paper of the 12th instant, originated solely in a desire to correct what he conceived to be a gross misstatement of facts—and as that object is attained by the disavowal of the paragraph in question by the author of the memorial, he feels no inclination either to increase that spirit of acrimony which seems to have dictated the reply of last evening, or to disturb the reputation of the paragraph in the honors with which he has been invested. The piece which gave rise to the strictures of Anon. appeared in your paper as an original communication; & as he had not seen the American of that day, he must have possessed more penetration than gentlemen seem willing to allow him, could he have even suspected so improbable a thing, as that the editor of the American would write original paragraphs for the Federal Gazette. Anon. is true, is occasionally guilty of the crying sin of retaining little scraps of Latin; but no one ever yet suspected him of claiming any pretensions to be considered a ruissard. The writer of the Communication is invited to point out those oversights of truth (as he calls them) which he charges Anon. with having uttered. Conscious of having made no unwillful misrepresentations, he will gladly meet the inquiry, and will not be ashamed, if convicted of unintentional mistake, to make the amende honorable—A generous mind will ever be more ready to acknowledge its own errors, than to detect or expose the errors of others.

ANON.

From the Boston Palladium of the 9th. Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Portland, dated Sept. 7, received this morning.

Capt. Denning, in a brig from Liverpool in 34 days, has just arrived, bringing information that the U. S. sch'r Revenge had arrived. Captain Denning brought no papers, nor reports any other information. The same letter also adds, "That the ships General Knox and America, both from Liverpool, and the ship Aurora, from Amsterdam, are now beating up the harbor."

From the Boston Centinel of the 10th. IMPORTANT—IF TRUE.

Captain Campbell who arrived here on yesterday from Passamaquoddy, (Schoedick) informs us, that before he sailed, he learnt from a gentleman of respectability of Schoedick, that the British express cutter, the Sylvia, of 10 guns, which carried out admiral Berkeley's dispatches, had returned to Halifax in the short passage of 20 days, bringing the interesting intelligence, that all the points in dispute between the United States and Great-Britain had been amicably settled; and that a cessation of hostilities had taken place between England and France.

Captain Campbell sailed from Schoedick on Sunday last. The news arrived there from Halifax on the Friday preceding, in Halifax papers. It was common talk on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and occasion of much joy. The particulars were related to captain C. by Mr. William Pike, captain Shubael Downes, squires Porter, Fink and Brewer, Mr. Andrews, and many others.

The shortness of the passage was commented on. Such are the reported particulars. Friday being the 2d, allowing the news to have been 6 days from Halifax to Schoedick, only 1 day in Halifax, and the 20 days passage, it could have left England no later than the 5th September—only two days later than the Portland arrival from Liverpool. It is highly probable there is a chapter of mistake somewhere; and that either the armistice between Russia and France, or the discontinuance of the embargo in England, or some other old event, has been mistaken for news. The report we are confident, as stated by capt. C. was current at Schoedick; but the news is too bulky, and the channel too roundabout, for entire credence.

By Divine Permission, a Chority sermon will be delivered on Sunday morning next, (at the usual house) in the New Jerusalem Temple; for the benefit of the Imperial charity school in this city. The benevolent nature and effects of such institutions, will, it is presumed, ensure a full house and a liberal collection. Oct. 15.

Mr. Webster.

It appears by a publication in the Federal Gazette of the 13th inst. signed W. H. Webster, that some remarks on this gentleman's manner of singing and acting has given him deep offence. While Beatrice, to whom his observations are directed, thinks that wanton criticism should never be indulged, she must consider herself entitled to the right of exercising her judgment freely on every object heretofore acknowledged within the pale of criticism. Among these are theatrical performances and performers. If Mr. Webster has suffered from unjust criticism, he will necessarily rise above it; if, on the other hand, judges and men of taste have formed the same opinion as Miss Beatrice, her advice to him is that he should endeavor to improve by it, instead of wasting his time in abusing a lady.

There is another right which Beatrice claims, that of conducting the Observer upon principles of the most perfect independence, if she has ventured upon a difficult and arduous task, her friends know how to appreciate her reasons for undertaking it, but in the most solemn and unequivocal terms she declares, that no person, Friend or Enemy, has she ever yet solicited, personally or by letter to become a subscriber. The public will therefore judge of her surprise to find it asserted by Mr. Webster, that he had received a letter from her, dated the 2d of October in which she says she proposed to contribute to his use the pages of the Observer for five dollars. Mr. Webster regrets that he has lost the letter which contains this proposal, and suggests if there are those who doubt his veracity, that he will "make affidavit." Beatrice regrets also that so singular an application should not have been thought worth preserving, and that the curious must depend for a knowledge of its contents upon Mr. Webster's recollection of its purport, and the doubting upon his affidavit. This neglect too is the more extraordinary, as Miss Beatrice, in the Observer of the 20th of June last, speaking of his performance at Mr. Nenniger's concert, says "that it really is to be desired that he would not distort his features with the horrible grimaces he makes whilst singing—and that in his villa he would not assume the appearance of gorging his throat with his notes, nor make his transitions so sudden and unequal. We have observed him on the stage as well as in the present instance, and in viewing the contortions of his body and the contraction of his muscles (when he would astonish the natives by the wonder of his skill) our imagination has always presented us the agreeable idea of a man laboring under the operation of a strong Emetic. That the known and acknowledged writer of these remarks should offer to become the champion of the gentleman who was their object, is so original a circumstance that it is really a matter of surprise. Mr. Webster should have been so careless in preserving its proof. The world will judge how far an affidavit could establish its authenticity. Octob. 15.
